WINS FIRST PLACE IN ESSAY CONTEST SPONSORED BY Tishomingo County Farm Improvement Association on "THE ADVANTAGES OF FARMER COOPERATIVES".

THE ESSAY FOLLOWS:

Strong cooperatives cement rural communities into stronger, more vigorous, and more prosperous areas. This fact needs to be appreciated in these days of economic uncertainty. The professional and business men, as well as farmers, need to recognize this because their success is tied to the prosperity or poverty of those around them.

Cooperatives give country people a stake in their own home towns. Farmers become interested in the welfare of the town and its problems when they have their own business establishments there.

If there are savings made by cooperatives, they stay right in the community to help the farmer buy such things as food, clothing, furniture, amusement, and insurance from local business institutions. Community projects are also benefited from the savings. To my mind, one of the great advantages of cooperatives is that it protects the family size farm. It would be impossible for many small farmers to operate efficiently without cooperation and their farms would increasingly fall under control of large operators. As it is, the small farmers joined together with neighbors, both large and small, can buy as cheaply and market as economically as can the large corporate firms.

Better grading, packaging, and standardization have all been promoted by cooperatives. Cooperatives let farmers know what consumers want and encourage them to produce what the market needs.

Cooperatives make competition and this brings about progress. The Farmer is given a chance to voice his opinions in his own business affairs by being a member of the cooperatives. This makes the idea of democracy mean something to farmers. If the small operator does not get help through cooperatives action, he will turn more and more to the Government for assistance.

All of the above mentioned advantages boil down to this:—Co-ops are good for the farmer, therefore they are good for his community and the place where he does his trading. The community's prosperity rises and falls with that of farmers.

The greatest assets of cooperatives is their democratic form of organization. When you belong to an efficient cooperative you are supporting the democratic idea—that people together can solve their economic problems. Co-ops are organized for the sole purpose of service and not for the purpose of making a profit. They are controlled by a board of directors selected from its members. The directors determine the policies, supervise operation and hire a secretary-treasurer to carry on the everyday affairs. To be a success, a public relations department of a cooperative must have the wholehearted support of the directors and the employees. Perhaps the most important thing is the need of the support of the membership. Members and officers should study to know what their cooperative services are all about. It is the policy of local cooperatives to sell for cash. However, in the past few years they have sold cover-crop and other seeds on the farmer's assignment of his government soil conservation payments. In this way farmers who lack the money or credit to buy the seed and fertilizer to qualify for soil conservation payments are able to finance their soil conservation payments and are able to finance their soil building program with a minimum of risk to the county cooperative.

The directors employ a manager who is responsible for running the business, subject to the direction and review of the board of directors. The manager is also accountable to the membership of the cooperatives. A manager who wants to do a good job and give the best service to his organization must make himself as much a part of the civic life around him as possible. Doing so will not only broaden his education and knowledge but will also broaden his acquaintances. Since the manager of farm cooperatives deals mostly with farm people he can see the needs for service to 4-H clubs and other rural youth groups. The manager's wide acquaintance within the county can be helpful to the leaders of the Extension Department. He leads a very busy life, but a few minutes taken here and there for the good of others is "bread cast upon the water."

Voting for directors in seventy per cent of the associations is on the basis of one vote to each member. Most cooperatives provide that members who cannot attend the meeting may vote by mail on specific questions referred to them in advance, but do not permit "proxy voting." In a cooperative a member generally has only one vote, no matter how many shares of coop's stock he may hold.

Most co-ops credit any profit made to the individual patrons in proportion to the business done with the co-op. A business of this kind usually pays a yearly dividend to its patrons after it gets in a sound financial position. As the business grows and expands it may be necessary to borrow additional funds, but in the main it is owned by the patrons.

The desire to be proud of the place where you live and work and of the things in and about the place is a universal human urge. Neither members nor the public can be proud of a cooperative association which houses itself in the shadiest quarters in town any longer than is necessary. It is no longer true that farmers are at home in business establishments which have never known the touch of a broom, paint brush, or soap and water. What member is there who cannot feel a pride as he looks upon a nice building and realizes that a part of that is his, that he owns a share in it?

