UNOFFICIAL REPORTS came that clearing of undergrowth on east side of the road at the crossing was to have been done on Monday of this week. I went to press Wednesday no evidence of clearing has been seen. . . . We sincerely hope railroad people will make an effort to correct the danger as it exists at this crossing. Lives have been lost; bodies have been buried; property has been destroyed and it seems to us that the danger continue will serve to invite more tragedy. We think a proper approach matter would be for the Board to resolve, to request Southern Railway System to remove all undergrowth, overhanging limbs, and anything that tend to obstruct the view of motorists as they approach the crossing. . . . Safety of people who will use the crossing is at stake and reputation of the railroad company is involved.

WHAT WOULD YOU DO if you had a million dollars? We recently had a little article in the South-Telephone News that clearly showed what could happen if even a million; also when I finish reading it you may find out how each of us is dependent on the other. Here's the . . . V . . .

is responsible for American prosperity? The banker. "I," said the politician. "I," said the union leader. "I," said the businessman. "I," said the manufacturer. "I," said the laborer. . . .

help this hypothetical story help you decide: I dreamed I had a million dollars and never needed work again. "I," said my friend, "but what all? What was the rest of the dream?" "I," I said, "in my dream I dreamed of all the things I could do because I had a million dollars. I would have the fanciest money could buy. I would have a fine house. Only the sport and most expensive automobile would suit me from now on. . . . Only the richest and finest ever cover me again. I was in clover all right. My wishes had come true. . . . What happened?" my friend asked. I told him my story. It was more like a nightmare.

I dressed and, being hungry, went to breakfast. There wasn't a word from my wife. My wife was in tears. The day hadn't been delivered. Not a bottle of milk or the morning paper greeted me when I opened the door. I tried to telephone the grocery but the line was dead. I said, 'Oh, well, I'll take a walk and bring back something for breakfast.'

The street was deserted. Not a car, streetcar or cab was in sight. I walked on and on. Nothing in the world. Thinking something had happened only in my neighborhood. I went to another. Not even a car was moving. Then people began to appear on the street—only a few; then many; then hundreds. I joined them and began asking questions: 'What has happened? Where can I buy some groceries?' Then I got the jolt. Someone said, 'Don't you know? Everybody has a million dollars and now has to work any more.'

At first I was stunned. I thought that somehow a mistake, a mistake had been made. There was no mistake. It was true. Everybody had a million dollars and thought that work was over for him. Then it dawned on me as never before that all of us are dependent on all of the rest of us; that to a small extent at least my labor is a place, a part, in the total effort of mankind. With an anguished I tossed to the winds even the thought of a million dollars. Then I woke up. My dream was over. The sun was shining, the morning, my wife rattling the dishes. I looked out the window and saw a world of people.

Truck Burns On Highway 72-W

A Gordons Transport truck caught fire Tuesday night of this week and burned all night and all day Wednesday. The fire occurred on highway 72 about five miles from Iuka in front of the J. L. Bishop home.

A flat tire was said to have caused the fire. The driver, W. J. Bargett of Memphis, stopped because of the flat. After placing flares in proper spots for safety he caught a ride to Corinth to obtain help in fixing the flat. While he was gone the tires caught fire. Highway Patrolman Audie Marlar called the Iuka fire department to aid in extinguishing the blaze and it was thought at one time the fire was out. However, floor of the trailer had been burned through, igniting the more than $20,000.00 worth of cargo, and when Mr. Bargett returned to his truck he found it in flames.

The truck was loaded with miscellaneous items consisting of shoes, cigars, oil filters, mower blades, and a number of other items.

SENSING THE NEWS

By THURMAN SENSING

EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT

Southern States Industrial Council

"THE NEW SOUTH"

Less than three decades ago, the South was pointed out as an impoverished region of the land and its people were described as "ill-clothed, ill-housed, and ill-fed."

Actually, neither those who made such comments nor the people of the South themselves at the time knew the meaning of real poverty.

It was during the days following the Civil War that the South knew real poverty. At that time the people of the South were left as impoverished and as destitute as perhaps any people anywhere after any war.

