Transcripts Received At N.E. Junior College

By S. S. Sargent, Dean

Transcripts from the following students from Tishomingo county have come to our desk during the past week.

John N. Thomas, Iuka high school; Jimmie Crane, Iuka high school; Shirley Brown, Iuka high school; Marion Hill, Paden high school, Paden.

Beginning with the approaching registration, all sophomores at Northeast Junior college will be assigned advisors. On arrival at the college they will, therefore, report to the dean for this assignment and for advice relative to first semester load.

The assigned advisors will make a tentative schedule to be approved by each professor before student brings back to Dean for final approval.

Estimated Size of Freshman Class

From present indications the freshman class will be ten to fifteen percent above last year's enrollment. From the number of transcripts already received, it appears that the freshman enrollment alone will be approximately two hundred.

Transcripts and applications from boys and girls from all over Northeast Mississippi and from four states other than Mississippi have been received.

Plans for enrollment are being rushed to completion.

Final Reminder

All students who have not had high school transcripts sent to us should see to it immediately to avoid delay in registration.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bonds and Mike, of Ole Miss, spent a few days with Mrs. Bonds' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Beard.

Bud Ross Accused In Death Of Luther George

Luther George, who was found lying unconscious on the jail floor in Belmont last Thursday night about 9:30 died Sunday night in a hospital in Memphis.

According to Sheriff W. T. Dexter, a warrant has been sworn out for the arrest of Bud Ross, night watchman for the town of Belmont, on a charge connected with the death of Luther George.

(As we go to press we have learned from Sheriff Dexter that Mr. Ross gave himself up about 8:40 Wednesday night.)

Mr. George was arrested last Thursday afternoon about 4 o'clock supposedly on a charge of public drunkenness. He was carried to the Belmont jail where he was later found lying unconscious on the floor. There is a question of whether or not foul play was involved in the victim's death.

Funeral services were held Tuesday morning at the Golden Methodist church with the Rev. Wilson Ray, pastor, and Rev. John L. Hallmark of Florence, Ala., officiating. Burial was in Ridge cemetery with Deaton funeral home of Belmont direct.

The deceased was 26 years old. He was born in Golden and had spent most of his life there. However, he had spent the past few months in Savannah, Tenn., with his father, Grady George, it is reported.

Beside his father he is survived by his mother, Mrs. Cloe George, Golden; two brothers, Leon of Golden, and Charles who is serving in the armed forces.

neutral thus far in the presidential race, ventures the opinion that our national political picture has shadings other than sharp black and white or even objective grey.

Republican colorings, after 20 years of White House inexperience seem to be largely green, with lingering traces of Taft purple blended against the gold of MacArthur's sunset.

On the opposite wall, the Democratic mural shows motley mixtures of Fair Deal pinks and State Department reds, with somber overtones of FEPC browns and deep State Right blues.

BREACH OF ETIQUETTE

Our favorite uncle, now farming near Batesville, like to tell this incident of his youthful years when he was growing up in (then) rough-and-ready Neshoba County.

Attending a Saturday night dance near Philadelphia, he was prancing merrily to the fiddler's reel when a free-for-all fight started. Somebody shot out the light as the fur began to fly.

Being a lone wolf not mad at anybody, Uncle headed for the door but a pair of powerful arms seized him in the pitch blackness and began giving him what-for.

After absorbing a terrific mauling, Uncle lashed out in desperation with a savage right that floored his unseen assailant.

There was a brief pause, then a shrill and pitiful wail.

"Oh my God! He hit a Lady."

Thomas G. Abernethy, newcomer to the first congressional district, defeated veteran legislator John Rankin in the race for U. S. Representative in this week's first Democratic primary. Unofficial returns over the district gave Abernethy 26,843 votes to 20,550 for Rankin.

Here in Tishomingo county the vote was much closer with Mr. Rankin taking the county by the small margin of 78 votes. By checking the table printed on this page it will be noted that Mr. Rankin gained his plurality in the rural precincts. Mr. Abernethy carried the Iuka precincts and Rutledge and Golden precincts.