Farmer's cooperatives need capital to carry on their business. They may obtain it from their members, from the earnings of the association, or by borrowing. The capital retained from earnings or subscribed by members is very often not sufficient to carry on the business especially during peak periods of operation. A majority of the co-ops begin operation on borrowed funds. As the business progresses and makes reasonable profit these funds are repaid. Often money is borrowed to finance the erection of buildings which can be paid for over a long period of years. The commodity and operating capital loans usually cover seasonal activity and are outstanding for only a few months. Mississippi farmers have put very little money in their cooperatives. A few of the associations charge annual dues or membership fees in most cases a farmer becomes a member by doing business with the co-ops.

In a cooperative, what is left over after paying operating costs and charges and setting up reserves is distributed or allocated to the members on the basis of business transacted with the association. In many associations, not only the capital but the reserves are allocated to the members in proportion to patronage under conditions which permit the association to use the funds for the usual purposes of net worth as long as the board of directors believe the associations need them. Thousands of dollars are saved each year for patrons of a cooperative. By operating on a reasonable margin of profit they keep the price down on merchandise and services. This helps to keep competitors in line with their prices. They strive to make materials and services available to patrons when they need them at reasonable prices. An organization of this kind is able to buy cheaper because they buy in larger quantities. They very often purchase expensive equipment, that the individual could not afford and let the patrons use it for a reasonable fee.

Some co-ops have a marketing service for their patrons. By the assembling of larger quantities of a given item or different grades of the same item they are able to demand a better price in the market place.

Net profits may be used to expand the business. Cooperatives also have a big job to do in properly informing the public of their reason for existence, of their aims and purposes, and of their methods of carrying out these aims. Much can be done to offset the misunderstandings of cooperatives by explaining their aims and operations to many people honestly ignorant on the subject. Farmer cooperatives have a service to perform by creating a deeper understanding of the part farmers play in our everyday national life and of the problems which they face in their work. Such an understanding is necessary if farmers are to get the sympathetic cooperation of the rest of the population.

On the part of some people there is not a complete knowledge of the owners' liabilities. One of the most important jobs of every cooperative is getting members, other farmers, employees and the general public to understand the nature of their business. Every business man and many farmers know that a partnership pays no income taxes as a partnership—the income taxes on what the partners get out of the business are paid by each individual partner along with the taxes on his other income. In the same way a member of a cooperative pays his taxes on his individual income. The firm that makes a refund or rebate on merchandise sold does not pay any income taxes on it. The taxes are paid by the man who gets the refund. This is the exact situation in the case of patronage refunds by a cooperative—the income taxes are paid by the man who gets them—the farmer.

The individual farmer does not have the time, the energy, nor the expert knowledge required to bargain effectively in selling his farm crops or in purchasing farm supplies.

So he is joining with other farmers in maintaining sound purchasing and marketing cooperatives through which he and his neighbors can transact their business and reap the benefits of their collective bargaining power.

Cooperative philosophy and the basic principles are based on actual Christian principles.

We appreciate the interest shown by the 4-H Club, FFA & FHA boys and girls participating in this type program. We hope that we can continue to sponsor this valuable work.

dy indicates that chloride

molds. The organism in the experiments norretes a mixture containing tetracycline. When bromide is added to the fermentation broth, however, the chemical reaction is "switched" in the opposite direction, and more tetracycline is produced. The addition of chloride has the reverse effect and increases the yield of Aureomycin. At high bromide levels, it is reported, bromide is incorporated into the tetracycline molecule, and the process then results in both tetracycline and bromotetracycline.

Results of the study, it is believed, may lead to more efficient production of potent antibiotic drugs.

The authors of the current report are Drs. A. Gourevitch, M. Misiak and J. Lein of Bristol Laboratories Inc. Bristol Laboratories developed the unique direct fermentation process which yields tetracycline, the new broadrange antibiotic also known as polycycline, panmycin and steclin.

"DO NOT JUDGE FROM MERE APPEARANCES"

—*(Author's name below)—

The average cost of a prescription is just about the charge for a good meal. This is a tribute to the pharmaceutical industry that spends millions on research yet keeps ultimate costs so low.

Some medicines appear to be expensive. Judging by appearances a dozen capsules may not seem to be worth as much as six dollars. Your physician knows their higher cost and true value. When he prescribes them for you he knows that your eventual cost will be much lower because they will do you more good in less time. Trust his judgment. We will cooperate by pricing them fairly.

