ONE-HUNDRED AND THREE YEARS

IUKA, TISHOMINGO COUNTY, MISSISSIPPI

THURSDAY, JULY 31, 1986 NO. 7

Charles O. Rushing Retires As Vo-Tech Director

With the end of the 1985-86 school year, Charles O. (Bud) Rushing retired as director of Tishomingo County Vocational-Technical Center, a post he had held since 1977. Before coming to the Vo-Tech Center in 1974, Mr. Rushing worked as high school vocational agriculture instructor in Wilmont, Arkansas (1957-60); Shannon, Miss. (1960-63); and Burnsville (1963-74). After graduating from Burnsville High School, Mr. Rushing attended Northeast Mississippi Junior College and Mississippi State University where he earned the following degrees: Bachelor of Science from the School of Agriculture in 1957; Master of Agriculture in 1962; and Educational Specialist in 1974. He served in the U. S. Air Force from 1951-55.

Mr. Rushing expresses sincere appreciation to those whose cooperation has made his work in Tishomingo County so pleasant and rewarding: Supt. Alvia Blakney and the Tishomingo County Board of Education; the staff and the advisory and craft committees at the Vo-Tech Center; and all the people of the county who have supported the work being done at the Vo-Tech Center.

Mr. Rushing's plans for the retirement years include developing his property in Burnsville into a horse farm -- a dream shared by his wife Judy; his mother, Mrs. Georgia Rushing; and his children, Richard and Vena Kay, who reside with him at the family home. With more time for travel, Mr. Rushing also looks forward to visiting his brothers: Travis in Saratoga, California; Billy in Downer's Grove, Illinois; and James in Hurst, Texas.

All friends and former associates wish Mr. Rushing all the best that the future can offer!

Old Courthouse Designated As Mississippi Landmark

The Old County Courthouse in Iuka was recently designated a Mississippi Landmark by the Permit Committee of the Board of Trustees of the Department of Archives and History.

Construction of the courthouse was begun in 1888 under the supervision of former Governor John M. Stone (1876-82). Furnishings, including thirty-nine benches, a judge's stand, and a bar, were installed early in 1889 indicating that the building was ready for occupation by that date.

Between 1889, and 1971, when it was abandoned for a newer building, the Old Tishomingo Courthouse was the focal point of the everyday life of the county and the center for occasional social gatherings connected with political speeches, hangings, and singing conventions. Notable speakers have included James K. Vardaman and Theodore G. Bilbo.

Architecturally, it is the most elaborate example of a building type whose decorative effect is the brick work arranged in intricate corbelled patterns. Partly due to the influence of the courthouse, this decoration is echoed in simpler form in many of the town's commercial buildings.

"Mississippi Landmark" status is awarded to properties that have been reviewed and found architecturally, culturally, or historically significant to the development of Mississippi history.

While public buildings automatically fall under the jurisdiction of the Permit Committee, private property owners must request that they be designated. The property is then protected from alteration or destruction under the Antiquities Law of Mississippi. The Mississippi Landmark program is administered by the Department of Archives and History.

1,270 Out Of Work In Tishomingo County

Charles Smith, Manager of Mississippi State Employment Service, announced that unemployment in Tishomingo County rose at June. An estimated 1,270 persons were unemployed, or 8 percent of the civilian force. This compares to 6 percent in May and 21.7 percent in June, 1985. There are 6,310 Tishomingo County residents employed at mid-month, 80 more than in May and 220 more than in June, 1985. The civilian labor force for the county, which is a combination of employed and unemployed, rose to 7,580, compared to 7,370 in May and 7,780 in June, one year ago.

Manufacturing employment in the county stood at 2,590, a minimal 10 above the previous estimate and 110 above the figure for June, one year ago. Individuals employed in nonmanufacturing jobs stood at 2,750, compared to 2,700 one month ago and 2,650 one year ago.

Smith also stated that the civilian labor force for the six-county area of Alcorn, Benton, Marshall, Prentiss, Tippah, and Tishomingo dropped by 120 at mid-June, with a drop of 270 noted from June, 1985. An estimated 52,340 individuals were employed at the reporting period, compared to 53,060 in May and 61,320 in June, one year ago. There were 8,820 unemployed at mid-month, 600 above the previous month's estimate but 1,290 below the figure for one year ago. The rate of unemployment was estimated to be 14.4 percent, compared to 13.4 percent last month and 16.5 percent one year ago.

Manufacturing employment in the six-county area was estimated to be 17,500, 240 above the previous estimate and 930 over the figure for one year ago. Nonmanufacturing employment stood at 20,900, compared to 21,550 in May and 20,990 in June, 1985. These losses were due mainly to school related workers being off for the summer.

Silk floral arrangements placed in vases in the Oak Grove Cemetery in Iuka have been disappearing and that's a shame!

