THIS COUNTY is losing population at a terrific rate, according to a bulletin published in April by the Mississippi State College and released last week. Title of the bulletin is "Estimated Population of Tishomingo County, 1950-56" and one of the factors used in compiling the estimations is school enrollment. Population of Tishomingo county in 1950 as given by the U. S. Census was 15,544; that decreased to 13,100 in 1955. Population of our neighboring counties for 1950 and the 1956 estimation was: Alcorn 27,158; Itawamba 19,810; Prentiss 19,810; Itawamba 17,216; and Itawamba 17,216. The estimations covered a period from April 1, 1950 to July 1, 1956, and during those six years Tishomingo county lost 2,444; Alcorn county lost 1,858; Prentiss county lost 1,500, and Itawamba county lost 3,516. . . . Colored population in the county also dropped. The 1950 census gave us 806 Negroes and the six year estimation showed the colored population to be approximately 700 in 1956—a loss of about 200 in that period.

THE STATE, as a whole, lost in population. The 1950 census was 17,014. The 1956 population, estimated, was 2,123,700. Eleven counties in the state showed an increase over the six year period, being five on the Gulf Coast—George, Jackson, Harrison, Hancock, and Pearl River; One South county, Jefferson Davis; Adams county in the south on the Mississippi River; Hinds County, in the central section; Washington county on the Mississippi River, in the east central part; and Coahoma and Tunica counties in the northwestern section. Almost, all counties showed a decrease in the population of the state. . . . The decrease with the exception of Lowndes and Lee counties which showed about the same amount of residents over the six year period.

THE BULLETIN points out that counties showing an increase in population also show tremendous growth in industrial employment. This further proves the point, as has often been stated, that declining agricultural economy is giving way to industry and if industry is not in the immediate vicinity, then there is nothing for the citizen to do but to where the employment may be found. Our towns and county did not do better than to concentrate on weaving more industry and more employment.

EVEN THOUGH our section might be losing in population, we are in a while something comes along about which we can boast. This week, Tennessee river fish has been in the limelight for the nation. This piscatorial industry that is found most abundantly in our adjacent Pickwick lake was introduced by Tennessee's S. Sen. Kefauver in a contest with the Colorado trout sponsored by the state's Sen. John A. Carroll. Members of the U. S. Senate and other high officials ate 200 pounds of the blue cat on Tuesday of last week with the Colorado trout scheduled to be served on Friday, after which a decision is expected to be given as to which of the two kinds of fish tastes best. Naturally, there is no question in

And, as a clincher point in our argument, cooking of the cat was supervised by Fred Leabig of Pickwick, whom we know to be an absolute expert when it comes to preparing these blue babies for the table.

IUKA PEE WEE'S WIN IN SECOND ROUND OF N. MISS. PLAYOFFS

By Van Savell

The Iuka Pee Wees advances into the finals of the North Mississippi Kiddie League Playoffs last Friday with a 5-1 extra inning victory over Baldwin on the losing team's home ground.

Tommy Dean started for Iuka and went all the way giving up one hit and striking out 15 batters. The opposing pitcher, Harrelson, gave up 5 runs on 7 hits and struck out 11.

The hitting for Iuka was supplied by Donnie Brown with 3 and Jerry Holly with 2. Wesson got the only hit for Baldwin in the first inning.

The Pee Wees play in the finals on Friday of this week against Amory on a neutral field, and in all probability it will be a doubleheader with the Pee Wee's (age 9-12) and the Juniors (ages 13-15) playing to decide the Kiddie League Champions.

BOARD RECEIVES BEER
ELECTION PETITIONS

The County Board of Supervisors received petitions on Tuesday of

MAN INJURED BY FALLING TREE; IN KENNEDY HOSPITAL

It is reported that Hollis Floyd, a Korean veteran, about 25 years of age, received serious injuries when a tree fell on him Wednesday afternoon while he was cutting timber near Burnsville. Floyd was brought to Cosby clinic and after an examination Dr. Harry Cosby said he was confident that Floyd had a broken back and possible internal injuries. He was rushed to Kennedy veterans hospital in Memphis.

this week asking for an election outlawing the possession of beer, wine, or other alcoholic beverages. The petitions were presented to the Board by County Attorney Harry Rhine and contained 1152 names.

The Supervisors are in the process of purging the names to determine whether or not all signers are qualified voters. It is estimated that the county has approximately 4,500 eligible voters and, in order to call an election, the petitions must contain the names of at least 20 per cent of those qualified to vote.