CEPA Notes

By TRESSIE GOBER In Work Does Faster With lighting.
When it comes to kitchen work, ic appliances are marvels of ncy and accuracy. But they to their best to save you time energy if you have to strain what they are doing. This good kitchen lighting a nec-ingredient in a work-saving n.
ually, it is easy to have the
of lighting that makes your work go faster. You simply provide enough in the right for all your kitchen tasks.

This calls for general and specific lighting.

First you need a good central ceiling for your overall lighting. For soft, pleasant lighting throughout the room, this fixture must take a bulb of the proper size for size of your kitchen, and that bulb must be shielded from view. It may be either incandescent or fluorescent.

If your kitchen is average size, you will need a 150 or 200 watt bulb in incandescent lighting in your ceiling fixture. Or if you prefer, you can use two 40 watt or four 20 watt tubes in fluorescent lighting. If your kitchen is bigger than average, you will probably need two ceiling fixtures, placed to give you plenty of lighting throughout the room.

Specific lighting includes light over the sink, over the range, and over at least one work counter. For work at these points you need at least two times as much light as your ceiling fixture gives you.

To light your sink, you may wish to use the incandescent type fixture. If so, a 100 watt bulb enclosed in a diffusing bowl may be sufficient.

Or you may want to use a valance over the sink. If you do, you may use a silvered bowl incandescent bulb in a porcelain socket, bare fluorescent tubes, or fluorescent tubes recessed in the dropped ceiling. The valance conceals bulbs to eliminate glare.

For lighting the surface over the range, a wall lamp is all right. Or you may prefer a shelf concealing a fluorescent tube. The light on your range itself only lights the controls.

Your work counters are easily lighted by building lighting into the bottom of the cabinets over them. Here portable, plug-in-under-cabinet units are fine and give the lighting you need to speed up meal preparation.

Good lighting in every spot where work is done in your kitchen adds to your efficiency in using your work-saving appliances. And good general lighting adds beauty, makes your kitchen more pleasant.

Grady Barnes' Conservation Farm Plan

BY
Hiram A. Jones, Work Unit Conservationist, USDA - SCS

Grady Barnes, who owns 115 acres of farm-land in the Hubbard Salem community ten miles north of Iuka, has been assisted by W. L. Watts and Hiram A. Jones both of the USDA Soil Conservation Service in formulating this Conservation Farm Plan.

A Land-Use capability map prepared by S. C. S. Soil Scientist was used as a basis in deciding the proper way to use each acre.

Pensacola Bahia Grass, and Sericea Lespedeza, were the plants recommended for the more eroded sloped formerly used for row crops. These plants seeded separately and not grown as a mixture will furnish hay and pasture. The more level land will be used for row crops cultivated on the contour.

Mr. Barnes took a great deal of pride in showing us a stand of fine pine trees growing behind his house. Since most of his land is now in woods, his chief interest will be the protection, care and management of his timber. His forestry program will be one of protecting his timber from fire and grazing, tree planting and the girdling of low grade hardwood to release young pines established through natural reforestation.

In speaking for the Tennessee River Soil Conservation District Board of Commissioners I want to congratulate Mr. Barnes for wanting to make the best use of his land. By taking full advantage of the ASC program administration in this county by Mr. E. N. Allen, and the technical advice, Mr. Edward Lee, Area Forester, can give him on forestry, Mr. Barnes can make the change needed to become a conservation farmer gradually and with little extra cost to him.

keep LIGHT handy . . . buy lamp bulbs
by the carton

With long winter nights ahead, you'll need plenty of spare lamp bulbs. The cheapest, most convenient way to keep them handy is to buy them by the carton . . . to get spares—of the right size—for every light socket in your home.

Keep light handy in your home. Count your light sockets . . . fill all empties . . . and lay in a supply of spare bulbs for every lighting need.

