SEVENTY-THIRD YEAR

IUKA, TISHOMINGO COUNTY, MISSISSIPPI, THURSDAY, SEPT. 20th, 1956

NUMBER 9

Vidette Varieties

WE ALWAYS happy to hear from our readers. Tom Abernethy is one of his reports of Congressional action. The Congressman has some interesting things to say and his report Wednesday at the Rotary club meeting was no exception. He very well expressed our sentiments on internationalism in the school and we believe, that the whole thing is nothing but a political gimmick that it will be a national problem regardless of which side is in the White House."

SEVENTEEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY-SEVEN is just around the corner, which means that Iuka's centennial year is also just around the corner. On December 1957—Friday—Iuka will be 100 years old. The Iuka Lions last week, received a communication from a concern that makes in promoting centennialism in helping to promote celebration. The club president has asked the promotion committee for further information regarding their methods and in probability one of their representatives will meet with the club in the near future to explain and how they can and will help in Iuka's centennial celebration. It is an event in which every citizen should be glad to participate. There are not too many incorporated places in the country and only very few in this immediate area that are 100 years old. It will be an endeavor, not only the Lions club but also for the community, organization, churches, clubs, individuals and everyone to help in it.

... V ...

WHILE we're on the subject of Iuka's centennial, we'd like to think that anyone possessing or having old pictures of scenes of Iuka from 15 years ago on and who would be willing to loan them to The Vidette for a centennial edition please to the editor. We promise to be responsible for them and to return them in good condition as well as credit in the centennial edition to the owners of the pictures. This will be an important issue and will probably be one of the best. Please let us hear from you!

Lions Thank Helpers Who Served During Carnival At Fair Last Week

The Iuka Lions Club takes this method of saying "Thank You" to all citizens of the county and community who assisted in any way in the staging and promotion of the carnival at the Tishomingo County Fair held last week. "Many persons who are not members of the club," George Page, president, said, "gave willingly and liberally of their time and talent to the carnival that we sponsored and we want you all to know that we sincerely appreciate your assistance. Any successful community endeavor requires the help of practically everyone. We of the Lions club are happy to say that we have always been liberally aided by everyone during all of our undertakings. Our only hope is that we may continue to earn the support of all."

Rep. Abernethy Is Guest Speaker At Rotary Club

Representative Tom Abernethy was guest speaker at the regular weekly meeting of the Iuka Rotary club Wednesday at noon. This was a joint meeting of the Rotary and Lions of Iuka with members of the Belmont Lions club being invited guests.

Mr. Abernethy, in his short talk, gave a report of actions the recent congress just adjourned. He also spoke at length about the farm problems facing the country. Among other subjects discussed by the speaker was the civil rights and racial issues facing the South. The congressman said he had always hoped that he would never see the day when a Southern governor would use force to make the races attend the same school. But just recently the governor of Tennessee had ordered and caused to appear in a small town in that state National Guard tanks with mounted 75 mm cannon along with 600 troops to force integration of the races in the schools. Mr. Abernethy said that this act of the Tennessee governor was possibly the very thing that would make it easier for the federal government to use force in future instances.

Mr. Abernethy is seeking his office again this year, subject to the November general election. He is without opposition.

Club; Talks On The Constitution

Supt. of the Iuka Schools Herbert L. Shook, was guest speaker at the Iuka Rotary Club regular weekly meeting on Wednesday, Sept. 12. Mr. Shook was invited to speak on the Constitution by Bro. J. H. Holder, the club's program chairman. Mr. Shook's speech follows:

"I have been invited to talk to you today about the American Constitution. Indeed, the subject is so broad in its scope, so profound in its import, so voluminous in commentary and interpretation, that even with my restricted acquaintance with it, one of my chief problems has been to confine my discussion to the time limits you prescribe for your guests. The viewpoint will be rather general: I shall touch on the background of the Constitution, the conflicting plans proposed in the Constitutional Convention, the important compromises, the basic principles incorporated in the great document, and a brief evaluation of it."

"A constitution is the fundamental law of a nation, setting forth the principles upon which its government is established, and delineating in broad outline the framework of that government. A constitution may be unwritten, as in the case of England, - an amalgam of Statutes, court decisions, decree, grants, and charters, along with traditional acceptance of fundamental concepts, centuries old; or, a constitution may be written, as American tradition demands, - that is, a single document containing the basic principles of government: fundamental law, written (theoretically, at least) by the people and subject to change only by their action and by their consent."