If the Board finds the names of qualified electors in sufficient number and all other phases of the petition in line, then an election will be ordered by the Board and the county election commissioners will set the date and hold the election. Time of this election will probably be near the middle of September.

Hurt In Sunday
Morning Accident
At Drive-In On 72 E

Two persons received cuts and bruises and one a brain hemorrhage resulting from a head injury in an accident occurring at Sailor's Drive-In on highway 72 E about 9:20 Sunday morning.

Payne of Belmont, R-1, traveling east on Highway 72 in a '49 Ford stopped to let a conveyance pass before making a left hand turn into the drive-in. Pulling up behind her was a 1953 Mercury owned and operated by William Edmund Walker of Louisville, Ky. Another vehicle, a '48 Nash, approaching the scene behind Walker, rammed into the Mercury causing damage to it and the Ford. The Nash was owned and operated by Virgil Owen Moore of Iuka. The accident was investigated by the Highway Patrol and Moore was charged with reckless driving.

Judy Carroll Payne, 5½ months old daughter of Mrs. Payne, driver of the Ford, received head bruises and was carried to Cosby Clinic. Other occupants of this car were Billie Faye, Billy Boy, Sonja Louise, Jennie Lee and Barbara Gail Nunley.

Mrs. Ruben Walker, age 53, traveling in the Mercury, received a head injury causing a brain hemorrhage. Also in the car were her husband, James, Jerry, and Glendall Wayne Walker.

Mr. Moore received cuts, bruises and lacerations about the head.

Numerous Surveys Show Newspaper
Advertising Is Preferred By Public

A good salesman never forces himself on a customer. Or, as a merchant puts it "You just sell anything to a person who is bored or irritated." This principle of salesmanship should be remembered when selling advertising on a mass basis through advertising. Thus, a business man who is careful to select advertising medium where his message will be favorably received will choose the local newspaper with confidence. For the local newspaper is the only retail advertising medium which can command the local merchant's attention to talk when the customer wishes to listen.

"It is only newspapers which can give a potential buyer a message any time of day or night. The newspaper reader does not have to be at a certain place at a certain time to get an advertiser's message. He has only to open the pages of this newspaper wherever he is."

Numerous impartial surveys have shown that newspaper advertising is preferred by the public. In a recent survey by Northwestern University, 92 percent of those questioned said they like newspapers with advertising; only 33 percent said they wanted TV with advertising.

Such surveys and expert opinions support the experiences of our local merchants who have found that nearly everyone in this community listens and likes it when shopping information is presented in this newspaper.

ORDERLY ROOM—Sgt. John Paden, left, Sgt. Jess Oaks and Sgt. Harvey Honeycutt, occupy the orderly room (a truck trailer, in the field) of Co. C, 198th Tank battalion. The local guard unit will again go through a rigid training schedule commencing Sunday when they depart for Camp Shelby, Miss. Sgt. Honeycutt is unable to be with the unit this year, he being in Kennedy Veterans hospital in Memphis.

CLEANING MESS GEAR—This scene will be enacted many times this year when the local guard unit goes on its annual summer training encampment at Camp Shelby. Cleanliness is one of the important items taught on these encampments. Each man will be responsible for his own mess gear and some possibly will learn the value of clean eating utensils to ward off the dangers of stomach infections. In the picture, are, left to right, Raymond Cox, Jimmy Oaks, Sgt. Dickie Lomenick, Eugene Reynolds, and Jerry Ware. Jimmy Oaks is now a cadet at West Point.

SENSING THE NEWS

By THURMAN SENSING
EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT

Southern States Industrial Council

"AS LAMBS TO THE SLAUGHTER"

One of the most degrading of the many degrading incidents that have followed upon the heels of the infamous "Black Monday" decision of the United States Supreme Court of May 17, 1954 is scheduled to take place in Nashville, Tennessee when the public schools open in September, 1957. At that time the first grades in all the public schools of the city are ordered to be integrated.

Thus will be upset a way of life that has existed throughout Nashville's long and honorable existence as a leading educational center in the South. At that time, if history is any guide, integration may take place but disintegration will set in.

The reason that integration of the first grades is so degrading is that these little children, entering upon their first experience in the educational system of the nation that will determine what kind of people they will be throughout their whole lives, will be offered up as sacrifices upon the altar of authoritarianism.