The investments of the South were in large part wiped away, the property was destroyed and the land was laid waste. "Cash money" was hard to come by, and the people had to scabble hard for the bare necessities of life, to say nothing of the luxuries.

Henry W. Grady, of Georgia, dramatically illustrated the situation in the South at the time in the most famous of his lectures, "The New South." Grady did not make his fame as a humorist, but as a newspaper man and lecturer. However, he used humor to good advantage, and if he mixed it with seriousness, perhaps it was all the more effective.

Grady's famous lecture was delivered in New York City not too long after General Sherman's devastating "March through Georgia," yet he paid his respects to Sherman in the lecture by saying that the Georgia people had a pretty good opinion of him as a general but they did think he was sort of careless with fire!

This lecture is quite often referred to as the first rumbling of the resurgence in the economy of the South which was to follow and which has been steadily advancing ever since. But the present generation in the South would do well to remind themselves once in a while of what their forebears endured during those days, and would do well to be familiar with the well-known quote from this lecture whereby Grady attempted to call attention to the desperate need that the South manufacture some of its own raw materials into finished goods:

"I attended a funeral once in Pickens County in my state. A funeral is not usually a cheerful object to me unless I could select the subject. I think I could, without going a hundred miles from here, find the materials for one or two cheerful funerals. Till, this funeral was peculiarly sad. It was a poor 'one-gallus' fellow, whose breeches struck him under the armpits and hit him at the other end about the knee—he didn't believe in décolleté clothes. They buried him in the midst of a marble quarry—they cut through solid marble to make his grave—and yet a little tombstone they put above him was from Vermont. They buried him in the heart of a pine forest, and yet the pine coffin was imported from Cincinnati. They buried him within touch of an iron mine, and yet the nails in his coffin and the iron in the shovel that dug his grave were imported from Pittsburgh. They buried him by the side of the best sheep-grazing country on the earth and yet the wool in the coffin bands and the coffin bands themselves were brought from the North."

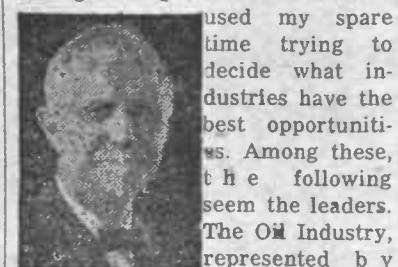

"The South didn't furnish a thing on earth for that funeral but the corpse and the hole in the ground. There they put him away and the clouds rattled down on the coffin, and they buried him in a New York coat and a Boston pair of shoes, and a pair of breeches from Chicago and a shirt from Cincinnati, leaving him nothing to carry into the next world with him to remind him of the country in which he lived and for which he fought for four years, but the chilled blood in his veins and the marrow in his bones."

Read these lines—and then look at the South now, which for many years has been advancing at a more

Industries Having Best Opportunities And Business Discussed By Columnist

By Roger W. Babson

Babson Park, Mass., May 23.

During the past winter I have used my spare time trying to decide what industries have the best opportunities. Among these, the following seem the leaders. The Oil Industry, represented by the large companies. The Chemical Industry, in which I consider the American Agricultural Chemical Co. of Florida one of the best. Household Heating by uranium, with American Radiator and Standard Sanitary the most conservative and National U.S. Radiator perhaps the best speculation. Electronics and Thermodynamics, with Westinghouse Air Brake perhaps the best speculation. Earthmoving Machinery, with Caterpillar Tractor the most speculative and International Harvester perhaps the most conservative purchase. The Microwave Industry, of which Hughes Products of Los Angeles and the Motorola Co. of Chicago are among the leaders. Greeting Cards, with a Gibson, Hallmark, or Norcross trademark. The Broadcasting of Power for small kitchen utensils may be developed by the Radio Corporation of America.

Reasons For The Above Selections There are four basic factors which I am considering in selecting these industries:

(1) Labor Shortage. This will continue due to the desire for four more years of education and for retirement at 65, and to other factors which will offset the population growth. This will further strengthen the power of Labor Unions.