"Gladstone, in commenting upon the American Constitution, characterized it as 'the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man.' But James Bryce observes that the Constitution is no exception to the rule that everything which has the power to win the obedience and respect of men must have its roots deep in the past. Bryce also points out that there is little in our Constitution that is absolutely new, - in fact there is much in it as old as Magna Charta, which King John under compulsion granted to the English barons seven and a half centuries ago."

"I have not the time to develop the fact that our founding fathers possessed a working knowledge of the patterns and principles of established governments, as well as a familiarity with the revolutionary political philosophies of the 17th and 18th centuries. They were not strangers to Rousseau's social contract theory, nor to Montesquieu's principle of separation of powers, which England was putting into partial practice during the colonial period. They were Englishmen, thoroughly familiar with and critical of their mother country; they had lived under and had engaged in English colonial government; they had created their own state governments and had framed state constitutions after they declared their independence of England."

"So it is that the farmers of the Constitution in 1787 did not find it necessary of expedient to create from the imagination a new foundation and framework of government, - they simply followed the pattern of the English government, the colonial governments with which they were so familiar, and the state governments they had so recently established, - modifying adjusting, adapting them to their needs, their own political theories, and their social and economic philosophies."

"Perhaps we should note briefly at this point the circumstances which led to the formation of the Constitution. Having declared themselves independent of the mother country, and being engaged in a war to accomplish that independence, these self-asserted states came quickly to the realization that if there were to be hope at all of military success, an absolute state sovereignty (which they declared they possessed) must be tempered by a degree of effective union. Accordingly, the Articles of Confederation were drafted, submitted to the states for adoption in 1777, and at long last ratified by all thirteen of the states, becoming effective in 1781."

"But the Articles of Confederation proved to be inadequate for the needs of the people. Its outstanding features proved to be its greatest defects. First of all, it formed only a simple alliance of independent states rather than a true union. It gave to the central government no power to act upon either individuals or states; it lacked effective governmental machinery; it provided no power to tax or to regulate commerce, either foreign or interstate; it created no national armed force; and its provision for amendment was such that alteration was virtually impossible."

"It is little wonder, then, that with such weaknesses existing, the years of the Confederation produced such chaotic conditions that the historian refers to them as the 'critical period.' Not enough money could be raised to pay even the interest on the national debt; some legislatures refused to provide funds to send delegates to the Confederate Congress; the states bickered and quarreled among themselves in their economic and commercial relationships; and sectional jealousies were in evidence on every hand. The French minister in our country at the time summed it up this way: 'There is now no general government in America, no head, no Congress, no administrative department.'

"Moreover, there had appeared a clearly drawn line of social and economic cleavage between the American aristocracy, - men of considerable property, - and the so-called common people, - the small farmers and the non-propertied, generally. Shay's Rebellion in Massachusetts had produced a fear almost to the degree of panic that the lower classes would sooner or later gain control of the State governments, to the great detriment of property interests everywhere. Out of its state of affairs came the agitation for a strong central government, independent of state governments, with the will and the power to protect the rights of property."

"Thus it was that upper class leaders began to proclaim the need of a stronger central government; and two preliminary conventions in 1785 and 1786 led to the calling of the Philadelphia Convention in 1787, - for the expressed purpose (so stated in the call) of amending the existing constitution, the Articles of Confederation."

The delegates chosen to represent the states in this convention were typically representative of the conservative upper class; almost without exception they were men of financial and social standing. It is said that not a man among them came from the small farmer class. When they met in Philadelphia in May, 1787, they quickly concluded that the Articles of Confederation were basically inadequate, and decided, with very little hesitation, to form an entirely new constitution. In so doing, they became essentially a revolutionary body, inasmuch as they overstepped authority granted to them by the Congress and by the states: they were charged to reform an existing government; they disregarded instructions and framed an entirely new and different one."

"It has been said that the American Constitution is made up of a series of compromises. The Philadelphia Convention early found itself faced with the necessity of reconciling two opposing viewpoints as to the nature of the new government it proposed to create."