Entirely innocent themselves of the meaning of the experience upon which they are entering and necessarily depending upon the guidance of those who control their lives, the authorities who determine these matters upon the local level will force them into a system and into an association that cannot help but bring about deterioration in their individual lives and into their culture as a whole. First grade children cannot know that choice of association and purity of race are highly desirable in this world, in fact are essential for the preservation of their freedom and the attainment of their highest capabilities as individuals. There is something wrong with one who has no pride of race—and it should be noted this applies to all races alike!

Nevertheless, local officials—leading citizens of the community—charged with the responsibility of operating the public schools are going right along with the plan. If these citizens believe wholeheartedly in integration, why don't they start at the other end of the school, where the pupils have at least by this time gained some measure of judgment for themselves and some realization of what it all means, instead of forcing it on innocent beginners who don't know what it's all about? That's the Hitler-Russian way of doing things—brainwash little children in their formative years and thus make them easily governed in later life.

As a matter of fact, if the citizens of Nashville, who are so complacent about the whole matter, really believe in the principle of integration, then they should apply it to their civic clubs, country clubs, churches and everywhere, else—regardless of whether or not these organizations are supported by public funds. Or don't they place principles first?

These officials seem to be giving as a reason for their supineness in the matter the advice of their attorneys, who tell them there is nothing else they can do since the federal judge has said integration must proceed in Nashville on this basis. These attorneys would seem to be docile disciples of an authoritarian philosophy which freely grants the government the unquestioning power to exact obedience and the right to determine what its people should believe or do.

It is a terrible thing for people to say that because the Supreme Court of the United States says something is the law that it must be obeyed and there is nothing we can do about it. This is a reversion to the philosophy of the Divine Right of Kings. This argument was undoubtedly used during the American Revolution by the Tories who said that whatever orders King George III handed down were the law and must be obeyed; that there was nothing that could be done about it. If everybody had felt that way, there would never have been a United States of America.

After all, the court of public opinion is the greatest court in the world, and to say that Government in any of its branches cannot be questioned is the first step to some sort of dictatorial rule.

Neither should the people of the Nashville community be thrown off the track by obnoxious outsiders who might come into the community and conduct rabble-raising efforts to maintain segregation in the public schools. Such individuals do the cause they are supposedly supporting much more harm than good, so much so, in fact, that it can well be imagined they are actually in the employ of the other side.

This is a matter for sensible, patriotic people to handle in a reasoned manner. The real issue at stake in this whole question is that of states' rights. If New York wants integration, that should be their privilege. If Mississippi wants segregation, with equal opportunity for all, that, also, should be their privilege. If we are going to completely destroy the right of the states to govern their internal affairs and place all power in the hands of a centralized Washington bureaucracy, then we no longer have the kind of government under which we have grown and prospered. We have, in fact, betrayed the heritage left us by our forefathers and torn down our greatest safeguard of freedom.

BABSON DISCUSSES RETIREMENT

By Roger W. Babson

Babson Park, Mass., August 8. The present system of retiring faithful and efficient workers is probably good for the junior employees. It gives them a chance for promotion. But the younger ones must indirectly contribute to the support of those being retired through paying one half of their Social Security and other benefits. Some one must pay the bills.

Every Case Different

In many cases compulsory retirement is a blessing to all concerned. Many workers are physically unable to continue at their usual manual labor or even at office work. This, however, does not justify children putting such parents into nursing homes. This procedure is becoming too common. There is money in nursing homes for the operators; but they are sad places to visit. When I see children ruthlessly put a parent into a nursing home, it makes me feel very sad.

It seems as if some semi-retirement, or half-time plan could often be used instead of full retirement. When I discuss this with employers they state that such an arrangement would upset their "stream lined" production system and their efficient office systems. This may be true in a few cases; but if this half-time arrangement were applied to all competitors, no one concerned would be handicapped.

Longer Vacations

Another suggestion is that retirement systems be based upon longer vacations, in both summer and winter. Instead of a worker going on half-time by working half a day every day, he could work all day when going to the plant or office but take two months off in summer and two months or more off in winter.

With some businesses this would be a less disrupting method of adjustment; but with other industries it would be more of a handicap. Therefore, why not amend the retirement regulations to give corporations their choice? Undoubtedly, labor unions would want to be a party to such decisions; but that, too, could be worked out.

An Important Warning

The most valuable advice which

I can give to readers who are approaching retirement is to avoid the temptation of going into business for themselves. If you want to take a salaried job with some other concern this is OK, provided it is not a company competing with the one from which you are retiring. Certainly it is bad ethics to retire from one company on a pension and then work for a competitor or start in business yourself as a competitor. In my opinion, this comes close to plain dishonesty.