Senator Stennis piled up an easy victory over his opponent, William Davis, an undertaker of Collins, Miss. The unofficial vote for the state was for Stennis 164,000 to 21,027 for Davis. The Tishomingo county count for this office was: Stennis 1945; Davis 408.

In the statewide referendum on local liquor option the unofficial returns for the state were: for county option 73,484; against county option 120,145. Here in our home county the vote was 447 for local option to 2169 against local county option, or almost five to one. Of the total 82 counties in the state 15 voted for county option.

The result of this referendum is a mandate to the state legislature to tighten up the liquor laws.

To All the Citizens of Tishomingo County, Mississippi

We, the undersigned, who signed the Petition asking Honorable Hugh White, Governor of the State of Mississippi, to grant a pardon to W. C. Tyson, who was convicted in the Circuit Court of Tishomingo County, Mississippi, of robbery with fire arms and was sentenced to life imprisonment, have today telegraphed to Governor Hugh White withdrawing our Petition for that pardon.

Therefore, we hereby notify you that we have withdrawn our Petition for pardon of W. C. Tyson and hereby state that when we signed the Petition for the pardon of W. C. Tyson, we were misinformed about the matter and we were under the impression that the Waddell family had no objection to a full pardon being granted to W. C. Tyson.

However, after investigation, we have learned that the Waddell family is opposed to that pardon being granted, and therefore, we have withdrawn our Petition to Governor Hugh White on this date for that pardon.

Sincerely yours,

The Statesman

Lesson for August 31, 1952

A POLITICIAN is a man who goes into politics as a man goes into any game—to win. He wants office, wants people to vote for him. Popularity is his stock in trade. A statesman, on the other hand, is not remembered for the number of votes he commanded, nor for the number of times he was elected, nor for the particular titles he held. A statesman's claim to fame is not based on what he did for himself, but on what he did for his country. That is why a "statesman is a dead politician." Some time has to go by, before it can be finally said whether any particular politician's career was good for his country or not.

Achieving Unity
DAVID, King of Israel, has been dead long enough now so that we can with great assurance call him a statesman. We saw a few weeks ago (Aug. 10 and 17) that Saul faced much the same problems that face nations today, but failed to solve them, largely because he was the wrong kind of man. David had the same problems; but he solved them.

We must remember that David's times were a thousand years before Christ, so of course he was no Christian. Nevertheless, looking back at his achievements, history can say, "Well done! Here lived a man who had what it took to lead his nation to have and to be what it needed to have and to be at that time."

What Israel needed to become a strong nation were unity and security. At Saul's death these were lacking, and of course that spelled national weakness. The split between Judah and the other tribes had never been healed. David secured the unity of the nation in a dramatic way: he captured the city of Jerusalem which had been in enemy hands for hundreds of years, and made that city, for the first time, the capital of Israel. He built his palace there (Saul's had been at Gibeah), he brought the ark there (see lesson for Sept. 14), and intended building a temple which would be the central shrine for the entire nation. Through creating this new and centrally located capital, David achieved political, military, religious and sentimental unity all at once.

Some Wars Are Not in Vain
AS FOR national security, there are three kinds of it and David developed all of them. First there is military security. The only way to get it, for David, was to beat down the armies that had been beating the Israelites.

It is a blood-stained story; but still the question is a fair one: If David had lost all the battles he won, what would have become of Israel? They would have gone the way of the Hittites and the Gergashites— if any one knows where that is. A few scraps of pottery, perhaps, some fragments of ruined walls, something for professors of ancient history to dig up and wonder about—that is what Israel would have come down to, if David's wars had not succeeded.

Other Kinds of Security
ANOTHER kind of security is commercial. A nation cut off from trade with its neighbors is doomed to be a poor nation, even perhaps a beggar nation. Out of the mass of proper names in these chapters about David's kingdom, four are specially meaningful: Edom and Tyre and Damascus and Hamath. The three latter were great commercial and transportation centers. Edom, with its border on the Red Sea, gave Israel for the first time a seaport on deep water, with all the possibilities that involved.

The reign of David's successor was to be one of unprecedented prosperity and international good will; but it was David's statesmanlike policies that made the prosperity possible.

