Who's Responsible for You?

Do you know that you have been accused of murder? So have I. We are all, in fact, not merely accused; we all have been repeatedly tried and convicted of innumerable murders. We have been determined guilty, as well, of robbery, assault, child abuse, drunk driving, and countless other crimes.

That we personally may have committed none of these provides no defense. The fault has been adjudged to be ours. We are indicted for participating in a conspiracy to create a society and environment conducive to criminal behavior, a "climate for crime."

A Precedent
In the summer of 49 years ago, the country pulsed to the tension of the sensational Loeb-Leopold murder trial. Richard Loeb and David Leopold, brilliant though unstable young men, both sons of millionaires, had murdered 14-year-old Robert Franks for no purpose. Their crime was indefensible.

Clarence Darrow defended them. Setting a crucial precedent for American jurisprudence, Darrow argued from the then novel science of psychiatry that criminal behavior is a symptom of mental and emotional disease. Murderers and other criminals do not need punishment; they need to be cured. They are themselves victims of their environments.

Earlier, Darrow had written: "However much society may feel the need of confining the criminal, it must first understand that the act had an all-sufficient cause for which the individual was in no way responsible and must find the cause of his conduct and, so far as possible, remove the cause."

An Earlier Precedent
Psychiatry has recently, however, begun to change its mind. The theories, studies, and especially the dramatic successes of such psychiatrists as O. Hobart Mowrer and William Glasser have demanded a re-evaluation. Mowrer and Glasser require their counselees to accept responsibility for their behavior, and the results have been phenomenal—even among the criminally insane.

The law ought to take notice, especially criminal justices and defense attorneys. Is the best action being taken on behalf of an offender if society is indicted and he is set free, when there is evidence to show that he might be truly reformed if he would accept personal responsibility and guilt for his actions?

We, as a society, ought to take notice also and stop blaming ourselves for what is not our fault. And start accepting responsibility for what in fact, is our fault, personally and collectively. We have each and all passed the buck long enough.

The ancient wisdom of the Bible has always recognized the need for accepting personal responsibility for our behavior: "He who conceals his transgressions will not prosper, but he who confesses and forsakes them will find compassion." Copyright Dave Llewellyn 1973

CENTIPEDES AND
MILLIPEDES

Centipedes and millipedes are commonly seen in yards and they occasionally enter homes. They are scavengers on decaying vegetation and prefer a moist environment. Neither centipedes or millipedes damage furnishings, home or food and their only importance is that of annoying or frightening individuals.

CENTIPEDES

Centipedes are many-legged animals often confused with insects. Because of their many legs they belong to a separate group of animals called Chilopods. They are brownish, flattened and elongate animals with many obvious body segments. Most of the body segments have one pair of legs. Centipedes are rapid runners and may vary in length from one to six inches. They have one pair of antennae or "feelers" that are easy to see.

Centipedes have poorly developed eyes and are most active at night. They are associated with damp, dark places, such as under stones, leaf litter, logs, bark or soil crevices. Indoors, they are often found in basements, closets and bathrooms where there is likely to be rather high humidity. Centipedes are predators and feed largely on insects and spiders.

MILLIPEDES

Millipedes, commonly known as "thousand leggers" are worm-like, many legged animals which belong to a group of arthropods called diplopods. Like centipedes, the millipedes body is many segmented. Millipedes differ from centipedes in that their bodies are more cylindrical and most body segments bear two pairs of legs instead of one pair. Millipedes tend to coil up tightly when disturbed.

Female millipedes may lay 20 to 300 eggs singly or in small groups in the soil. The eggs hatch in a few weeks and the young then go through seven or eight stages before becoming adults.

Millipedes breed in decaying vegetable matter which is also their food source. They hide under stones, flower pots, boards or similar debris where there is abundant moisture. Occasionally, after rains or adverse weather conditions, large numbers of millipedes migrate into buildings. Millipedes climb up foundation walls and enter homes through any small opening. These pests are generally more troublesome in wooded or newly developed areas where large accumulations of decaying vegetation supply excellent food and breeding conditions.

Many millipedes exude a blister causing venom that may cause injury to a person handling them. They also give off an offensive, musty odor.

