HEW'S Attack On Freedom of Choice

Parental rights and the cause of quality public education in the United States suffered a severe new blow recently when the Congress voted against the Whitten Amendment which would have prevented the Department of Health, Education and Welfare from cutting off funds to school districts that didn't go along with its plans.

HEW Secretary Robert H. Finch's opposition to the Whitten Amendment—indeed his all-out fight against the freedom of choice principle—also represents a breaking of faith with the millions of voters who heard and believed presidential candidate Richard M. Nixon promise support for freedom of choice school plans. It is deeply dismaying the President Nixon didn't abide by his campaign promise.

Nothing could be more American than the concept of freedom of choice in education. As worked out in practice, this concept means that a child attends the school his parents desire him to attend. It is the embodiment of individual freedom. Yet this freedom doesn't satisfy the ideologues in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. They apparently don't believe parents have any rights when it comes to school attendance. And they aren't satisfied with any school attendance plan that doesn't achieve strict racial balance.

Emotion, not reason, lies behind HEW's position. Certainly, there isn't any measure of justice in HEW's opposition to freedom of choice. As a matter of act, HEW can't point to any standard of logic in espousing its school plans. If it is unjust to bar a student from a particular school because of his race, how can it be just to compel a student to attend a particular school in order to meet a fixed racial formula decreed by HEW? Obviously, HEW's approach isn't grounded in rationality or justice. Instead, it is grounded in politics and fanaticism—the notion that there must be carefully calculated mix of students of different racial groups in order for the ends of democracy to be served.

This is an absurd position, for precise racial balancing won't be in effect in other areas of a child's life or in his existence as an adult. His parents are free to establish his home environment and to regulate a child's friendships. An adult cannot be coerced into making friends on the basis of a sociological formula. Or maybe HEW aspires to do just that—take over the home and plan adult relationships. That's the type of thing George Orwell wrote about in his book "1984" in which he described the horrors of a totalitarian society that controls every moment of people's lives.

The American people certainly don't want a "Big Brother" society, but HEW is doing its best to achieve just that with its school plans. It is tragic but true that Congress is permitting HEW to engage in government by edict, to practice coercion against parents.

Congress has lost sight of the fact that children belong to their parents, not to Big Government agencies. The final say-so on a child's education should belong to parents, not to some bureaucrat whose mind is full of socialist notions regarding the way people's lives should be managed.

The United States has come a long way down the road to serfdom—to totalitarian government—in the last 20 years. As the 1950s opened, public education was strictly a state and local

THE CASE FOR TV CENSORSHIP

JOHN J. SYNON

The dialogue has begun, I am glad to see, on the merits of censorship for network television.

I would like to get into the argument, if I may, because I am for such censorship. Yes, sirs, I am for it.

As does any rational person, I prefer total personal liberty. But when you have a set of rapacious, no-God monopolists tearing at the warp of your culture, you either enforce rules or you go under. You certainly do not sit back and let an "unelected elite" control your thought processes, allow them to exert a malign censorship of their devising.

Make no mistake, that is precisely what we have now, censorship of their devising. And what I would do is censor them. I would, much as we presently "censor" our public utilities; I would sterilize them.

There is no other feasible way, not in the sense that there is a viable method of giving equal time and equal emphasis to both major points of political view.

Look at the facts:

We have, you know, three networks: ABC, NBC, and CBS. They are all owned and controlled by the same kind of people, people with a curious, alien oneness. So, we get the same insidious tripe from each. That is not denied. Not that responsibility. And both states and counties were making progress on upgrading the school systems. The neighborhood was a central feature of the American scene and contributed greatly to community solidarity.

Today the situation is utterly changed. Big Brother in Washington has taken over all the key functions of local school boards and state boards of education. School officials have to spend much of their time checking as to whether they are obeying Washington's latest edicts or answering to the demands of the federal courts.

Parents see the public schools as centers of hurtful sociological experiments, in which the best interests of their children are sacrificed to the demands of politics or the peculiar ideas of extremists.

More and more these days, public schools are ceasing to serve in an educational sense—and are becoming mere custodial institutions. Parents who can afford to do so are enrolling their children in private and church schools where standards are higher and politics don't control.

HEW's latest victory will accelerate the process of ruination of the public schools. Secretary Robert H. Finch of HEW seems destined to preside over the destruction of the traditional system of locally controlled public schools. Big Brother's gain is the nation's loss.

they admit that what they put out is tripe; that is what I say. What they admit to is that they weigh or evaluate the news, select the news they will publicize, they slant things. What's more, they contend they have a right to do so, under the First Amendment, that of free speech.