The third kind of security is more internal, and more a matter of the spirit than of the sword, more of the mind than of money. It is the national security which can exist only where there is a united and unifying loyalty on the part of the citizens. David had the rare gift which a politician uses for selfish ends, a statesman for the good of his country: the ability to make friends out of potential enemies.

AIRPLANE TERMED INDISPENSABLE IN DAILY LIFE OF NEARLY EVERY MISSISSIPPIAN

Editor's Note.
Following is another of the series of articles prepared by the State Aeronautics Commission designed to broaden the knowledge and interest of Mississippians in aviation. Another article will follow next month.

The tremendous progress recorded by aviation during the past 25 years has made the airplane an almost indispensable factor in the everyday life of nearly every Mississippian.

Mr. Average Citizen goes about his daily chores oblivious of the importance of the airplane to him as an individual, but if it were suddenly removed from his life he would find his activities considerably and unpleasantly altered.

A quarter of a century ago the airplane meant little more than a luxurious mode of transportation, a means of more rapid movement of mails and an instrument of looking for aerial cirrus for state and county fair crowds.

Developments in aerodynamics during the past 25 years have broadened and expanded the use of airplanes manifold. Its uses seem almost limitless as it enters one new field after another and quickly makes its presence absolutely necessary.

There are approximately 750 airplanes engaged in private operations of one type or another in Mississippi today. That, of course, does not include the three dozen or so airlines daily serving Mississippi's traveling public.

Pipe line and power companies lean heavily on the airplane for patrol duties. The United Gas Pipe Line Company owns its own planes which fly regular schedules looking for costly pipe line leaks, easily spotted from the air by the change in the color of vegetation caused by the escaping gas.

The planes are equipped with a two-way radio over which news of a leak can be transmitted to a ground station and a repair crew quickly dispatched to the scene.

Power companies and other pipe line firms contract with private operators for line patrol service. The value of the airplane to power companies was dramatically illustrated during the paralyzing snow, ice and sleet storm the latter part of February, 1951.

Lines sagging under the weight of the ice snapped poles like matchsticks, disrupting service throughout the state. Almost before the snow stopped falling planes were busy spotting the major breaks. Their work quickened resumption of service by many hours, according to company officials.

Their work was of great importance to the many industries dependent on electricity for power as well as the thousands of residents dependent on electric current in their homes.

Aerial mapping, a highly important adjunct to agriculture, is another work of the airplane. Every county agent's office today has an aerial map of the county, thanks to the Wright Brothers' invention.

Airplanes frequently perform errands of mercy. The lives of a number of Mississippians have been saved by the quick transportation of a critically ill patient to a medical center or by the quick dispatch of medical supplies to a stricken person or community. The above photograph shows a doctor and nurse awaiting the arrival by air of a patient.

The entire state has been mapped aerially, contributing materially to flood control and acreage control work together with timber measurements and many other projects.

The airplane also has its uses in the field of advertising. Planetown banners, sky writing and loud speakers mounted on planes carry advertising messages to vast areas.

Airplanes are advantageously employed in political campaigns to advertise rallies, drop handbills and carry candidates from one speaking engagement to another.

Forestry patrol is another important work of the airplane. The State Forestry Commission contracts for air patrols during the fire season and several companies with large timber holdings depend solely on aerial patrol for fire protection.

The Mississippi Highway Patrol operates its own plane, which it uses to transport personnel, control traffic by spotting congested areas before and after football games and other gatherings and to assist in manhunts. Its plane is credited with saving the life of a patrolman, shot and left dying by two criminals at an isolated spot near Vicksburg. The plane spotted the patrolman's car and dispatched help in time to save his life.

Airplanes are frequently utilized for mercy and emergency missions. Numerous instances are on record where lives were saved by air transportation of patients to hospitals or medical supplies to stricken persons.

Executive flying also has come into its own. A number of companies maintain planes for the use of their executives, permitting more frequent visits to various plants and branches. Nearly all major oil and gas companies operating in Mississippi use their own planes, as do many contractors who desire to keep in touch with widely separated jobs and replace broken equipment quickly. Airplane charter service is available at nearly all Mississippi airports and the Mississippi River Commission utilizes its own plane for its flood control work throughout the Mississippi Valley.