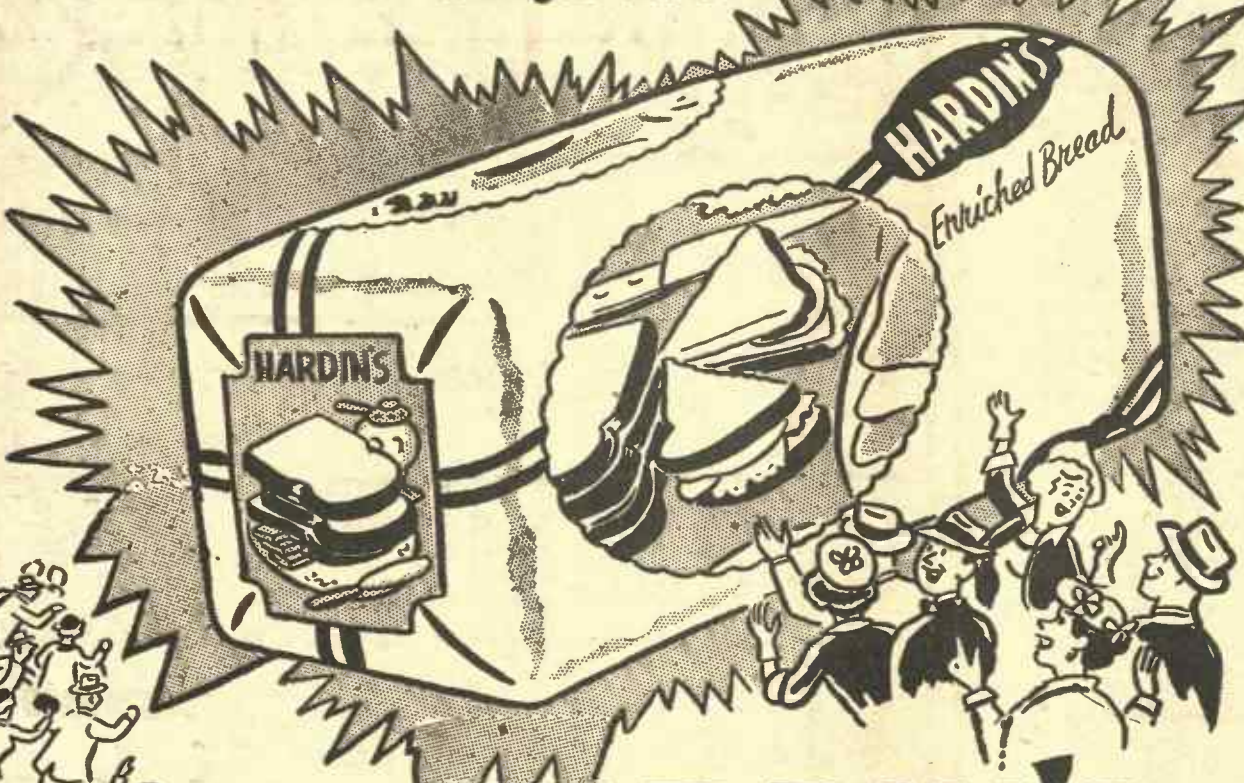

Katie Kord says

tone today—and be sure you get bulbs that are big enough for your seeing tasks.

THE ASSOCIATIONAL VOICE

News of the Tishomingo Baptist Churches.
R. B. PATTERSON, Missionary.
P. O. Box 314, Phone 3261, Iuka

Rev. R. B. Patterson, Area Missionary, has returned to his field of labor in Tishomingo and Itawamba Counties after being in two Schools of Missions Programs in Texas. While in Texas he spoke at the following churches, representing the Home Mission work of Southern Baptist: Daingerfield, Indian Rock, Lone Star, Bethlehem, New Diana, Ore City, and Pittsburg Association. In the Unity Association, he spoke in the following churches: Herty, Denam Ave. Lufkin, Happy Hour, Woodlawn, Clawson, and Ball Hill. Throughout the state of Texas there are over 1800 churches cooperating in similar programs. This is the greatest effort of its kind in the history of Texas Baptist Churches.

Rev. Raymond Buchanan, Associational Clerk for Tishomingo County Baptist Association has mailed out the programs for the coming sessions of the Tishomingo County annual meeting at the Iuka Baptist Church on Tuesday and Wednesday Oct. 4-5, 1955.

Rev. C. L. Quarles, Executive Secretary for Mississippi Baptists is scheduled to speak at the Wednesday morning session at 10:45 o'clock. Other out-of-county persons appearing on the program include Dr. A. L. Goodrich, Editor of the Baptist Record, Jackson, Miss. Rev. Frank Roblin, Tupelo, Miss., Rev. C. M. Day, Durant, Miss.; and Mr. Frank Skilton, Blue Mountain College, Blue Mountain, Miss. Rev. Quarles and Goodrich have recently returned from a trip to the Holy Lands and the Baptist World Alliance that met in London.