Control: Indoor chemical treatment should be used only to eliminate centipedes or millipedes already inside. Spot treatments of 0.5% diazinon, 0.5% lindane, 2% chlordane, in oil or water base spray applied to infested areas will aid in control. If infestation is not severe individuals can be removed with a broom and dust pan or a vacuum sweeper and then destroyed.

Outdoors the removal of food and hiding places will decrease infestations and increase effectiveness of pesticide control. Compost piles or other decaying vegetation should be kept as far away from structure as possible. It is not often practical to remove organic debris and mulch from foundations or plantings, so these areas should be kept in mind when treatment is required.

Tenn. Gov. Dunn
Praises Congress
For Tenn.-Tom.
Funds

Governor Winfield Dunn of Tennessee, Chairman of the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway Development Authority praised Members of Congress following the passage of an appropriation for $18 million to be used during fiscal year 1974 for construction of the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway.

Gov. Dunn as Chairman of the five state Compact led a delegation to Washington back in May and appeared before the Appropriation Committees of the House and Senate requesting these funds. Also appearing at the same time was approximately 25 Congressmen and Senators from the 5 state area supporting the Authority's request for construction money.

The Governor stated that "never have so many done so much for a single project" and expressed his deep gratitude to Members of the House and Senate from the five state area for their help and assistance. He singled out the spectacular work done in support of the bill by Congressman Joe Evins (D. Tenn.), Chairman of the Subcommittee; ranking committee member Congressman Jamie Whitten (D. Miss.); and Senator John Stennis (D. Miss.) Chairman of the Senate Committee.

The $18 million appropriated by Congress represents an increase of $3.5 million over the President's budget of $14.5 million and is a million dollars more than original Corps of Engineer capability estimates. "This million dollars," the Governor stated, "will be used to begin construction to begin Tennessee River project as well as construction in Alabama lower end. The project will allow the river to be completed earlier than had been estimated moving the completion back from 1983 to 1980. The increased money would allow the situation of real estate on the bus Lock and Dam, the spillway and the Gainesville dam, on the Alico river, the channel and the Bend cutoff as well as the Yellow Creek of the divide out. In a further report, Dunn stated that the Authority was proceeding to assure a high level of indicated he plans to Washington to this level be the President's project will be released. The Tennessee project will connect eastern Gulf with America's inland waterway by way of the Tennessee-Tombigbee Rivers.

Usher - groomsmen were David Lambert III, Allen Brown, and James Bostick of Red Bay, Alabama.

Mrs. Lambert wore a light blue dress with matching accessories and a pale pink glamelia corsage.

Mrs. Steve Bostick registered the guests with a white plume pen at a table which was draped in candlelight antique satin, and which held a memory candle encircled with pale pink miniature carnations and greenery cascading down the side of the table.

The bride's table, overlaid in pink tulle over a pink satin cloth which had been used by other brides in the family and which was made by the bride's maternal great-grandmother, the late Mrs. Flora Belle Shook Bostick, was centered with a three-tiered white wedding cake trimmed with pink roses and white bells. Three-branched silver candleabra holding pale pink tapers were adorned with miniature pink carnations and greenery. Enhancing the beauty of the bride's table was the bride's bouquet. Silver compotes were filled with nuts and dainty white mints trimmed with pink rosebuds which were served from a crystal tray. Serving the wedding cake was Mrs. Jimmy Cobb of Millbrook, Alabama, aunt of the bride, who was assisted by Mrs. Mary Fisher Wright and Miss Emily Yarber, both of Belmont.

A round companion table, also draped in candlelight antique satin, held a silver punch bowl encircled with greenery and filled with pink wedding punch topped with a crystal clear fruited ice ring. Misses Charlotte McAnally and Beth Deaton of Belmont ladled the punch.

Another table covered in candlelight antique satin with a beautiful arrangement of magnolias in a silver wine cooler held three silver trays filled with pink rice which was passed to the guests by three cousins of the bride, Miss Lisa Lambert of Iuka, and Misses Kathy and Lisa Keeton of Red Bay, Alabama. Featured on this table were the bridesmaids nose-gays.

Also assisting with the reception were Mrs. Fred Bullen and Mrs. Oather Bullen of Red Bay, Alabama, and Mrs. Lealon Yarber of Belmont. All assisting with the reception wore corsages of white carnations.

Many out-of-town guests were among those attending the reception.

Mrs. Keeton was assisted in serving by Mrs. Herman Keeton and Mrs. Hoyt Keeton, also of Red Bay. Approximately thirty guests attended.

