Business Activity Increasing

Life Insurance
Sales Bank Debits
Up In 2-Month Period

Indicators of business activity in Mississippi in March and April as compared with the same months of last year show
mainly increases.
This information is released
in the current issue of "Mississippi's Business," published bi-monthly by the Bureau of Business and Economic Research at the University of Mississippi.
According to the Ole Miss report, life insurance sales were up 16 per cent in March with no change in April. Bank debits were up approximately 15 per cent and 11 per cent in March and April, respectively.

Manufacturing employment of 149,000 in April set a new record—an unusually large overthe-year gain of about 9 per cent. The gains in this indicator seem to be continually growing larger.

Gasoline tax has been erratic
with little overall change. Sales and use tax (adjusted for rate change) was up 11 per cent in April; significant gains have been registered in each month
this year.

Education Is Key To Safe Waterways

To keep our recreational waterways safe, boatowners must combine courtesy and common sense with a sound knowledge
of boating and navigational principles, according to the American Insurance Association.

The Association advises small craft owners—especially those with limited experience—to enroll in courses of instruction offered by the U. S. Coast Guard Auxiliary, power squadrons and other boating organizations.

Good boatmen—like good automobile drivers—are made,
not born, the Association maintains. Whether a motor boat becomes a pleasure boat or a menace to life and property depends on how it is cared for
and operated.

A PRIZE OF A DEMONSTRATION GARDEN — Mrs. Charlie Gaines Patterson of the Golden Community, is pictured here with her favorite show piece in her Garden Enterprise Demonstration. She has raised her tomatoes over strips of black plastic. The black plastic, used on the ground, keeps down weeds and grasses while it holds moisture in the soil. Mrs. Patterson's tomatoes are not staked and as they drop to the ground they are kept clean and do not rot as fast on the plastic as they would otherwise. Also included in Mrs.

Patterson's garden are approximately 8 different types of vegetables which she has never raised before. They are all of the best, approved varieties, according to Miss Ruth Ham, Special Watershed Home Economist. Other ladies in the County engaged in demonstration gardening are Mrs. Roy Boothe of Burnsville, Mrs. Lenard South of Paden, and Mrs. Ralph Warringer of Tishomingo. These ladies are all planning entries in the ladies' division of the Tishomingo County Fair. —photo by Judy Holtsford central electric air conditioning offers

than comfort

You'll probably choose comfort as the primary reason for having a central electric air conditioning system in your home. Most people do.

Comfort is important, without question. But, because of air conditioning, the family begins to notice that other pleasant things happen.

*MUCH MORE

Youngsters, for example, get a full afternoon nap; they have keener appetites, less heat rash; and they're free from dust and pollen in the air.
For Mother, cleaning house becomes so much easier. Windows and doors stay closed, keeping out dirt and dust. And home furnishings stay fresh longer.
Each member of the family sleeps soundly on hot nights. It's cool and quiet. Father leaves for work refreshed!
Another bonus is the pleasure of summer entertaining. Friends enjoy a visit in a cool, comfortable home.

COOL AND COMFORTABLE...that's an air conditioned home. But there's MUCH MORE too!

PLANNING SERVICES AVAILABLE When you decide to build or remodel your home, ask us for our free planning services. Our staff can determine the amount of air conditioning your home will need—and plan the installation.

HEY GANG!

It surely does look good seeing all those new additions going up at "Old Faithful!" It won't be nearly as hard to go back to school now that we have a gigantic new gym, cafeteria, and football field. I'm kind of looking forward to going back now.

Finally something happened to me so that I can get my name in this column. Kathy Jones honored me with a surprise birthday party at her home. After we nibbled on the victuals, we put a tiger in the tank of the old Jones truck and roared through the hills of Tishomingo County. Naturally we came back in time to eat some more and my thanks to Willie J. for cooking so good. Those present were Marcia Clark, Sue Holly, Sandra Curtis, Glen Bugg, Eddie Carson, Hayden Ables, Edna Daugherty, Eddie Thomas, Scob Stricklen, Annette Lomenick, Belinda Grisham, Teresa Clark, Donnie Brown, Sydney Ramsey, Larry Parker and Harold Lomenick.

Attention, all you ducks and water-lovers! Merle Smith (who has been eating his cherries) has gone to work at Tishomingo State Park as a lifeguard. So now you can go in swimming over there with that safe-and-sound feeling? ?

It was a dark, lonely night when it happened. It even threw some of his relatives off balance. But don't worry, they'll get him. Joe Reynolds is now

Hey, you car lovers! Donnie Brown has a certain make of a Ford that's the only kind in the world. It's even "wilder" than a Mustang!

I don't know who all and how many went, but a slew of 4-H'ers journeyed to Mississippi State for Club Congress this week. Let's hope they don't wreck the place!

Have y'all forgotten that V. L.'s home? Be sure to get out there and see him. And don't forget to look for him on the nights he's out in the "Rumble Seat"!

Harold Lomenick and his crew have boarded a new member. His name is Wilford and he's kin to Hector, so you know what to expect!

Well, that's all for this week. Till next week—see 'ya round!

Annual Phifer Reunion Held Sunday At Iuka Youth & Community Center

Sunday, July 11, marked the annual reunion of the Phifer family as they gathered at the Iuka Youth and Community Center. The Phifer ancestors were one of the early prominent families of this area. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Phifer (Uncle Wilts and Aunt Bett as they were known) and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Phifer (Uncle Jim and Aunt Lissa), were married and settled on nearby farms. The Phifer men were brothers and the ladies were sisters. Descendants of these two families are all now scattered far and near.