What irony. They defend themselves, in effect, by saying our rules permit them to subvert our rules and that we — if we are actually Constitution-supporting people — should not attempt to do anything about it.

I don't buy that.

Two solutions, short of censorship have been suggested. One is for Constitution-minded people to acquire a network and give with chit-chat of their devising. And the other turns on the present Left-Wing owners employing Right Wingers and affording them time to express themselves.

Neither suggestion would work. Take the second suggestion first: How long do you think a Constitutionalist, paid by Left Wingers, could effectively survive in their egalitarian jungle? About as long as Pat stayed in the army. Hardly longer. The suggestion is unrealistic.

As to acquiring a network; forget it. Theoretically, it could be done. But consider the realities.

Tube boobs are just that. Network television, by its nature as a mass media, can prosper commercially — i.e. pay its bills — only by pandering to the very lowest, to the gulls, to the same something-for-nothing japes the carnival sharpers once preyed upon. It panders to the bone-heads who believe there is such a thing as an ideological middle-of-the-road, that there is validity in one-man-one-vote. Bally-oriented people; these are the grist of the television mill, the dolts of this land.

Those few of reasonable intelligence who do watch TV's day-in-day-out insipidities — and there are some; the elderly and the house bound come to mind — are too smart to be taken in by the commercials: Listening and looking is one thing. Buying the crap suitable for sale on TV is quite another.

How, then, would a Right-Wing network pay its way? It couldn't. Intelligent people, as I imply, are not interested in drivel, the stuff that attracts the great unwashed. And if you were to elevate the content of the "shows", make them attractive to the intelligent, in the doing you would make them unattractive to the unintelligent. You would lose the "masses" and therefore the product buyers, the gulls.

It is an insoluble dilemma, so far as I can see.

The Unelected Elite know all this. They have America in the go-long, without government censorship. And I am against that.

Landowners May Get Seedlings

Landowners desiring to secure tree seedlings for planting this winter are advised by the Mississippi Forestry Commission that a limited number of nursery seedlings are still available.

Trees should be applied for through the local Area Foresters Office.

As of December 15 species still available for sale included slashed pine, sycamore seedlings and cottonwood cuttings.

The Forestry Commission urges that Mississippians who own idle or unproductive land take advantage of this last chance to secure seedlings for reforestation during the current planting season.

Viriden Exchange Vows

Hills Church of the setting for the wedding ceremony was at 7:30 p.m. with Dick Still, officiating. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of white Peau De Saie, designed and made by her mother; it featured A-line styling, with a big bow at the empire bodice and had long bell shaped sleeves and long white satin bow. She carried a cascade bouquet of red sweetheart roses and white carnations surrounded by streamers of white ribbons tied in love knots.

Attending the bride as her only attendant and bridesmaid was Miss Ferol Reed. She wore a floor length gown of Christmas red velvet, designed with A-line styling bell shape sleeves and a long white satin bow. She carried a long stem red rose. Miss Laurie Thomas, flower girl, wore an identical red velvet gown with the same styling as the bridesmaid. She carried a white pearlized basket of rose petals, decorated with Lily-of-the-Valley. They were matching head pieces of red velvet Dior bows. Misses Robin Still, Kathleen Ross, Karen Sylvester, and Kelli Burcham were rice girls. They wore green velvet dresses and carried red baskets of red and white rice bags tied with white ribbons.

Mr. Van Pryor served the groom as best man. Ushers were Ken Locklin and Randy Pryor. For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Rogers wore a silver-gray satin back crepe dress with silver accessories. Mrs. Viriden, mother of the groom, wore an aqua two piece silk dress with black accessories. Both mothers wore peppermint stripe carnation corsages.

RECEPTION

It was draped all around with white net forming scollops and red velvet roses in each scollop. The center piece was the bride's bouquet and a tall bride and groom figurine. On either side of the center piece were silver candleabras holding silver and white candles. On one end of the table was a three tier wedding cake decorated in white frosting with red rosebuds. Completing the table on the other end was the silver punch bowl with red fruit punch. Assisting with serving were Mrs. Elbert Reed, Mrs. Kendall Thomas, Mrs. Dwayne Armitage, and Miss Pamela Ballard. They wore red and white peppermint stripe carnation corsages.

For traveling the bride chose a navy dress and matching navy and gray check bonded wool coat, trimmed in gray fur at the wrists and hemline. A Bolt from the Blue

—By Ruth Bolt

As the man on TV said, I've been "as busy as a cat with a litter of new kittens," trying to get packages wrapped and packages unwrapped, getting packages delivered and packages stored away.

I don't know what we of the affluent society would do without Scotch tape at Christmas time. Reuben Grisham is the fastest user I've found. On Christmas Eve he was tearing it off and sticking it on faster than the eye could follow, still wearing a proper Christmas smile for his late-shopping customers.