"The Virginia Plan, drafted by the Virginia delegation and supported by the larger states, represented the extreme nationalistic point of view. It proposed a strong central government at the expense of state powers, and implied the formation of a consolidated national government which could, and probably would, relegate the states to the position of mere administrative units of the central authority. It called for separate executive and judicial departments, and provided for an independent legislature comprised of two houses, the lower to be chosen by the people of the states, and the upper to be chosen by the lower. Representation in this legislature was to be in proportion to the population of the states."

"From the viewpoint of the small states, this plan was very unacceptable, because it provided no guarantee of the equality of the states, or that the small states would have any representation at all in the upper house. Accordingly, the small states presented an alternate proposal in the New Jersey Plan, which was but little more than a revision of the Articles of Confederation. It represented the extreme federal point of view, inasmuch as it provided for a relatively weak central government, and for the continuation of state autonomy. There should be an executive council selected by Congress; the legislature should be unicameral, in which the states, regardless of size, would be equally represented, and in which each state would have one vote."

"The New Jersey Plan secured enough support to force the Convention into compromise after compromise as differing points of view came into conflict, but these compromises were most important and of extreme significance. According to one authority, 'much of the strength that the American Constitution has shown down through the years arises out of the fact that so much of it was created by the process of compromise, through the search for some middle ground suitable to extremes on either side of major issues of principle.'"

"Let us look briefly at some of the more important of these compromises."

"First of all, the nationalists won in their contention for a two-house legislature, but bitter differences over the method of representation were settled by the great Connecticut Compromise, which accepted the nationalist viewpoint of proportional representation in the lower house, and the federal viewpoint of equal representation in the upper house."

"Again, in the question of representation, a difference of opinion arose as to what constituted population: Should southern slaves be counted in apportioning the number of representatives the states were entitled to? It had already been agreed by the Convention that direct taxes should be assessed upon the States in proportion to population. The Northern states wanted southern slaves to be counted in determining the allocation of direct taxes, but not in the apportionment of representatives in the lower house. The Southerners, of course, took the converse viewpoint. The resulting compromise was utterly illogical, but reasonable and fair: it was agreed that three-fifths of the slaves should be counted for both purposes."

"And again, there were disputes as to the extent of Congressional power to exercise over commerce. The commercial north, disgusted with the complete inability of the Confederation to regulate commerce, stood ready and willing to grant Congress broad powers in this area. The agricultural south, on the other hand, was adamant in its opposition, fearing that Congress, dominated by Northerners, might levy taxes on their exported cotton to support the government, and interfere with the slave trade. So came the Commerce Compromise, by which Congress was given the power to 'regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several states, and with the Indian tribes,' - but was expressly forbidden to levy any tax on exports, or to interfere with the slave trade prior to the year 1808."

"Many other compromises attended the formation of our Constitution, but these related are both illustrative and significant."

"In its style and organization, the Constitution is remarkably simple. It is concise, lucid, straightforward, and brief. It consists of a preamble, seven short articles, each dealing with some aspect of the American political system, and twenty-two terse amendments. Articles I, II and III deal with the legislative, the executive, and the judicial branches of the government, - in that order. Article IV considers the relationship of the states to the national government, and to each other; Article V delineates the process of amendment; Article VI asserts that the Constitution is the supreme law of the land; and Article VII sets forth the process of ratification."

"Notwithstanding the fact that the American Constitution is rooted in the past, it is an accepted fact that it created a government unique in the annals of nations, an experiment in government the like of which the world had never seen. Six principles are so basic that they may be considered the vital characteristics of the American system. I should like to enumerate them with brief comment."

"The first is that of POPULAR SOVEREIGNTY, which is the embodiment of the social contract theory, and holds that all political power resides in the people; that all law must be in accord with the popular will; and that all officials must be basically chosen by the people and held responsible to them."

"The second principle is that of LIMITED GOVERNMENT, which means that no governmental agency must be endowed with arbitrary or absolute authority; thus, the central government was designed to be limited in its functions to those powers specifically granted to it by the Constitution."

"The third principle is that of SEPARATION OF POWERS, which was incorporated into the Constitution to prevent the accumulation of all governmental powers in the same hands, and so to forestall the rise of tyranny and dictatorship. Thus, legislative powers are specifically vested in the Congress, executive powers in the president, and judicial powers in the Courts."

