TAGS MAY BE BOUGHT WITH CHARGE CARD

Car owners in Tishomingo County this year for the first time may purchase their automobile registration tags from the tax assessor's and collector's office using Master Charge.

County Tax Assessor, Alvia Blakney, said as a service to county residents that his office will accept the Master Charge card in payment for 1974 car tags.

This service will give the holders of this card the option of payment plans, Alvia Blakney said, and the local Master Charge Center is providing this service to the tax collector's office without any service charge.

The only extra charge that a tag buyer would incur, the collector said, is if he does not completely pay the charge on his first statement, which he will receive on his regular Master Charge billing date. The extra charge would be interest to Master Charge, Alvia Blak-ney said, and in no way would be an extra charge made by his office.

coverage of chaos and confusion immediately following the evacuation of Jesus people at the return of Christ to the earth.

for this film. However, a free-will offering will be received to help with the David Wilkerson

TIMBER RATTLER KILLED.
This Timber Rattler, with eight rattlers and a button, was killed Sunday afternoon by Onis Ledbetter, left, and W. T. Lambert.
This dangerous reptile was found on a vacant lot inside the City Limits of Iuka near the sub-station on Eastport St.
The rattler was under a large piece of paper. When Mr. Ledbetter moved the paper the snake struck at him. Some of the vacant lots in Iuka are grown up... they are not only unsightly, but are dangerous places for children to play.

See this editorial elsewhere in this issue concerning the vacant lots in the city.

The Laws of God and Man

After serving for nearly 200 years as final arbiters of the Constitution, the Supreme Court recently reversed all its predecessors and decided that the constitutional prohibition against "cruel and unusual punishment" excluded the discriminatory use of the death penalty.

How could the Supreme Court decide that the Constitution meant something which practically all of the Supreme Court justices in history before them thought it did not mean? Have the words changed?

No, the Constitution has not changed. The people have. And what we face now is a Supreme Court which bases its decisions not simply on the words of the Constitution but on the will of the people, or on what they take to be the will of the people, or perhaps on what they think the will of the people should be, or maybe even occasionally on the will of the nine justices alone. One way or another, the prevailing judicial procedure now permits the history and letter of the law to be compromised to accommodate the current attitudes of the people.

Identically the same thing has happened in the realm of spiritual laws. Popular opinion opposes the standards of the Bible, so popular theologians have reinterpreted the Bible to conform to the will of the people. In the final appeal, their decision will be overturned and all who have trusted their defense will be convicted.

With judges sounding like sociologists, can we fairly object if the President, in the matter of the Watergate tapes, wants to reserve the right to subject the court's interpretation of the Constitution to his own personal judgment?

And with theologians conforming the laws of God to public opinion, can anyone be blamed for wanting to substitute his own standards of right and wrong for those of the Bible? If theologians, who are human beings like everyone else, can alter God's standards, so can anyone.

Our founders did not want the Constitution manipulated. They directed that the members of the Supreme Court be appointed for life, expressly to protect them from the pressures of popular (and unpopular) opinions.

Neither does God want the Bible rewritten. God does not mind being unpopular, and neither should His servants.

Subtly, the whole foundation of the rule of law is being challenged. Are laws entirely the invention of governments, to implement the will of the people? If we believe that, we are vulnerable to tyranny. Such was the logic of the infamous Italian dictator Mussolini, who justified his absolutism by claiming that "the state, as universal ethical will, is the creator of law."

Not so. God is the creator of law. Human laws may be annulled but Law, like God, will abide forever.

Soil Conservation News

BY W. A. STUART

Mr. Lois Underwood and Mr. Carl Sartain, Tishomingo County Soil Conservation District Commissioners; Mr. M. R. Whitehead, District Supervisor; and W. A. Stuart, District Conservationist with the Soil Conservation Service were among county leaders who discussed pending state erosion control legislation during a seminar in Jackson, September 18.