The honoree wore a trou-seau selection of a solid green dress and a gift corsage of white carnations.

After the guests were seated, they were served a banana breakfast drink before the main course of shirred eggs on toast, cheese grits, dainty sausage biscuits, cinnamon peaches centered with jelly, and coffee.

SOUTHERN PINE BEETLE
Probably no other insect is of more concern to managers of southern pine forests than the southern pine beetle, loblolly and shortleaf pine seem to be preferred hosts, but all of the southern pines may be attacked wherever they occur in North and Central America. Adult beetles are about the size of a grain of rice, stout and reddish-brown in color. While they commonly attack lightning-struck or weakened trees, they can also quickly build up to high populations capable of successfully attacking healthy trees during periods favorable to their development. Adult beetles bore directly through the bark, mate, and the females begin to excavate S-shaped egg galleries in the inner bark. Eggs are deposited in niches on either side of these galleries and hatch into small legless grubs within four to nine days. The grubs mine for a short distance before boring into the outer bark where they pupate. There are from three to seven generations per year depending on locality and weather. Drought seems to be associated with major outbreaks of this insect.

CONTROL includes rapid salvage and utilization of infested trees and piling and burning of infested material. Outbreaks usually subside with the advent of unfavorable weather and improved host vigor.

CARPENTERWORM
The carpenterworm bores in the wood of living hardwood trees, causing costly damage to commercial timber species. In the South, oak species are preferred hosts but black locust, maples, willows, and fruit trees are also attacked. The carpenterworm is distributed throughout the United States.

Adult moths emerge in late April to early June, mate, and the females lay groups of eggs in bark crevices or wounds. Each female lays 200 to 500 eggs during her one-week span. After hatching, the larvae wander over the bark for a short time before boring into the inner bark where they feed until half-grown. The larvae then bore into the sapwood and heartwood, returning occasionally to feed in the inner bark. The larval period lasts from two to four years. Pupation usually occurs deep within the heartwood. Just prior to emergence, the pupa wiggles to the entrance hole where it remains slightly protruding until the adult moth emerges. The large winding tunnels constructed by the larvae in the sapwood and heartwood of living hardwoods serve as an entrance for wood-rotting fungi and insects such as the carpenter ant. In extreme cases, the tree may be structurally weakened and subject to wind breakage.

Some chemicals which have a fumigating action have proved effective in controlling this insect in shade trees, but no practice control has yet been found for forest trees.

Iuka Resident Receives Award

Iuka resident, John M. Crosby, Route 1, an insurance representative with Combined Insurance Company of America, has received an award for outstanding sales and service to the public.

Ken Anderson, regional sales manager, said Crosby won the Ruby Award in the W. Clement Stone International Sales and Management Achievement Club. The international club is named after the company's founder and board chairman.

The Combined group of companies specialize in non-cancellable accident and health income-protection and life insurance. Last year the group paid benefits in excess of $93,000,000.

The group is unusual in that the needs of customers are under constant review, with representatives calling personally on policyholders at least every six months to provide

Miss Nellie Horton's HOME ECONOMIST'S NOTES

TOUCH OF FABRIC CLUE TO BEAUTY

No seamstress should buy fabric without touching it, for much of our fabric knowledge depends on our sense of touch.

The quality of fabric, how it will drape, how successful it will be for a particular style of garment, the need for an underlining or special technique, and the amount of stretch are all indicated to those with an educated touch.

In addition, our fingers react to the texture or surface quality of the fabric. We respond to roughness or smoothness, harshness or softness.

We know what feels good next to our skin.

We also respond visually to texture because the surface of the fabric reflects or absorbs light. The texture appears bright and shiny, or rough with some color variation.

And texture can do things to your figure. It can affect apparent size. Thick, bulky, or fuzzy fabrics add pounds. Stiff, crisp fabrics, such as taffeta, tend to stand out in stiff folds and can increase size.

Clinging fabrics, such as lightweight knits, outline the body contours and emphasize either good or poor proportions. The shiny fabrics catch and reflect light in rounded folds, and accent poorly proportioned areas of the figure.

Smooth, dull-surfaced fabrics, such as found in heavy crepes or knits, lightweight tweeds, many cottons and linens, will absorb light and make shadows that tend to conceal the silhouette. These flat, dull textures are becoming to all figure types.