"The fourth principle is that of CHECKS AND BALANCES, which implements the principle of separation of powers by providing a great degree of practical security of each branch against the invasion of the others." Outstanding examples of this principle are the presidential power to veto and the Congressional power to impeach; but actually it is extensive enough (in theory, at least) to provide a proper balance between the central government and the states."

"The fifth principle is that of JUDICIAL REVIEW, which permits the Supreme Court to declare void and inoperative any legislative act repugnant to the Constitution. It must be observed that the Constitution itself nowhere confers such power upon the court, that the Court itself asserted and assumed that authority in John Marshall's famous opinion in the case of Marbury v. Madison. Although bitterly assailed and attacked from many quarters, judicial review seems to be firmly entrenched as a basic principle of our government."

"The final principle is that of FEDERALISM, which means that powers of government are divided between the central government on the one hand and the state governments on the other, such division being spelled out by the Constitution, and that neither level should encroach upon the other."

"The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people."

"A bitter political battle ensued over the ratification of the Constitution, and it was accepted with hesitancy and with misgivings. But from such faltering and uncertain beginnings, it has established a record unequaled by any other political document of modern times."

"With relatively little modification, it has served through more than a century and a half of rapid growth and unbelievable change. It was written for a nation of less than four million people, yet it functions effectively for a population grown forty-fold. It was designed for a simple agricultural economy, yet it has been readily adaptable to the most highly industrialized and complex society the world has ever known."

"Notwithstanding its definitely upper-class inception, it presents the finest example of practical democracy in the world today. It was brought with the blood of patriots from Lexington to Yorktown;

it has been defended by lives and substance as the Alamo to two stands today the bulwark of liberty and is honored in every land where a free

Any Changes In Social Security Since 1954 Introduction

Mrs. Mary King Temple
Manager of the Sheffield Social Security Office

Today I shall discuss disability connection with old-age and survivors insurance. Disability first came into the social security insurance picture in 1954. Until now, however, it was just a provision to protect the insurance rights of a worker who became totally disabled after a record of employment and employment covered by the law. There was no provision to pay benefits to him after he was determined to be disabled any further gainful work.

The 1956 amendments to the social security law changed this. Beginning with July 57, a disabled person, age 50 or over, may be eligible to start getting monthly social security insurance benefit payments. It is no longer necessary to wait until he reaches age 65 to have his retirement payments start, nor is it necessary for an insured woman worker to wait until she becomes 62, if she is disabled and has reached her 50th birthday.

To meet the requirements of this new provision in the law, you must be so severely disabled that you are not able to engage in any substantial work. If your disability is just a temporary condition—one that will not keep you out of work permanently, or for a long and indefinite period of time—you are not eligible for benefit payments. Or if your disability is a kind which just makes it necessary for you to slow down in work or work part time, you cannot qualify for monthly benefit payments. However, if your disability—either physical or mental—is long-continued, has lasted for at least six months, and there is little chance of recovery in the future, you may be eligible for monthly benefit payments. These payments, which can start at age 50, are the same as the amount of the old-age insurance benefit you would be entitled to if you were 65.

Bear this in mind: the first month for which cash disability payments can be made is July 1957. However, there will be no payments for your dependents until you become entitled to old-age benefits payments at age 65 (or, in the case of a woman getting disability payments, at any time between age 62 and 65). Of course receipt of disability benefits will not effect the payment of benefits to any of your eligible dependents in case you should die.

The work requirements for disability insurance payments at age 50, are: social security credit for 5 years in the 10 years before the established beginning date of your disability, and 1½ years of work in the 3 years before that date. Active military service at any time after September 15, 1940, and work in the railroad industry after 1936 can count toward the work requirements for disability another Federal disability benefit or a State or Federal workmen's compensation benefit for any month, the amount of your disability insurance benefit will be reduced by the amount of the other benefit for that month.

If you apply for disability insurance benefits, you will be referred to a State vocational rehabilitation agency which will consider you for services which may help you return to gainful work. Disability insurance payments will be withheld from you if you refuse without good cause to accept rehabilitation services that may be offered to you by your State agency.

If you are now age 50 or over, have been in employment or self-employment covered by social security long enough to meet the above-stated requirements, are now disabled but have never applied for the "disability freeze" of your earnings record, you should get in touch with your social security office right away. If you have already had your earnings record "frozen," there is no hurry about applying for the benefits payable at age 50. The earliest time that applications for disability cash payments can be accepted is after October 1, 1956; the first month for which payments can be made is July 1957. You have until December 31, 1957, to make your application without losing any of the payments.