The Mississippi Geological Commission operates its own helicopter, which it employs in soil erosion studies and in searching for oil deposits.

The airplane is important to the activities of many sportsmen. It is used for fishing on the Gulf Coast and also for duck and goose hunting along the sand bars of the Mississippi River.

Group flying has become popular in recent years. Air tours are conducted as a means of promoting private flying. Two functions performed by the Civil Air Patrol are designed to make young people more air-minded and to search and rescue work for the air force as a part of its civilian defense duties.

The Flying Farmers, a group dedicated to the job of increasing agricultural uses of the airplane is very active in Mississippi. There also is the Confederate Air Force, in which nobody has a rank less than a colonel and which holds its annual reunion at Vicksburg.

Private pilots must be certificated by the Civil Aeronautics Administration after passing flight examinations. Those licensed to carry passengers must have the airworthiness of airplanes checked annually and those who carry passengers for hire after each 100 hours of flying time.

General aviation, which covers all phases of flying other than the airlines, is pushing steadily ahead, seeking and entering new fields despite curtailment in civilian plane output as a result of defense requirements.

will make more clear profit per acre from one field of my sericea than I'll make from any other crop on my farm. I like sericea pasture and hay; I believe I and I'm going to plant more next spring."

Mr. Ward Wimbish says; "I have grown sericea for several years and find that during good crops years, fertilized sericea will produce more than 2 tons of good hay per acre; during dry years, it will furnish hay and grazing when other plants dry up. Of course it will not produce nearly as much hay or pasture during dry years as it will when there is plenty of moisture, but I have never had a complete failure on my sericea. I believe that most farmers of this county could profitably use some of their land for sericea.

"I also like Bahia grass. I planted some of it this spring the same day I planted some sericea; I got a fair stand and it seems to be standing the drought as well, if not better, than sericea. I plan to plant more sericea and more Bahia next year."

Mr. Claude Norton had this to say about sericea: "The greatest trouble in this county is there isn't enough sericea. I don't see how I could do without it. I have both kudza and sericea. I like both, but I believe sericea is easier to handle than kudza. In my opinion, sericea will stand more grazing than kudza, but I think either can be killed out by over-grazing or cutting too often for hay."

(Sericea should be mowed low first cutting, and higher each succeeding cutting to prevent injury to plants.)

Mr. B. C. Fowler of Belmont and many other farmers of the county would probably say Amen to what these three men have said.

The Commissioners of the Tennessee River Soil Conservation District ask the farmers of Tishomingo County to study their situation and if it seems at all practical, plant some sericea on their farms next spring so as to gain some experience in growing and managing this crop.

is getting near the time when folks in your family are transferring from warm weather, short-sleeved sport shirts to long-sleeved, cooler-weather shirts. And as you check the supply of school shirts for Junior and Dad's long-sleeved dress and work shirts, you may find that you need to buy some to give them the number they need.

As you select and buy mens shirts, look at the labels. Be sure that all parts are pre-shrunk. This label "pre-shrunk" is a rather indefinite term sometimes, so look to see if you can find a label statement something like this: Will Not Shrink More Than Two Per cent.

A good quality business shirt has firm, smooth fabric with a high yarn count: all parts pre-shrunk; permanent color, design or pattern matched at collar, front pleat, pocket, well matched, flat, sharp collar points; close, even stitches about 20 to the inch even clear smooth. 4-hole pearl buttons, sewed on with many stitches, firm near bottom-holes, large enough to slip over the button easily, made with highly mercerized thread; full cut.

A good quality work shirt has firmly woven, strong smooth fabric with no sizing; high yarn count, all parts preshrunk, permanent color, close even stitching—about 16 stitches to the inch; triple-stitched seams; pearl or composition buttons, firm buttonholes, near collar, interlined collar.

When you buy a shirt, see if the label tells whether the manufacturer guarantees it against shrinkage and against fading. If you buy a colored shirt, look for color fast labels. To be really colorfast, the material must stand sun test as well as the water test, and must not fade when wet with perspiration.