Members of the family began arriving by 10 a. m. with large baskets of food and stacks of song books, and the reunion was underway. Singing, which is a Phifer tradition, was enjoyed till all tables were filled with food. Dinner and fellowship was enjoyed by all present. As soon as tables were cleared, singing was underway again, with fellowship and picture making on the side.

Growth by Struggle Lesson for July 18, 1965

Background Scriptures: Romans 7, Devotional Readings: Romans 8:1-16.

SAINT PAUL undoubtedly knew what he was driving at when he wrote the seventh chapter of Romans. But few chapters he ever wrote have stirred so much discussion as this one. Two questions have given trouble to Bible scholars. 1. Was Paul writing his own experiences or is the "I" here a dramatic way of expressing universal human experiences? 2. Is Paul describing the Christian life, or the life of a man who only became a Christian later? Let us leave these questions for the books. Let the reader make up his own mind about it if he can. Let us take three main thoughts which this chapter suggests to the writer of this column. They are (we hope) true thoughts and may be just what Paul was meaning to say. If not, we pray pardon from the God of all mistaken men.

Christian life is struggle Last week we gave some thought to the fact that the life of a real Christian is a life of battle and effort. It is not a matter of quiet silent growth of the spiritual life. A race, a climb, a fight, this describes it better than quieter words. A big point in this chapter, and it is a big point in experience too, is that the struggle is not between me and my enemies, but between me and myself. I am my own worst enemy. No one else can do me the harm I can do — and have done, perhaps — to myself. No one and nothing else is as much to blame for my failures as I am personally responsible. There is something in me which wants one thing, and another something (or is it someone?) within me which wants just the opposite. It is a constant struggle between my best and my worst, between Christ in me and the devil in me; between the Me that knows very well what ought to be done and the Me that stupidly or stubbornly won't do it. It is a fight that tears me right down the middle, a fight that no one else perhaps can see but which I dread every day, because it goes on every day. One "I" makes promises the other "I" won't keep. One "I" makes resolutions the other one tears up with a laugh and throws into the waste basket. Which is the real one? Who's in charge here?

The struggle gets me down "The juvenile delinquents that grew up to be dirty old men" — that's the trademark of a couple of comedians. It sounds funny, but it really isn't. Many a juvenile delinquent can't be anything else but a dirty old man. That is the easy thing to be; he can sink into that state of life without trying at all. That is always one way to get out of a fight: run away. Many a man gets so tired of the constant inner grinding civil war with himself that his better self just quits, stops fighting entirely, lets the worse self have it. (Why doesn't the worse self give up sometimes? Well, sometimes it does — but more of that in a moment.)

Reinforcement for Victory How was it, in 1776 and all that, that the poor, weak, divided American colonies defeated the armies of the British Empire? Well, they didn't. By themselves, the colonies would have been licked, indeed were licked all over the place. But when we persuaded the French to come over and help us, we began to get somewhere. With France as our ally, victory became almost a sure thing. So it is with the Christian's struggle within himself, against himself. Fighting alone, he weakens, surrenders and loses. With the right ally and fellow-fighter, he takes heart and wins. This is no mere human reinforcement, though it is always good to have sympathetic friends. The great victory-bringing ally is none other than the Son of God Himself, the invisible but ever-present Companion and Champion.

of passersby and visitors. Every year we see more interest in outdoor lighting, both for safety and to spotlight garden features of beauty. You will want to think about and plan for lighting of outdoor living rooms, cookout and eat-out areas, blind spots in walks and drives, parking areas and steps, as well as spotlighting plants of seasonal beauty or landscape accents such as pools, foundations or statues.

Think about light emphasis on fall foliage and winter berries, as well as spring and summer displays of flowering shrubs and flower beds. Mushroom type fixtures are well suited to areas where you need low light for steps and walks, and to accent low flower beds and borders. Spotlights and floodlights are ideal to light up overhead trees, large shrubs and tall garden features such as a climbing rose in full bloom on a fence or wall.

Try to hide or conceal lights for especially dramatic effects. Usually tinted or soft lights are more effective than bright glaring lights. Experiment with various colors at night to determine the one that gives the most pleasing effect. Brightly colored flowers often are best under a clear soft light.

You can make simple outdoor lights that are effective. Use weatherproof extension cords and sockets with shiny lard or coffee cans for reflectors. Insert the bulb through a hole in the bottom of the can. Heavy silver foil paper, cupped back of the bulb makes a good temporary spotlight.

Be Sure Outdoor Lights Are Safe

Any light used out-of-doors should be weatherproof, as a safety feature. Be sure that cords and sockets will remain dry during rain. Be sure all outdoor lighting equipment is designated for outdoor use with sockets, cords, plugs and connections.

Turn off the electricity at the house whenever handling outdoor lighting equipment. As an extra precaution, tape socket connection with electrical tape or similar material and drape plug over wood spike to keep out of puddles.

All holders of outdoor-type flood and spotlight bulbs should be used with a rubber gasket between the bulb and the socket for watertight fit. Be sure to use these gaskets to prevent moisture from leaking into the sockets.

By Hiram A. Jones Work Unit Conservationist Take Care Of Your Cattle

A pasture is never as bad as it looks at its worst . . . and it is never as good as it looks at its best. Most of the pastures in Tishomingo County look good now. This is due to the rain we have had, and to the lime and fertilizer farmers have applied on their pastures.

Overgrazing is the biggest problem we have in establishing and maintaining good pastures in Tishomingo County. It is a common practice in this County to graze too many cows per acre, or to graze an area too long. It is a good idea to rotate cattle from one pasture to another and never overgraze any one pasture.

Keep your mind on the management of grasses and cattle will take care of themselves.