The Sediment and Erosion Control Institute was sponsored by the Mississippi Association of Soil and Water Conservation District Commissioners and the State Soil and Water Conservation Committee, the National Association of Conservation Districts and the Environmental Protection Agency (under contract 68-01-0704) assisted.

Governor William Waller invited recommendations from the group to him and of the legislature "that we might take new initiative in implementing better conservation practices in the state." He called the conference a "positive step to bring together leadership over the state to control soil losses." He complimented districts on their efforts in erosion control, which he termed "responsible for the clean water of the state."

"I predict that if we don't keep policies of land-use control at local level, the federal government will step in and set these controls for us," the Governor said, with reference to land-use legislation also contemplated.

Many speakers expressed the opinion that local control would be preferable.

Following an explanation of a model state law, explained by Ms. Mary Garner, deputy director, Department of Natural Resources, Office of the General Council, USDA, Washington, D. C., Senator B. G. Perry, of Horn Lake stated this law would have to be revised to "fit Mississippi's constitution."

"I believe the legislature can take this law and revise it and keep teeth in it," said Senator Perry.

With regard to extent of the problem in the state, R. T. Benton, state resource conservationist, Soil Conservation Service, Jackson, said, "More than 100 million tons of sediment erode annually from the unprotected land of Mississippi. The majority comes from sloping cropland, but a considerable percentage from roadbanks and urban developments."

Home builders were represented by J. B. Bell, executive director of the Home Builders Association of Memphis, and a mayor of Hernando for some 18 years.

"Speaking as a builder, I say we see the need for this Act," said Bell, "but please give us something we can live with instead of a police action, where violators would be fined. I propose a state law requiring developers to put up a cash bond at the beginning of a job, returnable if they protect the site."

Bell pointed out that building costs are accelerating until the average home in Memphis today costs $28,600, because so many more improvements are being built into new housing. Erosion control, he said, would add another cost.

Earlier in the day, speakers brought out that erosion now costs the state about 100 million dollars annually, in sediment damage to water, lands and in reduced yields.

Bowmar Virden, Jackson, a prominent farmer and vice-president of the MASWDC, declared, "The erosion of our land is a luxury we can no longer afford. If we don't do something to prevent soil erosion, I predict that hungry people will demand that federal controls be applied. The tight food supply we're now facing, with no surpluses, should add extra incentives to our already strong resolve to protect our soil for generations to come. We must utilize our existing social and legal structures to get this done."

MASWDC President R. E. Turman, Horn Lake, said, "Everyone agrees there is a problem. The Water Pollution Control Act of 1972, makes erosion control mandatory. The question now is to decide what, how and who."

Other speakers on the program were Robert Thronson, Office of Water Operations, Environmental Protection Agency, Washington, D. C., and David Firor, Southern Program Advisor, National Association of Conservation Districts, Athens, Georgia.

A TRIP TO THE MOUNTAINS
Back in April we decided that we would take a day off, hire a car and driver, and drive up to the mountains and do a little sight-seeing. We arranged to leave on Monday morning at 5:00 a.m., but the driver was late and so it was around 6:00 when he arrived. We then packed a picnic lunch, a case of Cokes, some warm clothes, and loaded in and left.

I must say that the car was rather crowded. In the first place, the local Ambassador car is not very large and roomy. Then the driver was a big Punjabi Sikh, one that we had used before. (Here, when you hire a car, the driver goes with it and you pay him $2.00 for every night you are on the road.) But getting back to our crowded condition, there were the seven of us besides the driver. Steve, myself, and the driver took the front seat, and Betty, Shannon, and our two girls, and Barbara took the back seat. Then there were cameras, diaper bag, coats, etc., on top of that. The only thing that saved us was the fact that the weather was still cool, especially in the early morning.

For the first two or three hours we drove through flat farm land and there was nothing much to see but bullock carts, farmers ploughing, villages and towns, etc., along the way. Since we had gotten up early, and were tired from the weekend, we dozed off and on most of the way.