If the label says full cut, you can be reasonably sure that there is enough material in the shirt to make it fit well and feel comfortable.

OVERWEIGHT

Overweight is one of the most serious malnutrition problems.

The same diet is required for the prevention of overweight as for the cure—except it is not so rigid. Food should be simply prepared, using small amounts of fat, butter and cream. Hold bread and cereals in narrow limits. Use potatoes in place of breads and cereals for satiety value. Milk is always to be permitted—even though it is necessary to use skim milk.

The custom of omitting breakfast is a mistake. Eat three meals a day that are reasonably restricted and simply planned with the due regard to ordinary nutrition.

Correct dietary habits as eating rich foods, too much bread and butter or two many sweets.

If you think you are overweight, see your doctor before you start reducing. Let him tell you if you need to lose weight.

Activity and the amount of food eaten are the two factors that determine weight. When one of these balances the other, weight will remain constant.

A shaky reputation usually is built on things a person is going to do.

WEEKLY NEWS LETTER

by W. F. Bond, Director of Public Relations
State Department of Public Welfare

State Commissioner of Public Welfare

The State Commissioner of Public Welfare serves as the executive and administrative officer of the State Welfare Board. Under the rules and regulations of a federal-state merit system he appoints all personnel to such positions and at such salaries as may be fixed by the State Welfare Board. The governor of the state has to approve the appointment of the county welfare agent. No welfare worker may be discharged except for cause as provided under the merit system. Under federal and state laws neither the Commissioner nor any employee in the State Welfare Program is allowed to take any part in politics other than to vote. The Commissioner is an ex-officio member of a committee that recommends a list of names to the governor for appointment on the State Parole Board.

Mr. J. T. Copeland, Agricultural Engineer from State College, spent three days last week in Tishomingo County holding a terracing and land use school. The school was attended by 45 interested farmers. A letter of invitation was sent out to the entire mailing list of the farmers of the county. The school was held at the Tishomingo school.

Mr. Copeland pointed out that more than two billion dollars annually were lost in the U. S. in plant food from soil erosion, not saying anything about the valuable top soil that is washed away into the stream beds, filling the streams and causing serious floods.

Mr. Copeland started the school in the classroom by discussing erosion symptoms such as slope changes, shallow soil spots, dwafier growth of the plants, bold spots, fingers or rills and gullies. Then terrace layout, location, grade and direction were discussed along with procedure of handling the farm level. Terrace lines were run in the fields for practical demonstrations and terraces were built with tractor equipment on the farm of Ernest P. Howell, two miles west of Tishomingo.

Mr. Copeland stated that steep land should not be terraced with the idea of continuous row cropping but the steep land should be put in trees, kudzu, sericea, Bermuda and lespedeza on some other type of permanent sod because steep bar soils will wash 117 times faster than the same soil would if it is kept in a good thrifty permanent sod.

The second day of the annual farm tour started at Tishomingo and stopped at the farm of Leon Blunt. We saw corn that the group estimated would produce 85 bushels per acre even with the extreme drought. The group saw the best system of pasture fence sand cross fences of any farm visited. The post were pine that had been treated with Penta and waste motor oil. Cross fences to divide the pastures up is very important to good pasture management. Alternate grazing makes it possible for one section of the pasture to be grazed off while another section can be fertilized if necessary and get a rest and good growth.

More farms have a thick stand of pines that need thinning. The trees from three to six inches in diameter make good post when treated. No livestock farm is complete without good fences.

Pine post properly treated will last twenty years or longer. The group was shown a treated post that had been in a fence on C. E. Morton's farm for four years. The post was as sound from one end to the other as the day it was put in the ground. Another post that was not treated had been lying on top of a pile of post for four years and it was rotted so completely that it broke in the middle when picked up.

The next place visited was the farm of Erskin Deaton where the group saw some of the finest Hereford cattle in the country. The herd bull was valued at $25,000.00. Mr. Deaton had some good grazing of lespedeza, dallis and Bermuda grass and a nice field of sericea that had been grazed and a hay crop cut and was ready to graze again or left for another good hay crop if not needed for grazing.