From what I have said, it is apparent that disability insurance has now become a part of the old-age and survivors insurance program. Under the amended law, disability benefits are payable also to children who became disabled before their 18th birthday. In my next article, I shall explain this important amendment to the social security law.

General Soil Bank Conservation Reserve Program Now Available

Ellett Allen, Office Manager, ASC Chairman, Mack Sanders, of the A.S.C. County Committee announced today that the Conservation Reserve phase of the Soil Bank Program is now available to Tishomingo County farmers who can qualify under the 1956 Program.

This is the long-range part of the Soil Bank designed to assist farmers in diverting a portion of their cropland from the production of excessive supplies of agricultural commodities other than allotment crops, and carry out approved conservation practices. In carrying out this program the County Committee will enter into contracts with producers (1) to share the cost of establishing approved conservation practices on the land designated as Conservation Reserve (2) to make annual payments to such producers for maintaining the conservation uses for the term of the contract. The County Committee will share 80% of the cost of establishing these practices and the annual payment in Tishomingo County will be $8.50 per acre.

Mr. Sanders pointed out that the main thing farmers need to understand is the fact that the whole program is designed to reduce the acreage of land devoted to crops. A Soil Bank will be established for each interested farm-share a base of 100 acres of the acreage of crops grown on the farm during the last two years. When this base is established, then to enter into a contract the farmer must agree to reduce the acreage of base crops that will be planted during the life of the contract. Mr. Sanders gave this example:

Suppose the farmer has a Soil Bank Base of 100 acres; that is, for two years he has averaged planting 100 acres to cotton, corn, soybeans, oats, and other row crops. This farmer desires to put 20 acres in the Conservation Reserve. Then for the life of the contract he could plant only 80 acres of these same type crops. He would receive 80% of the cost of establishing a cover on these 20 acres and would in addition receive the annual rental payment of $8.50 per acre.

Contracts will be for three or five years in case the designated acreage is already in an approved cover, for five years or ten years if a cover is to be established—the length of the contract being dependent upon what practice is carried out. In the case of trees the contract must be for ten years and Mr. Sanders says that they are not sure yet but there is a possibility that the contract period may run for fifteen years.

As Chairman Sanders pointed out earlier, the purpose of the program is to reduce the production of excessive supplies of agricultural commodities, so there are two restrictions on the use of the land put in the conservation reserve. First, the farmer agrees not to harvest a crop off of the acreage set aside. Second, he agrees not to graze the acreage. It is the farmer's responsibility to keep domestic livestock off of the designated acreage, whether it is the owner's or a neighbor's livestock. Fencing is not required but if that is what it takes to keep livestock off, then it is the farmer's responsibility to fence the designated acreage.

Mr. Sanders said that October 15, 1956 is the Final Date for interested farmers to enter into a contract with the County Committee for the 1956 Program and urged those interested to go by the A.S.C. County Office in Iuka, Mississippi as soon as possible for more complete details. share a base of 100 acres of the acreage of crops grown on the farm during the last two years. When this base is established, then to enter into a contract the farmer must agree to reduce the acreage of base crops that will be planted during the life of the contract. Mr. Sanders gave this example:

Suppose the farmer has a Soil Bank Base of 100 acres; that is, for two years he has averaged planting 100 acres to cotton, corn, soybeans, oats, and other row crops. This farmer desires to put 20 acres in the Conservation Reserve. Then for the life of the contract he could plant only 80 acres of these same type crops. He would receive 80% of the cost of establishing a cover on these 20 acres and would in addition receive the annual rental payment of $8.50 per acre.

Contracts will be for three or five years in case the designated acreage is already in an approved cover, for five years or ten years if a cover is to be established—the length of the contract being dependent upon what practice is carried out. In the case of trees the contract must be for ten years and Mr. Sanders says that they are not sure yet but there is a possibility that the contract period may run for fifteen years.

As Chairman Sanders pointed out earlier, the purpose of the program is to reduce the production of excessive supplies of agricultural commodities, so there are two restrictions on the use of the land put in the conservation reserve. First, the farmer agrees not to harvest a crop off of the acreage set aside. Second, he agrees not to graze the acreage. It is the farmer's responsibility to keep domestic livestock off of the designated acreage, whether it is the owner's or a neighbor's livestock. Fencing is not required but if that is what it takes to keep livestock off, then it is the farmer's responsibility to fence the designated acreage.