The Sunday School Planning meeting of the Tishomingo County Association was held at the New Prospect Baptist Church on Tuesday evening Sept. 20. Rev. Hansell Russell, Associational Superintendent, presided at the meeting. Plans were made for the coming year and for the Group Study Courses in October. Are port from the State Planning meeting in Jackson was given by Rev. Russell. Those attending the Jackson meeting were: Rev. Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Travis Cain, Mrs. Herbert Robinson, Mrs. Paul Skinner, and Miss Cleo Moore.

Rev. C. A. Savell, Iuka Pastor, is assisting Rev. B. L. Mohon, former Iuka Pastor, in a series of revival services at the Okolona Baptist Church this week.

The Clerks of the several churches are busy at this time of the year making final preparations for the completion of the Associational letters to be read to the annual meeting of the Association. Rev. C. S. Mullins, Columbus, Miss., recently held a weekend series of revival services at the Highland Baptist Church. We have received some good reports from the services. Rev. Mullins has done a fine work for the churches wherever he has served. It was good to have him in Tishomingo Association.

Miss Cleo Moore was elected to serve as the President of the Associational W. M. U. for the next year. The New Prospect ladies, in their usual able fashion, took care of the recent annual W. M. U. meeting in a most acceptable way.

Rev. George Bacon, Eastport Pastor, will preach the annual sermon at the association this year. He speaks at 11:15 on Tuesday morning Oct. 4, Rev. Albert Hamilton, Golden, will preside at the sessions of the association. He is serving as the Moderator of the Association for this his second year.

VOWS ARE PLEDGED BY MISS BOBO

The Berea Church of Christ of near Burnsville was the scene of an impressive wedding on September 4 which united Miss Katy Niles Bobo and Travis (Chig) Stricklin. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Bobo of Burnsville, route one and was graduated from Holcut High School in 1953, attending Northeast Mississippi Junior College in 1954-55.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Stricklin of Holcut and is a graduate of high school and spent two years in the army air force spending some time overseas.

Elder Holliday, minister of the Berea Church of Henderson, Tenn. officiated before a background of baskets filled with white gladioli tied with white satin ribbon silhouetted against a background of green palms. White candles were used for lighting.

Given in marriage by her brother, Jerry Bobo, the bride wore a gown of white satin under Alencon Lace with a fitted bodice, high neckline and three quarter length sleeves. The ballerina length was worn over illusion net. The shoulder length veil was of illusion and fastened by a crown of orange blossoms.

Miss Matie Edna Bobo of Yazoo City, Miss., sister of the bride, was her only attendant. Tommie Stricklin of Holcut, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

A reception was held in the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Iness Pollard.

After a wedding trip the couple will live in Chicago where Mr. Stricklin is employed.

Fire Destroys Two Homes Over Week End

Saturday night about eleven o'clock a house located on the Eastport road in the northeast section of town, and all its contents were completely destroyed by fire.

Mr. and Mrs. Junior Horn were occupying the house.

On Sunday shortly after noon a raging fire completely destroyed a house belonging to Ed Vess. Mr. and Mrs. Bill Cox and Mrs. Cox's father were occupying this house which is located 3 1/2 miles south of Iuka just off of Hwy. 25 south.

Entire contents of the house were burned.

New Directories Reveal Growth Of This Area

Indicative of the growth of Iuka and the surrounding communities is the large increase in the number of telephone directories now being distributed to local telephone subscribers.

Approximately 1000 new directories are being delivered to homes and businesses, according to W. G. Hardin, group manager for Southern Bell Telephone Company, compared with 875 when the last directory was delivered.

The new telephone directory contains many new and changed listings and other helpful telephone information and is easily distinguishable from the old green covered telephone book by its grey cover. A sufficient quantity of the new directories has been printed to supply every telephone subscriber and to allow for future telephone expansion.

Mr. Hardin requests that the old directory be discarded and that the new directory be referred to when telephone numbers are desired. Looking up the desired numbers helps to avoid the possibility of getting wrong numbers and saves time for both the calling and called parties. "Information" should be called only when the number you are seeking is not listed in the directory.