(2) Automation. At first glance this should cause unemployment, but automation will be so expensive that it will come about only slowly. Furthermore, although automation reduces greatly the number of employees needed, yet the quality of the employees needed will be considerably upgraded. Automation for many years will barely offset the possible shortage of labor under present conditions.

(3) Inflation. We ought to fight inflation in any form, but it will slowly creep up on us, resulting in a gradual increase in the cost of living. Of course, if World War III should come, the value of the dollar will drop from 50 cents to 25 cents, but I am not looking for anything like this now.

(4) Government Expenses, barring World War III, should hold fairly steady. The development of missiles should reduce defense expenses in both the Navy and Army. This should offset any increase arising from the growth of bureaucratic government.

Other Trends To Watch (1) Higher Education will be considered a necessity. Not only will teachers receive higher salaries rapid rate than the country as a whole. "The New South" of which Henry Grady dreamed is now here, containing all the necessary elements for sound and enduring prosperity and beginning to utilize them to the fullest. The South is inevitably destined to become the most prosperous region of the nation.

As we approach the 107th anniversary of his birth on May 24th, we should pause and pay tribute to Henry W. Grady!

ies, but they must work harder to earn the same by having double sessions, by the further use of television, and by proper grading. Anytime there may be discovered a completely new revolutionary system of education. Colleges will cease as residence schools and become day schools with elaborate parking facilities.

(2) Automobiles and Parking. Unless the trend for larger cars and automobile accidents soon turn downward, with greatly increasing "4 lane" highways, the automobile industry will be leveling off. There will be more money in providing parking facilities than in the sale of automobiles.

(3) Community Churches. The Church is the hope of America, but young people are giving less attention to formal creeds and the old religious dogmas. Denominations are meaning less to the coming generation. I forecast a great growth in community churches attended by a large number of people of different denominations. Churches will be located adjacent to municipal playgrounds, lakes, rivers, etc.

(4) Shopping Centers for retail stores will be followed by brain centers for insurance companies, legal firms, architects, etc. The suburban population definitely will increase, attracting churches, YMCA's, and other organizations, as well as retail stores. As the working population grows and working hours lessen, the time given to sports will increase; in fact, the sale of sporting goods will increase. Stores in the downtown metropolitan cities will gradually appeal more to men who have not the time to visit shopping centers. With self-service properly developed, there will always be a field for self-service specialty stores, variety stores, and the up-to-date "dime store" in the dense downtown districts of all cities.

Poultry

Chickens or hens that get too hot cause severe poultry losses. Heat losses have been relatively light in Mississippi during past years, but in other parts of the nation, losses have been serious.

When birds get too hot, you face a loss of egg production; birds will just not eat. Broilers will not gain nearly as fast as when they are kept cool. Sometimes in extreme cases, chickens will die from becoming over heated.

Here are a few items you can do to keep your birds as cool as possible this year. Make sure that your poultry house is opened up on all four sides from sill to plate. Provide roof top ventilators—these ventilators when running the length of the house make the temperature 5 to 10 degrees cooler.

Make sure that you have plenty of watering space. The birds need more water in hot weather. Turn the lights on at night so that the birds can eat in relatively cooler atmosphere. They will eat more, grow faster and make you more money.

Make sure that your floor litter is shallow. Two or three inches deep is plenty for summer time.

For emergency use during extremely hot weather, have some fans or some watering equipment to cool down the house.

5-Acre Corn Contest

The 5-acre Corn Contest for Mississippi will be conducted again this year. Rules and regulations are as follows: (1) Contestants may enter only one 5-acre plot, (2) Entry blanks must be filed with Agricultural workers prior to July 1. These blanks are available at your County Agent's Office. (3) Each entrant will be required to keep a record on practices and production. (4) All plots must have 5-Acre in one block, and (5) Records must be completed and in State Office by December 1.