KENNETH E. MAYHALL ESTABLISHED SOIL & WATER CONSERVATION

Kenneth E. Mayhall of Belmont has, during 1956, established vegetated waterways on 71 acres of cropland and constructed a 3 acre stock-pond on his farm. Mr. Mayhall is a Soil Conservation District Cooperator, and the local USDA Soil Conservation Service Technician assisted him in the establishment of these soil and water conservation practices.

A fair sod of Pensacola Bahia grass and Kobe Lespedeza have established in the waterways that were plowed out and shaped to meet ASC specifications. Mr. Mayhall has done an excellent job of establishing Bermuda grass on the dam and spillway of his farm pond.

In the spring of 1957 terraces will be constructed and emptied into these established vegetated waterways, and the rows so arranged that every row will empty into them also.

Your present Life Insurance... will it pay you Disability Benefits?

Here's another reason it pays to be a member of Woodmen of the World. Every basic Woodmen plan carries a special feature that protects in event of permanent and total disability.

Any Woodman under 60 with one of these plans, who becomes totally and permanently disabled after his certificate has been in force a year, may, in lieu of death benefits, apply for one-half the face amount of his certificate. For example, if he has a $10,000 life insurance certificate, he would receive $5,000 cash.

After this certificate shall have been in force for twelve months, if satisfactory proof is furnished to the Society, prior to age 60 of the member, that the member is totally and permanently disabled and will be permanently, continuously and wholly prevented thereby for life from performing any work for compensation or profit, and if such disability has been in force for not less than ninety days, the Society will pay to the member in cash one-half the face amount of this certificate, or the cash surrender value if greater, less any indebtedness to the Society, in full settlement, on the cancellation and surrender of this certificate. Satisfactory proof must be furnished within 18 months of the date of commencement of such disability.

This is another of many "plus" benefits offered by membership in the world's financially strongest fraternal benefit society.

see how well towels do the job of drying. Those tested included plain-weave crash made of cotton, linen and mixtures of cotton and

The all-cotton crash absorbed a much heavier weight of moisture than the linen. Mixtures of three-fourths cotton and one-fourth linen also absorbed more moisture than the all-linen crash.

The linen toweling became dry faster than either the cotton or the cotton-linen mixture.

Range Surface Care
 Once the surface of your stove is chipped, the damage can't be undone.

The porcelain enamel surface of your range that protects the steel beneath it is a kind of glass. It's hard, but it will break with sudden changes of heat and cold, or hard blows.

A safe rule is to wait until the range cools before cleaning. For immediate clean-ups of spilled food or grease, use a dry cloth or soft paper, or if necessary use a cloth wrung from warm water.

If the enamel does chip, touch up damaged spots carefully with paint recommended by your range dealer. It may look patchy, but it's better than exposed places that invite rust.

Closing a Long Cut
 How would you close a long cut if no doctor were available to take care of it? This problem that has stumped many mothers has been solved with tape.
 A recent medical publication tells how: First clean the wound thoroughly. Second, dry it. Third, tape it shut with cellophane tape.
 The tape may come off but can be replaced.

In a series of 104 cases treated this way, even deep cuts appeared to heal evenly and without scarring.

Whipped Cream Desserts
 Whipped cream adds glamour and taste appeal to desserts. For different flavors, try whipping spices into the cream for serving over pumpkin pie. Transform a lemon pie with nutmeg-flavored whipped cream or serve it over fresh pears. Make pink whipped cream with a little food coloring.

Beat honey into whipped cream, or use cream whipped with juices from canned or frozen fruits. Another dessert consists simply of a can of applesauce combined with a pint of stiffly beaten cream, seasoned with cinnamon.