We traveled north for the most part and maybe a little bit to the east. We went through towns like Meerut and Roorkee before coming to the well known city of Dehra Dun, near the hill station of Musoorie which was our destination. Just out of Dehra Dun we stopped for a Coke and then we began to wind and climb through the foothills and mountains until we reached Musoorie itself, resting on the ridge of a chain of mountains which would be considered the foothills of the Himalayas.

We found Musoorie rather quiet and with only a few people milling around. However, in the summer months it is a famous place for thousands and thousands to go to escape the heat of the plains. During that time it would be very crowded but now we felt we had it all to ourselves. We visited some souvenir shops and bought a few things and then sought out a Municipal Park where we had a picnic lunch. On the winding road to the park we could see the great snow covered peaks of the Himalayas in the distance; They were very beautiful and we could see why this was such a popular resort area. Being short on time, we drove back to Dehra Dun and then traveled on over to the famous town of Rishikish. This city is considered a holy place by the Hindus because it lies at the head of the sacred Ganges River. In the city, all along the banks of the river, are many Hindu temples and shrines and ashrams. We saw many holy men in the city, along the roads, and in the river area. Hundreds and thousands are constantly making pilgrimages to this place. It is counted so holy that no meat or eggs are even allowed in the city because strict Hinduism teaches a vegetarian diet.

Next we came on down the river to another holy city called Haridwar. It is also famous for its religious sites, festivals, gatherings, etc. We found the city crowded, and many many people down by the river side.

By now it was beginning to get dark and was past time to drive home. It was around 10:00 p.m. when we stopped before our gate and, as you might expect, we were worn out. The driver drove like he was flying a plane and we had many narrow escapes because of so many bullock carts and everything else on the road, without any lights. We enjoyed the day but, thank the Lord, we made it back alive.

Tishomingo Library News

Now that school is well underway once again, perhaps the Tishomingo Public Library may be of some help to students who need the use of various reference books at a time when they do not have access to the School Library.

In the reference section at the library you will find a new 1973 set of World Book Encyclopedias, a 1973 World Almanac, a Columbia Encyclopedia, a 1968-1972 official and statistical Register (Blue Book), a 12 volume set of Audubon Nature Encyclopedias, and a 7 volume set of Lands and People. We also have a book of Twentieth Century Authors, a Junior Book of Authors, and a Book of Familiar Quotations.

It is against library rules to "check out" reference books, but we welcome you to use them in the library.

Hours at Tishomingo Public Library are: Monday and Wednesday - 12:00 to 4:00, and Saturday - 1:00 to 3:00.

Elmore's — Since 1925

The first Elmore Store was opened in Clanton, Alabama in 1925 by its founder, V. J. Elmore, who was born on a farm in Alabama in 1887. As profits accumulated and personnel could be trained, the Company grew and prospered until at the time of Mr. Elmore's death in 1942, the chain had grown to 44 stores with over 1,200 employees.

Elmore's growth since its establishment in 1925 has been very steady in reaching a total of 127 stores. Several new stores are under construction now with "Grand Opening" dates throughout 1973. Eleven new stores were added to the Elmore Chain in 1972. The new stores are being opened in shopping centers or enclosed malls and range in size from 12,000 to 30,000 square feet.

With 127 stores located in five states — Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, Tennessee, and Florida — Elmore's is one of the most successful variety store chains in the South. Elmore's provides employment for more than 3,500 employees, both men and women.

V. J. Elmore, Inc., is a division of GENESCO, international manufacturer and retailer of apparel and footwear, with headquarters in Nashville, Tennessee.

The Elmore Company plans to have 200 stores in operation by 1974.

Editorial

"In the beginning God created all things" — These are beautiful words as we read them, or pause to study them, we are indubitably reminded of man's downfall, and the cause, thereof. The Garden of Eden must have been a Paradise on Earth — Until the entrance on the scene by the Serpent! And the descendants of that serpent have bedeviled man every since! Iuka may not be a Garden of Eden, but some of those pestiferous serpents are certainly occupying portions of our city — And I refer to those uncared, jungle-like vacant lots, that never seem to receive attention from the owners. Some of these properties belong to people, who have no financial problems, and evidently are satisfied to let their properties be over-run with vines, weeds and undergrowth. This attitude does not do our city any good, and of a certainty, the sight of such unkempt lots, is not conducive to the approval of prospective buyers, or renters — especially if children might get snake-bitten — right here in town! Elsewhere in this issue of your paper is a picture of a deadly timber rattle snake — killed just a few days ago — well within the city limits! Can you imagine the results if some child — perhaps searching for a lost ball — had stepped on, or near, this monster? Let's see if we can get some of these jungles cleared up. If not through civic pride, then from a safety standpoint.