I issue a special warning against starting or putting any money into a new business of any kind. I have seen thousands of cases where able retired persons have lost, after retirement, the money which they had earned and saved before retirement. This applies equally as well to successful businessmen as to employees. They have thought that because they made a success of 1 business, they could make a success of some other business. This has often proved a costly mistake.

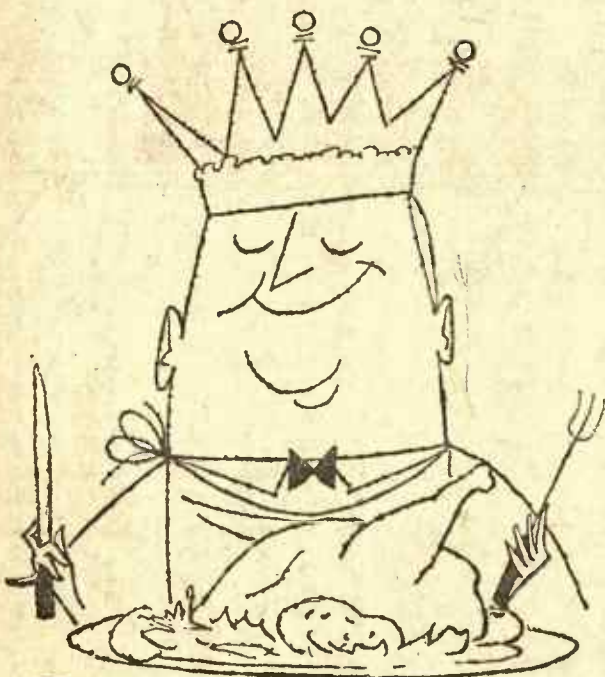

Luck Vs. Ability

Although these men had business ability when operating the business from which they had retired, their success was not due entirely to business skill. Other factors contributed to that success. A man may have entered his former business when the economy was young. The times, the atmosphere, or tax system, now be very different. They have operated at a different period in the business cycle, but the demand for the product may by now have changed. The person himself may be less vigorous or prone to advanced age; while a petition is now such that vigor and capital are needed.

I especially warn retired sons not to go to California, Florida or to some other "hot" state unless they can on a check of at least $20,000 sides Social Security benefits from home each month pension or as interest or dividend. Also, before you take any job where after retirement, how it will affect your Social Security and other benefits. Most cases, if you earn more than $1,200 per year you will lose Social Security.

Buster Honeycutt Profits As He Saves His Soil

By HIRAM A. JONES
Work Unit Conservationist
USDA-SCS

Recently, Mr. W. N. (Buster) Honeycutt was elected as a member of Tennessee River Soil Conservation District Board of Commissioners. As a member of this board, Mr. Honeycutt will be helping landowners to establish sound soil and water conservation practices on their land.

Buster is particularly well suited for this job as District Commissioner because he can preach what he practices. Those who have visited his farm know he is an excellent farmer. He has pastures—not an area fenced in for cows and other livestock to walk about in. On the upland there is bermuda and lespedeza as well as dallis grass.

On the more level and wetter land he has Fescue and clover. His purebred herd of whiteface cattle have turned these good pasture plants into dollars of profit for him.

New let us consider Buster's row crops, his cotton and corn. This year he has a total of 18 acres planted to cotton, only about 5 acres of which is on his farm, at present he has prospects of producing an average of more than two (2) bales of cotton per acre. He hopes to produce more than 40 bales of cotton on these 18 acres.

Mr. Honeycutt has always produced above average yields of corn on his farm. He is not a hundred bushel per acre man, but 50 to 60 bushels of corn per acre is not an unusual yield for him.

From the standpoint of soil and water conservation Mr. Honeycutt is doing an excellent job because of the dense cover he keeps on his land.

Cotton that will yield two or more bales per acre, and corn that will produce 50 or more bushels per acre afford a much greater ground cover than will puny, poor, cotton and corn yielding one half bale or 18 bushels per acre.

The soil conservation service technicians have observed that usually the best conservation farmers are those who produce the highest per acre yield and earn the greatest net profit per acre. Buster has proved that it is profitable to save the soil.

Something Cold

On a hot summer afternoon, family members or guests at a party look for something cold to drink. What about punch? Made from fresh, canned or frozen fruit juices, with a carbonated beverage added.

To help keep the punch cool, chill the juices thoroughly before they are used. For a large gathering where the punch may stand for several hours, the wise hostess will freeze some of the juices to go into the punch. The frozen juices can then be floated into the punch later.