Some rough-textured fabrics can make a rough skin appear smoother by contrast. Heavy, rough fabrics can be overpowering to the small woman with delicate features and coloring, while the dainty, delicate fabrics may seem out of place on a large-framed or heavy woman.

Texture is an important factor to consider in selecting becoming clothes, but it is often overlooked.

Can your budget stand a big boost in electric rates?

That's why railroads are essential

Over half of America's electricity comes from coal. And most coal comes by rail. Because rail shipping is especially cheap for heavy items travelling a fixed route.

To take advantage of this, Southern Railway innovated the coal shuttle train. A train is assigned to do nothing but shuttle coal from a coal mine to a power plant. And that saves money.

Which is why you need railroads. And why you need Southern.

Congressman Whitten Speaks About Agriculture In Our Economy

Congressman Jamie L. Whitten, speaking in Washington on July 30, 1973, expressed concern and disappointment that there is so little understanding of the place agriculture holds in our economy as well as in the lives of the people.

Whitten gave me an excellent opportunity. It was because of this that we were able to save Title I funds for education under the Continuing Resolution.

"This will prevent a loss to Mississippi of fifty percent of the funds available last year for the underprivileged and disabled," he said.

On Flood Control and Navigation, the Congressman pointed out that the additional $3.5 million for the Tennessee-Tombigbee Project which he and his committee got through the Congress will be used for construction, including excavation, of the Divide Cut portion located in Northeast Mississippi -- this strip will take the longest time to finish and should insure completion of the project. With this Divide Cut through there will be no excuse not to connect Yellow Creek Port on the Mississippi River with Mobile on the Gulf.

"We provided funds for restoring damages caused by the Mississippi Flood, including restoration of damages to 'leased lands above the reservoirs.'"

In the Delta area, the Congressman pointed out that $3,275,000 was provided for the backwater project including the Control structure, $100,000 was provided to initiate work on the Mississippi River.

Chairman of the Agricultural, Environmental, and Conservation Subcommittee of the House of Representatives said: "We are not satisfied with the way the public health and life, and the economy more and more are being made. These are the people who are making supplies, and prices higher, sales and the economy more and more. These are the people who are making supplies, and prices higher, sales and the economy more and more. These are the people who are making supplies, and prices higher, sales and the economy more and more."

Whitten, ranking member of the Appropriations Committee of the House of Representatives, stated he would like to see the bombing of Cambodia rapidly coming to a result of his suggestion, requiring that it be stopped by August 15.

Whitten's membership on the House of Representatives Committee

Pelucia Creek, and he placed particular emphasis in his speech to the House, to the directives of the conference of the House and Senate:

"The managers again direct the Corps to proceed with the upper auxiliary channel, or alternate means of drainage, and the Ascalmore-Tippo and Opposum Bayous Project.

"It is noted that this year's flood waters would have been approximately six feet lower had these projects been completed.

"In reference to the Yazoo Basin reservoirs, the Corps is urged to expedite the updating of the master plan to bring up to national standards the provision of recreational facilities, including the upgrading of access roads.

"Yazoo Basin: 'Provided, that not less than $250,000 shall be available for bank stabilization measures as determined by the Chief of Engineers to be advisable for the control of bank erosion of streams in the Yazoo Basin, including the foothill area, and where necessary such measures shall complement similar works planned and constructed by the Soil Conservation Service and be limited to the areas of responsibility mutually agreeable to the District Engineer.'"

$350,000 was provided for the Ascalmore-Tippo and Opposum Bayou project, $400,000 for planning and specification, and $700,000 for construction of the upper auxiliary channel or alternate means of drainage.

Continuation of recreation works for the four reservoirs, Arkabutla, Enid, Grenada, and Sardis, were provided for and the Corps of Engineers was directed to start work on the necessary access roads.

Congressman Whitten, who serves as Co-Chairman of the Joint Committee to enable the Congress to regain control of the Federal Budget, added: "All in all, we accomplished much to protect our own country and kept the total under the budget."

Card Of Thanks

Friends are the most wonderful thing.
No one knows the happiness and joy they bring.
Until one day when you are sick and depressed,
Thoughts from your friends are put to a test,
Iuka is just a very small town,

But that is where some of the finest people are found.
I can't find the right words to express,
What I feel in my heart,
So I'll just have to say,
Thanks to each and every one,
For all the kind thoughts and deeds you have done.
These things I know I can never repay,
But may the good Lord bless each of you,
In His own special way.