Questions About The Food Stamp Program

(This column is prepared by the Food Assistance Division in cooperation with the Informational Services Unit of the Mississippi State Department of Public Welfare, Max M. Cole, Commissioner)

Q. How much will I have to pay and how many food stamps will I get?

A. This, of course, depends on the number of people living together and the amount of net income this group of people have. For the purpose of an example here, we will take a family of four people, whose net income monthly (after deductions) is $350. They would have to pay $89 and would receive a total of $116 in food stamp coupons. This purchase price would vary if their monthly income did. They would still receive the same total of $116 in food stamp coupons.

Q. You keep talking about deductions. What deductions are allowed in determining the price of the food stamps, or if I am eligible to buy food stamps?

A. There are only certain things that can be counted as a deduction in figuring the price of the food stamps. Excess rent or house notes, utilities or medical bills must be considered. Now to explain excessive rent or house notes and utilities. These make up your shelter costs. Anything you must pay for these shelter costs above thirty percent of your net monthly income may be deducted. We will provide an example here: Suppose you are paying rent or a house note of $50 a month and your utilities cost you approximately $30 a month. Your total shelter costs would be $80. Suppose that your net income is $300 a month. Thirty percent of this income would be $90, and since your shelter costs you less than this, you could not be allowed a deduction. However, suppose your net income was only $250 a month. Thirty percent then would be $75 and you would be allowed a $5 deduction, ($80-$75). Medical expenses above $10 a month become deductible items. We cannot allow you the expenses you have such as a furniture payment, a TV payment, a car note, clothing bills, etc.

Remember, we are trying to answer these questions in a general way and that when a person applies for food stamps his individual situation is considered. If you think you may be eligible to receive food stamps, please contact your local Welfare Department. They will be happy to talk with you.

About Welfare

What is service? The dictionary defines service as kindness to another, a contribution to the welfare of others. I hope, as you read these articles the next few months that you will agree that the Welfare Department is serviceable, the dictionary definition simply being, useful.

One of the basic services is that of information and referral, simply listening to problems when there is no one else to listen to, or when no one else wants to listen. We take this service for granted, probably because it is a part of our everyday job. We may not always have the answers or be able to help, but we make referrals, which is sending the person to the place they need to go. These are some of the everyday questions we deal with.

"I need glasses, I just can't see, but I don't have the money to buy any. Can you help?" "I can't live on the old place anymore, I'm all alone and have no where to go. Will you help me?"

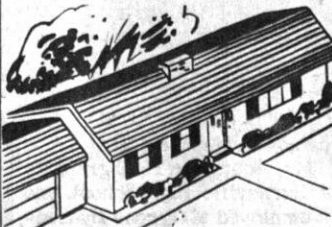

"I got this letter from Medicaid, but I don't understand it. What does it mean?"

"I want to work, but no one will hire me, can you find me a job?"

"My wife is sick. I have to talk with someone."

This is the first of a weekly column, "About Welfare." I invite the public to write any questions, responses, or subjects that you would like to be discussed. Write to Tishomingo County Welfare Department, Drawer 280, Iuka, Miss. 38852.

Waxing is not a new practice. The citrus waxing process was invented in 1922, and virtually all citrus grown in California was waxed by the 1940's.