Cotton

Make the first cotton cultivations shallow. This will not disturb the young root system and the plant keeps growing. If you failed to get enough nitrogen down at planting time, side dress as soon as possible. Place the side dressing 6 to 10 inches distance from the drill and about four inches deep.

Have you noticed dead blotches on leaves or abnormal swellings on the stem and roots of plants in your vegetable or flower garden? They are signs of nematode damage.

Another common sign is the galls or knots formed on plant roots. And bulb nematodes work in bulbs and stems and produce galls and stunted growth.

These tiny white, round worms attack most all crops and ornamental plants. They live and breed in the soil. When full grown the nematode is seldom longer than one-eighth of an inch. You can't see it; just the signs that it's there damaging your plants.

Sterilizing the soil with either steam or chemicals gives best control. You may apply a liquid chemical fumigant broadcast or in a furrow or broadcast a granular fumigant evenly over the soil.

This granular fumigant may also be used to side dress living plants and to treat areas around trees and large plants.

For names of fumigants to use and information on using them, call your home demonstration agent at Telephone 2391, or visit her office in Tishomingo County Farm Improvement Association Warehouse, Iuka.

Wrinkle - Free Finishes

Does your pile of clothes to be ironed seem to double and triple as the weather gets warmer?

To help keep your head above water when it comes to summer ironing, inquire about and buy clothing with wrinkle-resistant finishes.

Treated cottons, linens, rayons and nylons don't need laundering so often because they shed soil as well as wrinkles. When you do have to launder them, it's usually easier to iron. Light-weight cotton, voile and gingham, wash the wrinkle-resistance very well. Most treated rayon show some wrinkles as quality linens may wrinkle extent after treatment, but get a rumpled look.

As you shop, you can see effectiveness of a finish by ironing the material in your own home and sheds creases. Look for a label stating whether the finish is permanent.

To Keep Nylons White

To keep nylons white, separate white garments separately. Wash nylons thoroughly and carefully, using plenty of water. If your water is hard, synthetic detergent or a water, and also use a detergent in the rinse water. Soap combines with hard water and leaves a gray deposit.

Do not use extremely hot water. It will cause nylons to stretch. In using an automatic, do not the temperature above 120 degrees. Keep your iron at lowest temperature.

Follow directions on labels and note particularly "cautions" given.

Mary Leslie Williams is ironing this week in Memphis her mother, Mrs. Dorothy and her uncle and aunt. Mrs. James Lee Deaton.

Iuka Students Win State Honors On Art Entries Submitted Through Club

Two Iuka students won state honors on their drawings at the recent state convention of Mississippi Federation of Women's Clubs which is held annually at the school held at New Albany. Their entries were submitted through the courtesy of the Thursday Club, sponsor of the local art contest which is held annually at the school gymnasium.

Douglas Nixon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Minor Nixon, was awarded 2nd place in the junior high division, a class higher than he had originally entered. His color drawing entitled, "My Home," had previously taken first place ribbons and cash awards at both the local and district contests. He was also a first place winner in the local contest held in 1955. Douglas is eleven years old and a 5th grade student.

Second Time State Winner

Judy Holtsford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Holtsford, won State honors for the second time. She placed third this year on her color drawing, "Toilers of the Sea," and in 1955 placed second on her charcoal drawing, "Ship at Sea."

Judy's entry was judged this year in the class A division which is for children who have had training in art. Her drawing had been entered previously in the local and district contest in the junior high division—those who have had no training. It won first place on both occasions.

Judy was a district winner in 1956, and a local, district, and state winner in 1955.

The Thursday Club began sponsoring an art contest in which students at Iuka school could participate in 1955. Much interest was shown and the contest is now an annual event which takes place early in the spring. Entries submitted by the students are displayed in the school gymnasium. This year's contest drew 311 entries.

Each year members of the Thursday Club go all-out in securing a qualified person to judge the drawings. This year, Mrs. Jewel Deaton Armstrong, a native of Iuka, who had taught art in New Mexico for the past several years, served as judge. Other artists, who have had the privilege of judging during the past years are Hugh Latta of Corinth and Mrs. Mae Phelps of Booneville.