This is a glorious New Year coming right up for everyone of us. Let's begin with faith that it will be our very best one yet. As Mencius, the Chinese philosopher of old, said, "Without faith, where can a man take hold?"

The anthem from the temple in Salt Lake City on Sunday gave a suggestion about how this can be done. If we will take one small step each day, we can accomplish anything we wish to do to make a better world.

Happy Birthday, Gene, wherever you are on this wonderful day.

One of my most exhilarating experiences lately was mountain hopping. Just a few weeks prior I had not understood the value of a book I happened to pick up and glance through. It was the fantastic story of a little boy who imagined that by day he put on boots with special magic powers that helped him rise above mundane scenes and take airy trips over the skyscrapers of his home city. Now I appreciate that book.

In my trip I did not get far from the ground, but the scenes from the mountain tops sent my spirits soaring. Road construction crews had cut through crests of some hills and laid bare their inside secrets. It would have been helpful had a geologist of mimmerologist been near to answer the many questions that flew through my mind. What great upheaval in nature caused the present wonder of Natural Bridge? When did that great change take place? In what stage of development were the inhabitants of that region then? Why have so few of us Tishomingo Countians been to visit and study the unusual sight?

In mountain hopping there are valleys to consider. Fast flowing the brook freshly supplied with yesterday's downpour. The large boulders tried to stop the stream, but it rushed on, white with the froth of its hurry. Two hunters were passing by. The older one was probably a father fulfilling an earlier promise to his school-age son. I imagined he was telling the boy about the fish he had caught in the stream's quiet pools on a summer's day. But in my "flight," I had to rush by. Twice I crossed the muddy waters of Budahatchie Creek. But it did not compare in size and beauty with the Warrior River with its lake resort system, where I had spent the previous night. Further on a less traveled stretch of pavement the pleasant swings and curves led to Bull Creek. In that community new homes were scarce; but old buildings with walls rotting, allowing wood-shingled roofs to sag near the ground, proved that years ago there were many inhabitants of that area.

The people I encountered on short stops proved our theory that deep inside America anyone can find, on any day of the year, kind, friendly people who are glad to take time to hear of other people's needs and offer ways for those needs to be satisfied. Like the mountains amid which they live, those people make my spirits soar.

Have a happy birthday, Jeanette.

Men in authority should consider the plight of the poor and not press them to work on Sundays when it is against their Christian beliefs.

State Board Of Health

While the State Board of Health pushes an attack against rubella, it is not letting rubeola and other diseases go. State health officials said today.

Dr. Durward L. Blakey, director of the agency's Preventable Disease Control division, pointed out, however, that many people may be confusing the two.

He pointed out that rubeola is what most people refer to as "regular" measles, which usually lasts about a week and can cause encephalitis and deafness.

He said rebecca is commonly referred to as "German measles" and is regarded as a fairly mild disease of childhood which usually lasts about three days. "But it is the rubella," said Dr. Blakey, "which is the prime target of this massive, long-range immunization program we are now conducting over the state. "Because rubella, although mild in childhood, can do serious damage to the unborn child of an expectant mother, such as congenital heart defects and mental retardation."

Paul Turner, of the agency's Vaccination Assistance Project, pointed out that the measles vaccine for "regular" measles has been used by the agency since April, 1966.

"And we are still immunizing for regular measles," said Turner. "Just recently, we gave some 3000 doses of this vaccine for children one-through-twelve in Coahoma county."

But the vaccine for rebecca, or German measles, said Turner, has just been made available to the State Board of Health since October 1969.

"So these two vaccines are not the same," he said. "And parents are put on notice that a child vaccinated for regular measles is still not protected from German measles."

During recent weeks, said Turner, "the State Board of Health has conducted immunization campaigns against rubella in public schools and Head Start centers throughout the state."

He listed Adams, Benton, Bolivar, Copiah, Claiborne, Harrison, Hinds, Jasper, Lamar, Marion, Perry, Quitman, Scott and Walthall as the counties reached so far.

"The burden of getting the rubella vaccine to the priority groups (children in the first and second grades) is the job of the local health departments," said Turner.

"The State Board of Health, through the Preventable Disease Control division, will assist the local health units as requested," said Turner.

COUNTY AGENT'S NOTES By Percie B. Sickles MSU Extension Service

GRAIN IN 1970

Grain can be a profitable crop if you treat it right. Corn was disappointing in 1969 but 1970 could be a different story. To help make it better, here are some suggestions:

Plant the corn on your best grain land and plant it early. By planting early (before April 1) you have fewer insects, fewer disease problems, more moisture, lower temperatures at pollination time and it will already be planted before other crops need to be planted.