At Mr. Talmadge Finch's farm was visited to see a field of Sudan grass. The Sudan had been cut for hay and was coming back in a hurry since the rain. It will furnish grazing or hay. The Sudan field was the only stop on Mr. Finch's farm. Sudan grass and Pearl Millet are becoming very popular for supplementary summer grazing when the permanent type pastures get short and over grazed.

The group then drove up Highway 25 to George R. Cole's place to see some 100 bushel an acre corn. The corn had been fertilized with 600 pounds of 6-8-8 under the corn and 300 pounds of ammonium nitrate as a side dressing. Mr. Cole stated that, "It pays to fertilize corn with plenty of fertilizer under it and use plenty of nitrate as a side dressing." The group stopped in a grove of young pines where Mr. Montford, Extension Forester from State College, discussed the importance of pine trees on land that was too steep or too thin to cultivate. Mr. Montford stated that pines should be set 6 1/2 to 7 feet apart so they would grow tall with about one third of the length of the tree in top. He also stated that he had millions of acres of that we had millions of acres of not returning any profit to the owner where if set to pines these acres would be returning a nice profit in 12 to 15 years.

We then made a stop at Pat Sappington's place to see some good corn, pasture and some good white face cattle. The cattle were plenty fat for choice stakes and had all the Bermuda, dallis grass and lespedeza they could eat and then some to spare in case the other grass was grazed down.

The group then stopped at the farm of Fred Parrish where they saw Sericea on some very thin eroding hillsides. A hay crop had been cut from one field and one look was convincing that Sericea will produce hay and grazing on thin land and will also control soil washing. Sericea is also an excellent crop to seed in terrace outlets or V-type ditches to keep the soil from washing.

The last place visited before lunch was the farm of Zed Osborn where the group saw some of the best corn in the county. Zed tries to keep up with his boys in corn production. William Howard and Clifton Earl have been outstanding 4-H Club corn growers for several years. Clifton Earl led the county in 1950 with a yield of 183 bushels on one acre. He also won the State 4-H Corn Contest that year. That is the highest yield we have any record of in Tishomingo County. The group did not go all over the Osborn farm as they were getting hot, tired and hungry. We then started for Midway where the fine picnic dinner of catfish, fried chicken and all the trimmings were served. The ladies of the Midway community had brought in an abundance of the finest pies and cakes any man ever tasted.

After lunch the group wound up the tour at the farm of Mr. L. E. Skinner. There the group saw a broiler house that houses 5000 broilers. A batch is put off about every ten to twelve weeks. We saw a nice herd of 20 milch cows that are milked in a Grade A milking parlor, the only one like it in the county. Mr. Skinner had pasture to let. He was a close second in the county pasture contest. The farm is so well seeded to pasture crops that there was no soil washing off this farm. The cows were grazing on Dallis Grass that had been grazed stock pond. A field of Sericea was ready for grazing near by if needed or a hay crop. Of particular interest to the group was a six acre field of Sudan Grass that had been grazed down while the pastures were getting a rest. The Sudan was back to a fine growth ready for grazing again but it will likely be cut for hay since there is plenty of good grazing on this farm to more than supply the herd until after frost. Mr. Skinner did not build this pasture in one or two years. Some of it has been over 12 years in the making. He says, "It takes seeding, fertilizing, mowing and management to make a pasture."

COTTON

The pay-off time for Mississippi cotton farmers is here now. It is harvest time and farmers who followed the "7-Steps to More Cotton - More Money" are about to harvest their crop.

Don't lose money by improper harvesting. Here are some rules for proper harvesting. They can mean money to you.

1. Pick seed cotton early. Highest grades are obtained before October 15th of each year due to less weathering of the seed cotton up to that time.

2. Pick only fully-opened, fluffy bolls. This way you get more mature and uniform fibers.

3. Leavy faulty, immature and insect-damaged locks. These can lower the value of your sample and lose money for you.

Keep foreign matter out of your cotton. Defoliate when the top bolls are 25 to 30 days old and defoliate just enough to stay ahead of the pickers. Hand pick grassy cotton.