Each year the contest has revealed new talent and artistic ability which is remarkably prevalent among the children attending Iuka schools. The increasing interest, and the effort to keep alive this talent which prevails in the youth of the community is largely due to the efforts of the current Penny Art chairman, Mrs. John H. Allen, and Mrs. J. D. Finch, who has served as chairman for the past two years. Mrs. Finch is currently filling the office of district art chairman.

TREES—WHAT ARE TREES?

Trees may mean many things to many people. To the poet Joyce Kilmer there was nothing quite "as lovely as a tree." To a lumberman, a tree is apt to be so many board feet, while a paper mill executive may see it as reams of the paper on which his business depends. A conservationist, on the other hand, looks at a tree as one of the instruments whereby nature maintains her balance—a balance that can be disrupted only at great peril.

This balance in nature is imperative for the continued existence of man on this plant Earth. He cannot continue to pollute stream water so that nothing will live in it. He cannot continue to overgraze his grasslands and the forest lands without paying an even more frightful penalty than already is being exacted.

The landowners of Tishomingo county should heed the cries of the land that has been denuded and lies gashed with gullies and depleted of its productive energy. The citizens, all the citizens, of Tishomingo county should not continue to ignore the close relationship between a drop of rain and the continued productivity of our land. For rain is the key-rain falling on the soil. It can be friendly and nurture forth the green plants upon which, in the final analysis, all life depends. Or it can be a tearing, keen chisel, cutting away the rich topsoil which alone supports those plants.

Trees make up the forest, and forests are the great reservoirs that store-up and hold the ground-water and feed it into the thirsty land that produces our so-called farm crops.

Indirectly trees are our protectors, they are nature's tools for protecting the land from pounding, cutting, raindrops, yet they open the land with their roots to permit the water to soak in and be saved until needed by crops that support man.

The USDA Soil Conservation District Commissioners commend the landowners of Tishomingo county for the fine job they are doing on their woodland. Much has been done, more remains to be done. Regardless of what you see as a tree, plant it, protect it, and care for it, and it will care for us,—all of us.

June 30 Deadline For Many To File For SS Disability Protection

For many disabled people failure to file an application with their Social Security office before the end of June will mean the loss of all their social security disability protection, and, for some, it will also mean the loss of their rights to any old-age and survivors insurance benefits for themselves and their families in the future. Also, should a disabled person die without having filed an application to protect his social security disability rights, the survivors benefits payable to his family under the social security law may be greatly reduced. This statement was made by Hugh Tigrett, Manager of the Tupelo, Mississippi Social Security Office today.

Mr. Tigrett also stated that while his office has been accepting applications from disabled workers for some time, many of those eligible have not yet applied.

A disabled person must meet certain work requirements. He must have worked in a job covered by social security for at least 5 out of the 10 years before he became disabled, and at least 1½ out of the 3 years just before his disability began.

Hens In Cages Compared With Those On Floor

State College, Miss.—Many commercial egg producers now keep their laying hens in individual cages rather than housing them in groups on the floor. Poultrymen of the state needed definite information on the advantages of the two systems so the Mississippi Agricultural Experiment Station set up a study which would provide a comparison of cages versus floor operations.

Two houses were built at the Northeast Branch Station at Verona for use in the study, each with a capacity of 500 hens. All conditions were as near identical as possible except that cages were used in one house and not in the other. In another test at State College cages 8 inches wide were compared with others 10 inches wide. The following conclusions were drawn from the study:

1. Initial cost for entering each type of operation will vary; however the average initial cost per bird will be about 75 cents more per bird in cages than in the floor units.

2. In order to keep the cage unit to full capacity, replacements must be started every other month or at regular intervals.

3. The cage unit will result in more uniform egg production throughout the year. This uniformity is highly desirable for the overall industry.

4. Eight-inch cages will give equal results to ten-inch cages for the Leghorn type bird. This reduction in cage size will result in an increase of 252 more cages in a 1000-capacity house.