Be sure to use enough seed to insure stands. This means at least 15 pounds per acre. Broadcast herbicides for weed control, but remember, you can't do this if you are going to follow the corn with a small grain.

Fertilize to insure high yields. Test your soil for phosphate and potash needs, and figure your nitrogen needs by the amount of corn you want to grow. It takes two pounds of nitrogen for every bushel of corn that you grow.

You might decide to grow milo or grain sorghum instead of corn. It is a surer crop for several reasons. These include: It will produce on a wider range of soils, it can withstand more drought, it matures earlier, it is good for rotation with soybeans to clean up fields. Both bird resistant and non-bird resistant varieties are yielding more. Averages range from 3,500 to 6,000 pounds per acre. In a nutshell, decide whether you want corn or milo or both. Prepare your plan of action. Decide which soils to use for each crop and farm for maximum production.

PLAN NOW FOR NEXT YEAR For some few Mississippi farmers results are good from the 1969 year, for others, they are not so good.

Now is the time to plan for 1970 so that you can make a better crop. The time you spend now reviewing your farm program may be the most important time you will spend for the next 12 months.

WINTER GRAZING Manage your winter grazing

The program committee was crops for best results. Never overgraze as if these crops are grazed too closely, they have a difficult time making regrowth.

If the land is boggy, keep cattle off. Cattle often do more damage to grazing areas by bogging than they do by grazing.

Make sure that you have plenty of nitrogen available to the crops so that they can take advantage of all warm weather to make extra growth.

James L. Davis, State Selective Service, that members of the staff and local secretaries are being questioned with the lottery and for draft age you below are ques-ers most frequent- during the past the registrant who most of the year over the one to college and is out the year?

The key in both er his random se- is reached in his local board. If the random sequence number has been reached in the case of a registrant who becomes I-A late in the year, he will be subject to induction as soon as appeals, examinations and other delays are concluded, even though the year has ended. There is no way he can gain an advantage by delaying his actual induction through time required for personal appearance, appeals, examination and other delays are concluded, even though the year has ended. There is no way he can gain an advantage by delaying his actual induction through time required for personal appearance, appeals, examination and other processing if his random sequence number has been reached.

Q. What about the registrant who loses a deferment just before age 26?

A. This is like the case in the previous question. If his number has been or is reached, and he loses his deferment just before his 26th birthday, he will, if his deferment extended his liability to age 35 as most do, be inducted at the end of all the processing steps-if he remains in Class I-A or I-A- and is qualified, even though he has turned 26 this period of delay.

Q. Can a man whose birthday is drawn early in the drawing still join the Reserve or National Guard?

A. Yes. Just as now, he can join a Reserve or National Guard Unit any time before the induction order is issued. Processing of the enlistment is, of course, up to the Reserve or National Guard Unit. The man must, however, be sworn into the Unit before his local board mails him an induction order.

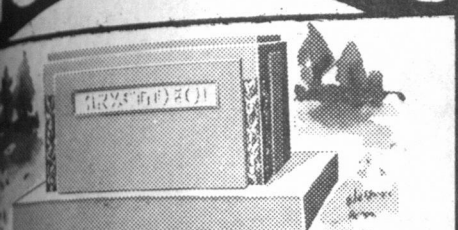

Q. What about volunteering for active duty?

A. The policy is unchanged. Armed Forces recruiters will continue to take enlistments as heretofore.

Q. Where can I get more information regarding my Selective Service status?

A. From your local board.

"IN MEMORY"

In memory of my husband, Walter (Tubby) Lomenick, I would like to say; He has not left us, he is just away. He went to sleep and left this walk of life, to awake safe in the arms of our Savior Jesus Christ. He left behind memories to treasure for us, because we know in whom he put his trust.

May God Bless each of you.
Helen E. Lomenick

In 1969, we cleared
rights-of-way,
built lines,
constructed substations,
tested meters,
trimmed trees,
restored service after outages, installed modern communications equipment, used up-to-date
power distribution methods,
kept records,
and provided free planning
assistance to customers.
It was a busy year.

And 1970 will be even busier,
as we work diligently to give you dependable electric service.

Day and night.

The Cross is symbolic of our highest living. It tells of both sacrifice and life at its best. It is a symbol of God, a symbol of Christ, a symbol of the Christian church you attend every week. What would the church be without The Cross! Where might your steps lead were you to forget the Crucifixion! What might happen to your family and to the families of all your friends were it not for the influence of the allumined Cross in their lives. If you would have tomorrow remember you; if you would have your golden years filled with peace and hope then Keep The Cross Before You Every Day