Fall Gardens

More and more folks are planting and harvesting good supplies of vegetables from fall gardens. If you'd like to join them this year, we have a publication called The Fall and Winter Garden at your home agent's office. Just ask for a copy.

It gives a planting calendar, tells varieties to plant and some rules for planting.

Controls for Silverfish

You may find more damage from silverfish during hot weather.

Be on the watch for the fast-moving silvery pests. They like vegetable foods with a high starch or sugar content and are very fond of moist wheat flour.

You may find them feeding on sizing in paper, book bindings, wall paper and starch insulation materials. They can damage severely fabrics as rayon, curtains and starched clothing.

Five percent DDT or two percent chlordane or 0.5 percent dieldrin household sprays will control silverfish.

Apply the spray thoroughly on surfaces over which the insects crawl. Be careful not to use sprays around open flames.

For control of this and other household insect pests, ask for a copy of Publication 245, Kill Household Insects. It gives controls also for clothes moths, ants, roaches, red bugs and mosquitoes.

Electric Cord Care

Be careful of that cord on your electric iron: Or the one on the electric skillet, fan or any other appliance. A defective cord can cause an accident or damage the appliance.

Use care in disconnecting; pull the plug rather than the cord. Keep dry and clean. Wrap loosely around the appliance; be sure appliance is cool. Keep free of kinks, knots and sharp bends that may break fine wires.

COURTENAY FRY HOSTESS TO TEEN-AGERS

Miss Courtenay Fry was hostess to a group of teen-agers on Friday night when the group met at her grandfather's home on highway 25 north for a scavenger hunt.

Guests were divided into groups and each set out to obtain a list of various articles. The group led by Tony Gaines was the first to return to the Massey home with all the necessary items and each member of his party received a booby prize.

Returning to the Massey home the group engaged in a variety of games and concluded the evenings entertainment with a feast of Turkey sandwiches, potato chips, spiced peaches and apples, stuffed eggs, pickles, cake and cokes.

Among those joining in the fun were Faye Carmichael, Pat Foote, Ruth Thomas, Janette Clark, Sue King, Glynda Foote, and Carolyn Cain of Clinton, La., Tony Gaines, Richard and Roger Clark, Jerry Kay, Larry Enlow, William Carson, Jimmy Owen Phifer and Tommy Reynolds.

58 Traffic Deaths In July '57; 47, July '56

Commissioner of Public Safety Tom Scarbrough reports 58 traffic deaths in Mississippi during July, the largest monthly death toll to date this year.

The state Highway Patrol head stated that 18 of the 58 fatalities occurred off state and federal highways patrolled by his officers. These 18 died in 14 separate accidents.

Mississippi's traffic death toll during July 1956 was 47.

Nineteen state motorists perished in traffic accidents during the first week of July, one of the most disastrous weekly tolls on record. All 19 of these deaths occurred during the period considered the Fourth of July weekend, nine dying in a single accident near Oxford, Miss.

Four died in another accident a week later.

According to Commissioner Scarbrough, the increase in July deaths was due in part to these multiple deaths, 13 dead in two accidents, caused in one case by carelessness, coupled with speed.

Men Posing As Welfare Workers Are Frauds

Posing as representing the Welfare Department and promising clients that their checks will be raised, one or more persons are soliciting funds from recipients of welfare checks in North Mississippi. Requests for money made by the pair vary from $5.00 to $16.00.

These people are frauds. Anyone knowing these men, or having a good description of either of them or their car is requested and urged to contact either your county sheriff or the highway patrol and give these officials the information you have.

Information received in the State Welfare office indicates that there are possibly two white men. One is described as being red headed and of stocky build, the other merely as being slender.

Transportation used by the pair seems to change—if the operators are the same. One report says that a 1949 Pontiac was used, another section reports the use of a blue-green station wagon, but the make is not reported.

These men do not represent the Welfare Department and contributions made to them will only mean loss to those who give them money.

PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Biggs had all their children and their families at their home on Sunday. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Alton Biggs and family of Detroit, Michigan, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Biggs and children, Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Biggs and Charlotte, Jesse Biggs, Misses Rayma, Mary and Ruth Biggs. The group enjoyed a day of conversation and good food. Also visiting with them were Mrs. Julia Mars and Mrs. Coleman Barnes and children.