Rail oddities

This month the State of Iowa and the railroads commemorate the 75th anniversary of a legendary deed of heroism performed by a girl of 15—Kate Shelley, whose father had been a section foreman

Torrential rains for a week had brought to flood stage all the streams in her neighborhood. Then a cloudburst on the night of July 6, 1881. The railroad had sent out a pilot engine to test the track. Through a flash of lightning, Kate saw the locomotive drop through a bridge into the churning waters of Honey Creek

With a Chicago-bound passenger train due in an hour this young girl went out into the darkness and the storm. She made her perilous way on hands and knees across the long Des Moines River bridge and finally, bleeding and exhausted, to the first railroad station just in time to warn of the danger and avert disaster

Vision of Victory

Lesson for September 23, 1956

AFTER the battle, as Homer's poem tells it, the Greeks and Trojans who had been killed went right on fighting. Whoever won the flesh-and-blood war, the ghost-war went on and would go on forever. That was primitive Greek religion. But the same kind of notion is to be found in other religions. In the Zend-Avesta, sacred book of the ancient Persian religion, there is the picture of the good God Ahurimazda and the evil God Ahri-man, in perpetual never-ending war with each other. Strangely enough, this same idea floats around in people's heads who have been Christian long enough to know better. They pray, "Thy Kingdom come"; but nothing would surprise them more than if the Kingdom of God really came!

Desperate Battle
The ancient Persians were not entirely wrong. Life is a battle, a desperate age-long war, between good and evil. God, and the friends of God, do not run over all opposition. The cause of God has had defeats. As a modern writer puts it, "Victory has many wounds." There are those who cannot see this. All things are good, some wish us to believe. But it is true to the facts to see that not all things are good, but there are persons and forces going all-out to destroy what is good. No matter how good a man is, no matter how good a cause is, if it prevails in this world there has to be a fight first. The book of Revelation in our Bible is a book of battles. Its pages are red with flame and blood. The white-robed saints in light have come through "great tribulation." The young Christian who finds the going rough, the veteran Christian who becomes discouraged over the defeat of some cause that surely ought to have won,—all need to read the Bible again. Victory for God and the right there will be; but not easily and probably not today.

Personal Victory

In all the wars of this world, some on the winning side have never struck a blow or got into the fight at all. The armed forces do the fighting, the stay-at-homes celebrate the victory when it comes. It is different in the world-wide, age-long struggle between God and all that is anti-God. If the Bible teaches anything plainly it is that no one will share the victory of God who has not taken part in the struggle on God's side. Many Christian hymns express this idea, such as "Am I a soldier of the cross?" and "The Son of God goes forth to war." First the war, then the victory. Now there are many religions that teach something like this. Valhalla, Paradise, Nirvana, heaven, whatever it is called—most religions look forward to a time and place where everyone is, so to speak, a veteran of a successful war. But what do they do with their victory? Here the Christian religion stands out alone. "His servants shall serve Him," the Bible says. So John Sutherland Bonnell says in his little book, "Heaven and Hell," (Abingdon Press, $1.00) "The rest which is promised us in heaven is not the rest of passivity or indolence. There will be constant opportunities for spiritual development and service."

Christ Will Reign

But the church is sure that the Christian can look forward to final victory only because he is fighting in the cause and army of Christ. It is his victory after all, not ours. If he lost, we would lose. There is a great future tense our faith in Christ. There is a past tense first: He has conquered death and evil, by the cross and resurrection he struck the forces of evil the fatal blow. But not the final one. For there is the present tense: In the lives of Christians, in his church, he wins victories today. But the future tense is equally important. Christian people have never been agreed on the details, but all Christians everywhere are one in affirming: CHRIST WILL REIGN! Not only in heaven but on earth. A Christianity that does not look forward to Christ's final triumph, complete and world-wide, is not only untrue to the Bible but is like that old Persian belief, courageous to be sure, but dismal,—that outlook on an eternal future just as uncertain and mixed with evil as is this present age. No,—the How and When are God's secret, but it is no secret that Christ will be Lord of all.

Better Forage Sought In Breeding Program

College, Miss.—Better forage for the Mississippi live-stock industry is the objective of a breeding program being carried on by the Agricultural Experiment Station. A recent report shows some of the progress being made along this line.

A Dallgrass segregate from a hybrid has proved immune to ergot, and seven others have been found highly resistant. Backcrosses of these plants and parents are being studied for increased seed production.

Only one self-fertile selection has been found in the Johnsongrass breeding program. This selection is high yielding and persistent. A Johnson grass sorgo hybrid is being developed. Two sweet grass-types and one intermediate-type segregates have been selected and are under tests.

Crown rust resistant selections of ryegrass are being developed. They were artificially inoculated four times, raising the level of resistance considerably.