Pick your cotton clean and keep it clean. Do not mix trashy cotton with clean cotton. Do not tramp cotton as any time.

Pick your cotton dry and keep it dry. If you must pick while wet, dry it on a tarpaulin before taking it to the gin.

If boll rot is attacking your cotton, defoliate and save the larger bottom and middle bolls. You may have boll rot on tall rank cotton.

Your ginner is just as anxious as you are to turn out a good sample at the gin. No matter how much modern equipment the ginner has and no matter how he tries to give you a good sample, he cannot do it with a load of wet, trash, tramped cotton.

A five hundred pound bale is plenty large enough and is easier handled in the press than an over weight bale. You will profit by protecting and caring for your cotton before you take it to the gin.

SHOULD I POISON MY COTTON NOW? YES, IF:

1. Cotton, green, growing, squaring and blooming.

2. Bolls are less than 21 days old.

3. 10% to 15% of squares on the plant punctured.

4. Weevils found in bloom—look at cotton everyday.

5. Quit poisoning when you have set your crop. Blooms to August 20 require 60 days until open bolls. Consider average frost date November 3 in determining safe bolls.

SHOULD I POISON MY COTTON NOW? NO, IF:

1. Cotton is mature, no blooming, yellow cost over fired.

2. Defoliate if necessary and pick before bad weather sets in.

APPLICATIONS:

Weevils are tougher, stalks are large. Us 15 lb dust per acre per application. Use 1/3 less water in making spray dilutions.

WHAT TO USE:

Any poison on hand will do the job. Short killing materials such as 3-5-0, or aldrin should be applied every 2 or 3 days.

Dieldrin and toxaphene can be applied every 4 to 5 days.

POULTRY

Before you house your pullets, select the ones to keep. There is no use in saving an inferior bird. Select those that are strong, vigorous and healthy.

Select birds that have good heads, well developed wattles and combs and clear, bright eyes. Make sure that the birds you keep have long, deep wide bodies.

Cull out all pullets that are weak, and show signs of disease. Do not save those that have long shallow heads or beefy heads, shrunk wattles or dull eyes.

Do not house pullets with old hens if you can help it. Older hens may pass on diseases and parasites to the younger birds. Too, they may fight the pullets and keep them from feed and water.

Make sure that the laying house is clean and that you allow plenty of floor space per bird, four square feet of floor space per hen. Spray roosts and nests with waste motor oil, getting it well into the cracks and put in new nest material and plenty of shavings on the floor. Shavings should be six inches deep on the floor.

Taxes and Your Telephone

As a telephone subscriber you may be interested to know that a considerable part of the money you pay for telephone service goes right out in taxes!

Last year Southern Bell's Mississippi tax bill was $3,404,000. In addition, we collected from Mississippi subscribers and passed on to the federal government $3,941,000 in excise taxes.

Taxes on the Company's Mississippi operations plus telephone excise taxes on Mississippi telephone customers last year totaled $7,345,000 and averaged $32.45 per telephone, or $2.70 each month.

Taxes are necessary... the government can't run without them... But they do mount up!

HARVEST DAMAGED
CROPS AT ONCE

State College, Miss.—Harvest of drouth-damaged corn and hay crops at once to save remaining feed value, urge agricultural specialists of Mississippi State College.

Plant more fall grazing if rain falls by August 15 was the second major recommendation made by a group called together by Dr. Lyle, dean and director, College of Agriculture of the State College.

severely damaged hay crops have been most all damaged throughout all of Mississippi by the drouth, which is reaching a state of disaster, Dr. Lyle said.

"The shortage of feed will be so great during the coming fall and winter, all possible forage must be saved at this time," he declared.

"We will recommend to the State Agricultural Mobilization Committee at the next meeting that the United States Department of Agriculture be requested to declare Mississippi a disaster area, making the state eligible for disaster loans and for reduced rates on hay and other feed shipments," he stated.

Some feeding value from ruined corn can be salvaged by one of several methods, specialists pointed out.