5. The over-all mortality was less in cages than on the floor.

6. It took slightly less pounds of feed to produce a dozen eggs in cages than on the floor.

7. Labor income for the first year's operation was in cages.

The complete report published by James E. Albritton and Lester I. It appears in the May Mississippi Farm Research on request from the Station at State College.

Field Work Of Miss. Forest Survey 74% Complete

According to area Forester, Collins M. Akin, field work of the Mississippi forest survey being conducted by the U. S. Forest Service, with assistance from industry, individuals and organizations in the State, is 74 per cent complete and it is hoped that this phase of the survey will be finished by the end of summer, according to Joe Weatherly, deputy state forester and secretary of the Mississippi Forest Survey Committee.

Akin said, a total of 3,237 sample forest locations were selected at the start of the survey as study plots in five sections of the state. These sections include the Delta, North, Central, South and Southwest.

"As of May 4," Akin said, "work on 2,403 locations was finished, with 100 percent of the work completed in the South section comprised of 14 counties."

"The findings of this survey will reveal among other things," Akin further stated, "the amount of standing timber and other forest products in the State by species, location and size, annual growth and drain of timber and much other useful information."

Man of Peace
Lesson for May 19

In a hospital for the patients may think the crazy. In a land of a man with only two legs deformed. Maybe that's world today people as somewhat "touched". This is a warning world that the heathen ancestors of most readers of this column followed a religion in which heaven was thought to be a place where fighting went on all day and drinking all night. But north-Europeans are not the only fighters world. Wars and small, have been going parts of the world since times. This Twentieth the bloodiest of all wars than formerly, but serious ones.

In the famous the Wells of Gerar, which Scripture this week we giving up his comfort, and even his rights, to keep peace. He moved farther into the wilderness, no return on all the labor the wells; and he actually what he had a perfect night—the wells themselves. The nations of the now dead, so dead that cently—we know better were some who thought references to them must be. Only university professors about the Girgashites, stines and all the rest, don't much care. But what of Isaac? His name is in the family descended from found everywhere in the Bible. The sons of Isaac are the indestructible folk of history. God sent his Son into the world. It was to the sons of Isaac first came, not to the Philistines.

Survey Started On Tombigbee-Tennessee Rivers Studying Needed Inland Waterway Feasibility

By Delmus Harden
Tombigbee Valley
Authority
On May 6, the U. S. Army Engineers began a new study to determine the economic feasibility of the construction of the Tennessee-Tombigbee Inland Waterway. This project has already been determined as "economically feasible" at one time by the Army Engineers in 1938, but the money was not appropriated. Following the war another study was made in 1945, in which the opposite was found due to the increase in construction costs.

This time it is the hope of both the engineers and those who are interested in the development of the Tombigbee Valley that a favorable report will be submitted. "I can just see the thousands of smokestacks bellowing forth smoke that means employment for the people of Mississippi in this great potential 'Ruhr Valley of our state,'" said Governor J. P. Coleman, in a recent visit to the area.

The United States government got interested in the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway in 1874 and Congress directed a survey be made by the Corps of Engineers. They found insufficient economic benefits, but largely because the South had been impoverished by the Civil War a few years before. New investigations were conducted on the project in 1913, 1923 and again in 1932.

Results of the current survey could shift the project from an "Inactive" to an "Active" status thus making it eligible for federal funds.

It is estimated that the work will be completed on the survey by September. "The data collected will then be analyzed according to Lt. Col. Raymond O. Miller, assistant district engineer at Mobile who is heading up the work.

The study will be concerned primarily with potential traffic and shippers that could be expected to use the waterway. That traffic study, based on shippers' cost, will largely determine whether or not the "big ditch" with a series of ten locks in its stretch from Iuka, Miss., to Demopolis, Ala., is worth the construction price.

Dams and Locks
Most of the proposed dams and locks would be in the Mississippi end of the Tombigbee's course around Fulton, Amory, Aberdeen and Columbus. It would pour millions of construction dollars into northeast Mississippi, inducing greater expansion to the already growing chemical industrial development activities of that area.