Promise to God

Lesson for August 11, 1957

A SURE way to lose any one's respect is to fail to keep a promise. If a promise simply cannot be kept, as in case of illness or accident, no one will hold a failure against you. But a man will more quickly make excuses for himself than others will make for him. The brighter side is true too: no better way can be found to build up a solid reputation than to become known as a person who always keeps promises once made. No brilliance, no charm, makes up for keeping promises. What a letter of introduction this would make: "The bearer is a young man of fine background. He graduated with honors. He has great charm of manner, his knowledge is enormous for his age. He has only one drawback: you can't depend on him."—!

Promising God
Belief in God is feeble, even among good people, than it ought to be. One proof of this is the fact that many people, if not most of them, will be deeply ashamed of not keeping their promises to human beings; but will not take very seriously their failure to keep promises made to God. If a man owes a church pledge, and also some local store, he will pay the store bill first, and if he can only pay one, you know which gets the cash. If "ratting" on promises made to God is taken lightly, it only shows how lightly men believe in God.

If the Bible teaches anything it is that promises made to him mean for more than when made to ordinary people. The short name for such promises is "vows." Protestants make them as well as Roman Catholics. A promise seriously made, either to do something for God, or for his people because they are his people (especially the church); or a promise solemnly made in God's presence, calling on his name as a witness, is a vow. As the Bible teaches, nobody has to make a vow; but once made, the vow must be kept. Examples of vows are those made at baptism (by the parents, if a child is involved, or by the one baptized if he is old enough), at confirmation or "joining the church," or when making a pledge of money to a church; or the vows taken by a bride and groom; as well as all sorts of private vows.

"He that sweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not," comes in for special praise, in the 15th Psalm. The story of Hannah tells of just such a person. She promised her first child to God. In her days and circumstances, this meant giving the child up and seldom seeing him again after the first few years. She had been bitter about her childlessness, and of course was overjoyed when little Samuel was born. Giving him up meant being childless all over again—but she kept her promise. She had five other children later, but she did not expect this when she presented her one son, her first-born, in the temple. It's easy to make promises, even easy to keep them when keeping them is pleasant. But your really devoted Christians, solid to the core, are those who keep their promises to God no matter what.

If Some One Knows
Human nature being what it is, even a promise to God is more likely to be kept if we know some one else knows about it. Hannah's vow was known to Eli the priest eventually, and we may guess that he suspected it from the start. No doubt this helped her to be faithful. So marriage vows are spoken not alone in God's presence but in the company of witnesses. So vows taken at joining the church, or confirmation, are taken in front of the whole congregation. This is why baptism, of a child or an adult, should never be private. If we were angels, a promise made to God in secret would be just as well kept as one made in public. But since we are human, and weak in faith, it helps if some ear besides God's hears our vows.

One of the best cotton insecticides in years it would be a mistake to stop poisoning at this time. Continue poisoning until the top bolls are matured enough that a weevil cannot do much damage as boll borer in first gear. Run tractor in first gear and spray full throttle and apply twenty pounds of insecticide. Boll weevils have been migrating and every farmer should watch his cotton field.

Management Of Summer Pasture
During August every pasture area should be rested about half the time. Even Bermuda and Bahia need resting this month. . . and both of these grasses will take more punishment than Dallis. It is hard for any plant to make much growth in hot, dry weather, especially if it is being overgrazed all the time.

Any summer pasture grass that starts putting up seed heads should be clipped to keep it in growing condition. Plants grow little after they seed out, if left in this seed maturing condition.

Although it does cost something to clip Dallis, Bermuda and Bahia it will pay you, to keep the seed heads clipped off.

You can't even afford to graze Sudan and millet continuously at this time of year, if you expect them to keep on growing. Two methods of controlling grazing on these are to graze them only an hour or so a day and keep the stock off the rest of the time. The other method is to provide two grazing areas. . . graze one down and move on to the other.

Fire Blight
Many apple and pear orchards are showing fire blight this year. The increase and rapid spread of this disease is caused to a large extent by the late, cool, rainy spring.

Carefully prune and remove affected branches and limbs to help reduce spread of fire blight and damage from this condition. Additional recommendations for control of fire blight and other orchard pests will be found in the Mississippi Spray Calendar which I have in my office.

Egg Quality
There is a lot more to egg quality than just the shell. But for getting quality, the shell is a good place to start. Quality eggs are clean eggs.

How to keep them clean? Here is an answer. Give 'em plenty of nests—about one nest for every five birds. Keep clean litter in the nests—this can cut down on the number of dirty eggs by as much as 20 percent.