One line of orchardgrass has been developed which has shown excellent resistance to plant rusts. Plants are being inbred in order to obtain seed for breeding and strain building purposes. A new red clover has shown resistance to powdery mildew and is to be included in the uniform clover tests during the fall of 1956. A three-acre field is used to increase seed at the Delta Branch Experiment Station.

Several years tests have shown that the Mississippi farmer planning to grow white clover should plant seeds of an adopted Southern strain. Louisiana S-1 has proved particularly desirable, especially where seed production is desired. Northern grown seeds or those imported from England, New Zealand and other countries are not adapted to prevailing climatic conditions.

Campfire Day Observed At Shiloh, Sept. 19

Shiloh National Military Park will join 179 other National Park Service areas in the observance of Campfire Day, September 19, Superintendent Floyd S. Taylor announced today. The observance will include explaining to visitors the significance of Campfire Day, and distributing a supplement to the Park leaflet describing the events commemorated by the day.

Campfire Day marks the birth of the idea of National Parks, Superintendent Taylor said. The idea, that of Judge Cornelius Hodges, of Montana, came into being at a campfire on the night of September 19, 1870, in the Yellowstone county. Judge Hodges, a member of a 19-man party exploring the little-known Yellowstone wilderness, suggested that the area should be made a National Park in order to prevent its rugged beauty from being commercialized and ruined. Other members of the party enthusiastically agreed and joined in furthering the project. In less than two years, President U. S. Grant approved the bill establishing Yellowstone National Park and setting it aside "for the benefit and enjoyment of the people."

From that beginning has grown the great system of 180 National Parks, preserving scenic and historic areas for the enjoyment and inspiration of the American people. Today, there are areas administered by the National Park Service in more than 35 states, and in Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Alaska and the Virgin Islands.

Why settle for less than Blue Chip performance?

It doesn't take a new GMC owner long to spot the difference—especially if he's just switched from another make truck. Take the way every Blue Chip GMC is "engineed". An ultra-modern power plant gives him flashing response, sparkling road-pace—and record fuel economy. Hydra-Matic* is another eye-opener. Right away he appreciates its time and effort saving in traffic. And later on, he cashes in on the big maintenance savings. And every trip he can carry a bigger load. For GMC chassis are rugged—GMC axles are extra-capacity. So he hauls more—and hauls it comfortably. GMC cabs are man-size and deep-cushioned. Recirculating ball-bearing steering makes handling free and easy. Close-quarters parking's a cinch with Safety Power Steering.*

And at every stop, a Blue Chip GMC attracts admiring attention. With that distinctive boulevard styling, it's a smart advertisement-on-wheels for any business. One for your kind of truck-work? Our truck specialists will help you select just the Blue Chip model that will do your job most profitably. And our truck servicing experts always stand ready to help you keep it a Blue Chip top-profit-maker. Drop in and get acquainted!

Miss. Allocation Of Federal Funds Totals $118,041,244 In Three Years

Mississippi's allocation of federal funds under the new National highway act will total $118,041,244 during the first three years of a 13-year program.

Included in this figure is $16,980,488 for use on federal-aid secondary roads only, of which $8,490,244 goes to the counties.

In discussing the new federal-aid highway legislation, E. M. Johnson, Highway Department chief engineer, said it is a continuation of previous Federal Aid programs with emphasis on the Interstate System and some increase in authorizations for the regular Primary, Secondary, and Urban Systems. The National System of Interstate and Defense Highways is a part of the Federal Aid Primary System.

Adding matching funds, to be provided by the Highway Department, the 1957-58-59 construction program will total $151,944,401.

Breaking these figures down, over the three-year period, $40,535,312 will go for primary federal-aid highways; $16,980,488 for secondary routes; $7,035,298 as urban funds to be spent on designated highways within towns over 5,000; and $87,393,303 for interstate or defense highways.

Another added feature, Mr. Johnson points out, is the feature of "controlled access" which will apply to design and construction of the interstate system.

This in non-technical terms means, in complying with terms written into the law by Congress, that intended users of the interstate highway get on and off only at cloverleaves or interchanges and that safety for users of the highway will be increased.

Of the 40,000 miles of interstate highways in the Nation, 692.5 miles are in Mississippi comprising all of U. S. Highways 11, 51, 80 and 90. Bids for the first construction work on this system providing full control of access will be taken September 25th for a project at Laurel on U. S. Highway No. 11.