If the federal government abandons its on-again-off-again waterways project along the Tombigbee then a two-state mutual compact between Mississippi and Alabama may swing into action on its own accord. Recently, Gov. J. P. Coleman of Mississippi and Gov. James E. Folsom of Alabama met in Jackson and agreed to look at the Tombigbee project with a positive approach for action.

Tombigbee Is Best Route
An Army Engineer described

the proposed Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway link through Northeast Mississippi as "the best route that has been studied to date" in a letter made public last week.

Louis A. Eckl, executive editor of The Florence Times and publicity chairman of Alabama's Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway Assn. released the letter from Lt. Col. R. O. Miller, assistant Mobile District engineer.

Miller answered questions about the effect of requests for study of other routes than the one through Northeast Mississippi now authorized by Congress.

"The Current Study being conducted is simply to determine the present economic justification of the waterway along the authorized route," Miller wrote. "A detailed study of alternate routes would consume considerable time and upon completion would have to be submitted to Congress for final action."

Miller then discussed several possible alternates in North Alabama which would link the Tennessee River with the Warrior, pointed to the greater height of the ridges which would have to be crossed than of the hills in the path of the Mississippi route.

The Engineers officer said the best route for a Warrior River connection would be through the gap near Brooksville where the headwaters of Locust Fork and Big Spring Creek could be connected with a summit pool at an elevation 740 feet above sea level.

"Even With the water supply that would be available from the intercepted drainage area supplemented by a system of small reservoirs in adjoining drainage basins, a very definite limit would be placed on the number of tows that could traverse the waterway," he declared.

"Despite the fact that there might be certain local economic advantages to the waterway passing through the Birmingham area, in view of the above it is believed that the authorized route up the Tombigbee to the Tennessee River is the best that has been studied to date.

"Furthermore, when you consider the size locks contemplated—110 by 600 feet—and the lifts involved, all indications are that the only feasible-type connecting waterway would be one in which the lockage water could be diverted by gravity from the Tennessee River.

"About the only point on the divide where this is feasible is along the presently authorized route where the summit pool would be at elevation 413, the elevation of Pickwick Lake 340 feet above the pool at existing Demopolis Dam."

or the egg, is not being debated in the Magnolia State. It is a fact and not debatable that Mississippians are increasing the production of both—the chicken and the egg. Mississippi ranks seventh as the chicken house of the nation, putting broilers on American tables from California to Maine. This is startling when you know that ten years ago chickens in Mississippi were looked upon as something for the farmers' own Sunday dinner, and certainly not an object of much commerce. With the present average of 1,300,000 chicks per week placed on farms in Mississippi for broiler production and approximately 1,600,000 hens, from breeder and commercial laying flocks, being offered to the market makes Mississippi a logical location for additional poultry processing plants and canning plants that use chicken in their canned foods.

Advantages Of Being A 4-H Club Member

Below is a theme written by Eddie Edwards, senior 4-H club member of the Burnsville club.

Today in this world of ever changing society we find the need of training of the physical, social, spiritual and mental development of our lives. I think that the 4-H club at Burnsville is accomplishing these stages of development in this year's 4-H work.

In our physical growth we have had the opportunity to attend the 3 day 4-H club camp, each year, held at Tishomingo State Park. Then every third month the Junior Council of the county held a party at the Lodge of Tishomingo State Park where there was recreational games played and square dancing afterward.

The social growth has been attained at the 4-H club rally, judging contest, and junior Council's gatherings where all of the 4-H clubs have been attending and taking part in the programs. These meetings are the type where you meet and associate with other people and learn new people and the type of work they are doing in 4-H.

Our spiritual growth has come through the devotional and spiritual meetings held at each club meeting in our school. This is, we consider, one of the most important growths to be considered in our 4-H club.

Then our Mental development has come through the work on our records, and the training Mr. Geno and Miss Carter have given to us. They have taught such things as, Clothing and canning, by Miss Carter, and care for cattle, the dusting for disease and other farm chores involved by the boys, by Mr. Geno. These have taught us and trained us to know what to do, and know how to do at the right time, with our projects.