Put into the silo immediately damaged corn which is near the tasseling stage or beyond. A farmer with no silo but with sufficient acreage of corn may find a trench or temporary silo a good investment.

If silage is not practical, feed the corn direct as green fodder, or shock the corn and feed after it has been cured.

Mow mature Johnson grass meadows, even though the hay may be of low quality. Besides saving some feed, this gets the old growth off so that a good new crop may be made if rain come.

Tift sudan and pearl millet can be planted as late as August 15 and make good growth before the first killing frost if enough rain falls by that time, the specialists stated. The same applies to cowpeas, although this crop generally produces less hay and of a kind that is hard to handle.

"Unless Mississippi plant a record-breaking acreage of small grains and grass-legume combinations for fall and winter grazing, much of the progress in livestock will be lost," Dr. Lyle declared.

Provide one to two acres of fall grazing per animal unit for milk producing cows and grow-

MISSISSIPPI POWER & LIGHT COMPANY
HONORS PASTURE CONTEST WINNERS

Climaxing the Annual Pasture Improvement Contest, sponsored yearly by the Mississippi Power & Light Company, approximately 200 of the State's agricultural and business leaders packed the Edwards Hotel Ballroom at a luncheon here in Jackson on Thursday to honor the 23 county finalists and the three top cash winners in the 44-county contest.

J. V. Lewis of Glen Allen, Royce Mitchell of Tylertown, and Van Minton of Brookhaven, were named as the first, second, and third place pasturemen respectively, and were presented cash awards of $250, $150 and $100 by Rex I. Brown, Mississippi Power & Light Company President. An additional 28 awards of merit, the "Pasture Man's Book" were presented to all county winners, previously selected by local coordinating councils.

M. P. Moore, nationally-known Mississippi in the agricultural and cattle worlds, delivered the main address at the occasion, and his straight-forward challenges, hurled at Mississippians to alert themselves to the state's unlimited possibilities, met with hearty approval from the packed audience of business and agricultural leaders from over the state.

Scorning too much out-of-state ownership of Mississippi land, the speaker pleaded with business and agricultural leaders to join together, eliminating "shade tree aristocracy" and "leaditis" and push toward developing Mississippi for Mississippians.

The colorful planter and cattleman drew upon his own past activities, knowledge gained by constant travel and observation of what other states are doing, and, using his own phraseology, "pocket book experiences", to present a thrilling possible picture of Mississippi's future cattle business.

Speaking with a conviction that comes from confidence and faith in the state's future, Speaker Moore viewed the land and cattle values alike in Mississippi to be on the upward trend, with no depreciation in the near or distant future.

Wishing that the word "temporary" could be eliminated from every Mississippi Cattleman's vocabulary and thinking as well, the highly successful rancher advised all pasturemen to do a thorough job from the beginning when starting their herds by using a ten-year yardstick and approximately $35 per acre.

Speaker Moore lauded the Mississippi Power & Light Company for taking such vital leadership in annually sponsoring this pasture improvement program, which is a part of their over-all agricultural and industrial development program, which is aimed at encouraging and promoting pasture improvement and better land use Receiving their cash awards from Rex I. Brown, Mississippi Power & Light Company President (right) are the three top Pasture Improvement Contest winners, J. V. Lewis of Glen Allen (shaking hands with Mr. Brown) took first place in the contest and an award of $250. Royce Mitchell of Tylertown (center), second place and $150, and Van Minton of Brookhaven (left) taking third place and $100.

M. P. "Hot" Moore, nationally-known cattleman, Mississippi's Agricultural Man-of-the-Year in 1951, and owner of Circle M Ranch, Senatobia, delivered the main address at the Mississippi Power & Light Company Pasture Improvement Contest luncheon given in Jackson honoring 28 county contestants.

Cleared corn land will be a good place to plant fall grazing, since some of the fertilizer applied for the corn may not have been used because of the drouth.

See the local county agent for exact fertilizer, seeding and other recommendations to fall grazing crops.

A detailed report of drouth recommendations for farmers will be made by State College to the State Agricultural Mobilization Committee, which is composed of all agricultural agencies and groups concerned with farming, Dr. Lyle said.