Tishomingo County Power Assn. Devotional Services Held

Members of the Tishomingo Electric Power Association gathered for one of their morning devotional services which have been conducted every week for more than two years.

Chapel services came as a result of prayer, in 1950 when the Power Assn. had just completed some 700 miles of new lines to serve some 3,000 members. The pressure of service on all the members of the Association, plus the record-breaking droughts in the early 1950s, a temperature; a record-breaking ice storm in the early 1951; the death by lightning of two very popular members while fishing on Lake, were all added to the employees. To make matters worse, polio was rampant among both children and adults in the community were being maimed for life by the disease. Some needed to give added attention to the workers.

William J. Brinkley, president of the Power Association, said "We tried to improve our gatherings and a baseball team. We have some very interesting other organizations, such as other associations, Bell Telephone Clubs, etc. These activities helped temporarily, but the winter of 1952 brought its toll of problems with snow, ice and rain.

"After much prayer regarding this situation we were led to consult the late Brother James Hardy Holder. After much prayer and meditation, he suggested we have a chapel service at the beginning of each work week and offered to serve as leader. He conducted the first twenty-minute service on February 9, 1953, beginning with a hymn sung by the group of twenty-five employees, followed by a prayer led by Brother Holder; a short sermon by Brother Holder; followed by another prayer. In later services Brother Holder introduced the reading, and the group recited in unison verses from the Bible.

"Things began to improve immediately and the attitude of the personnel began to change, and their efficiency improved remarkably. This was the answer to our prayers."

After a few months of these regular Monday morning services, Brother Holder, suggested that the ministers of all denominations of the county be invited to conduct services with Brother Holder taking his turn and serving as a back-up when others could not come. He then became coordinator for the whole program. Since he had retired from the active ministry at the time and lived in Iuka, he graciously served in this capacity until his death in December, 1963. One employee in recalling these early days said the presence of Brother Holder and his sense of dedication to these services was one of the greatest inspirations to the workers. "If most of the men were out on trouble calls due to bad weather, the others would suggest that we have the devotions if only five or six were present." Another by-product of these services was the organization of the first Tishomingo County Ministerial Association chaired by Brother Holder.

The ministers of all denominations and churches have responded most enthusiastically, serving without pay, saying their pay comes from their home churches, represented by some of the now thirty-three employees of the Association. No employee has ever been forced to attend these meetings, but the only ones who miss are the ones on vacation, or sick, or on emergency work. The attendance averages about 98% of the employees.

Since Brother Holder's death the program has been carried on regularly on the first day of each work week. Mr. Cecil Brown, a Methodist, and Mrs. Marie Ramsey, a Baptist, now serve as co-coordinators. From time to time some employees lead the services: namely Becky Walker, Brother Earl Martin, Delyn Owens, Cecil Brown, Marie Ramsey and Monroe Robinson.

Mr. Brinkley says, "To this day things have continued to improve, and we all know things will continue to improve as long as we remember:..... Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you' (Matthew 6:33). Certainly we have continued to have rough weather and other catastrophic situations, but the attitude of the employees is such they can take it in stride.

"Our plans are to continue these services as long as we are with the Power Association, and we hope they will continue as long as the Power Association is in existence, if for no other reason, as a memorial to the greatest man of our time we've ever known, and a true Christian who was an inspiration to everyone who was fortunate enough to have come in contact with him."

The Word for Today

By Charles H.

Want to be freeze-dried? First it was a freeze-dried coffee. Now scientists seek to extend life by freezing. They claim that a person could be frozen today and thawed in the 21st century when science may have been able to eliminate or delay the aging process and have all but overcome disease.

Here is another attempt by man to play God, and to try to overcome the effects of sin and so live forever without repentance and faith. But it is still true that "it is appointed unto man once to die, and after this the judgment." This appointment you will never avoid, however desperately you try.

Acts 17:31 adds, "God... now commandeth all men everywhere to repent: because he hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness." You cannot escape this appointment. You cannot hide from God. The only deliverance from death and damnation — the only eternal life — is in Jesus. "To Him give all the prophets witness, that through His name whosoever believeth in Him shall receive remission of sins."