Citrus fruit, as it matures in the orchard, develops a coating of natural plant wax. This natural coating has a protective function, chiefly to minimize the loss of moisture. Since the fruit picks up dust and debris in the orchard, one of the first steps at the packing-house is a thorough "bath." This washing process includes soaking in a detergent solution, scrubbing with soft brushes, and rinsing with hot water. This removes the natural protective wax, so the waxing procedure is performed next, to restore nature's own coating. Without it, the fruit would quickly become soft, the juice content lowered, the fruit more susceptible to decay. Waxing makes not only interstate trade possible, but world trade in citrus as well.

Waxes used on fresh fruits and vegetables are completely edible and are comprised of substances which are non-toxic to humans. Citrus wax is a high purity "food grade" paraffin, highly refined so that any harmful components are removed. It is approved for use by the Food and Drug Administration, and is accepted and used throughout the world. Since the wax is edible, there is no reason to remove it before using the peel in recipes.

FOOD ADVERTISING

Food advertisements can be a big help to the food shopper. They tell the buyer what is on sale and where. Often they include the price and sometimes, although not often enough, they also include a description of the food — the grade, the size, and other you sprayed the trunks in August, spray again in September and again in early October.

STRAWBERRIES

Fall planting of strawberries is recommended for south Mississippi. In that area, set the plants in late October or early November.

Fall plantings do well in north Mississippi if you plant them by October 15. If you plant after this date, the plants may not become established before freezes occur. For fall plantings to produce berries the following spring, set plants 1 foot apart on 3 feet by 3 1/2 foot rows. The recommended varieties are Sunrise, Tennessee Beauty, Pocahontas and Dixieland.

Prepare soil row and keep free of grass and weeds until time to set plants. Apply 6 to 8 pounds of complete fertilizer to each 100 feet of row and mix well about 10 days before setting plants.

You may find fungicide dip prior to transplanting beneficial in protecting young plants. Remove the older leaves and dip the entire plant in a fungicide solution for 15 minutes. By using the fungicidal dip young transplants will be protected from early infection caused by soil-borne organisms.

FLOWERS

CHRYSANTHEMUMS — Feed mums with a fertilizer solution made by dissolving a tablespoon of complete fertilizer (9-12-12) in each gallon of water. Shrivelled yellow leaves on lower part of plants show that they have run out of plant food. Water plants well during budding and blooming. It is important to continue insect and disease controls until frost. If you are growing the large exhibition or football mums, get the plastic cover on as soon as buds begin to show color. This will prevent bud-rot caused by rains.

BULBS — Now is the time to plant bulbs such as daffodil, lily, hyacinth, narcissus and iris. Choose ground that will grow good vegetables if you wish to grow good flowers from bulbs. Prepare the soil well. Leave top of bearded iris rhizomes exposed. Plant daffodils 8 to 10 inches deep; hyacinths, narcissus and Easter lilies, 6 to 8 inches deep.

MULCHES — Locate materials such as pine straw, cottonseed hulls, old sawdust and similar materials to use for winter mulch to protect perennials and shrubs in case of severe cold. Have the material handy in case the weather forecast is for heavy freezes.

TREES AND SHRUBS — Transplant shrubs and trees to the home yard in October. Be certain that you get a good ball of earth around the roots and apply plenty of water at the time of transplanting.

Take hardwood cuttings of such evergreens as azalea, camellia, crapemyrtle, Chinese holly, abelia and Pfitzer juniper. Use hormone dust on cuttings to speed up the rooting. Before you drain the garden hose and coil it up for the winter, consider your greens and newly planted spring-flowering bulbs. They need watering in the if they are to be in good next spring. After a dry mer, do not allow evergreens go into the winter with no

BELMONT DEFEATS BULLDOGS

Only four seconds remaining in the game, Belmont's Mike Kemp slashed back four yards for the touchdown Friday night. The Cardinals edged the Tishomingo Bulldogs 6-0 in the conference football game.

Kemp's run ended a 70 yard march that began on the 30. A thirty-yard pass aided the Belmont drive, along with two damaging penalties. A pass interference call and an offside kept Cardinal alive.

Tishomingo came close to scoring in the third quarter on a drive that ended at the five yard line, where the drive was halted by the Belmont defense.