These flowers, which are taken to the graves by friends and family of the deceased, are expression of the binding love which still remains.

The burial plots at Oak Grove are privately owned by relatives of the deceased. To take any item without permission from the site is considered stealing and should be dealt with as such.

Let us remember to respect this sacred ground and continue to practice the Golden Rule, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you."

Foundation Assists In Hay Distribution

Local Tishomingo County Alcorn County farmers have hay that they don't want to use might want to take some to the South Carolina farmers whose fields have dried up because of the drought there. If interested in selling hay, contact the Tishomingo County Development Foundation office at 423-9933. The office of Mississippi through Agriculture Department is coordinating shipment by rail to the areas in South Carolina where hay is needed, and has asked that the local Development Foundation assist in the effort. This might open a market for hay to local farmers since the transportation is being provided free by Southern Railroad.

If interested in donating or selling, contact the office at 423-9933.

CARING FOR YOUR PET

Pets Should Fit Their Environment

If you plan to give or get a live pet as a gift -- or just to take one home, it's important to determine ahead of time the type of pet that's best suited to the household for which it is intended.

The new pet should fit into the family's existing lifestyle -- not upset it.

Some animals are strictly outdoor animals and cannot be housebroken. Others can cause serious housekeeping and health problems for the family.

Exotic animals frequently become a major problem for their owners as the animals mature.

Laws in some areas prohibit the keeping of certain animals as pets.

Even the selection of a puppy or kitten should be given careful consideration and discussed with a veterinarian before purchasing a "cute little ball of fur".

Remember that "ball of fur" will grow -- and in some cases, grow and grow.

Not all breeds of dogs are intended as appartenment or house dwellers. They get too large. They need an outdoor area in which to run and play if they are to remain healthy and happy.

Knowing in advance the expected size an animal is likely to become can prevent later heartbreak, especially for a child.

Some breeds have better dispositions than others. Something to be considered if children are involved.

Plan carefully and select an animal that will fit into and become a part of the family for which it is intended. Select an animal that will bring happiness into its new environment for years to come.

SHOULD LIGHT FOODS BE INCLUDED IN YOUR DIET?

Led by diet sodas, light beverages and light frozen entrees, diet food and beverage sales are growing at triple the rate of all foods, according to a recent study. Reduced-calorie and reduced-fat foods are the largest segments of a growing "diet" market, the study found. According to the study, this market includes foods low in calories and foods low in such ingredients as sodium, caffeine, or cholesterol, as well as high-fiber foods.

As demand for such foods increases and the number of available products multiplies, more consumers are asking questions about what constitutes a "light" food. Light foods contain less of such substances as fat, sugar or alcohol and they are usually lower in calories. When "light" is used in package labeling to represent a claim for weight control, these foods are expected to conform with regulations for low or reduced-calorie foods. Additionally, some foods are considered "light" not because their ingredients differ substantially from non-light foods, but because they are packaged in servings small enough to limit the number of calories eaten by the consumer to an amount suitable for diet meal planning.

Calorie content is lower in light foods by reducing the amount of high-calorie ingredients and/or by substituting low-calorie ingredients for higher calorie ones. To reduce the caloric content of foods, one of the major components in food must either be reduced or eliminated.

It is generally understood that food has three major components--protein, carbohydrates, and fats. Constituting about 95 percent of the food supply, these ingredients provide the majority of the calories in food. Proteins and carbohydrates each contribute four calories per gram, and fats contribute nine calories per gram.

As the most concentrated source of calories, fat is a primary target for elimination or reduction. Carbohydrates, which include sugars and starches, are a major source of calories in the average American diet and hence another important target for caloric reduction. Protein is not a significant target for caloric reduction in processed foods.

While these components of food are sources of energy and therefore play a critical role in the human diet, the food technologist pays careful attention to their functional values in food as well. For example, sugar contributes not only sweet taste to food, but also provides texture and bulk in baked products. In addition, sugar reacts with heat to produce other flavors and colors in foods. Oil and fat are traditionally used to suspend flavorings and spices in salad dressings, to provide a characteristic mouth feel to certain foods, or to perform other functions in food preparation.

As a food is reformulated to reduce its caloric content, consideration must be given to the specific roles that fats and carbohydrates play. Taste, texture, moisture content, density, color, stability, volume -- any of these characteristics may be affected by a change in the ingredients or in the proportion of the ingredients.

While specialized ingredients have helped to meet the growing demand for light foods, the caloric content of many light foods is reduced in more traditional ways. Lower calorie ingredients are frequently substituted for standard ingredients in processed light foods (low-fat cheese as an example), and standard ingredients in certain prepared foods (breadings, for example) are often reduced or eliminated in light foods. Altered preparation methods can reduce calories further. For example, the amount and kind of cooking oil used to cook light foods often differs from that used to prepare standard foods.

With additional advances in food technology, an even wider range of light foods will soon become available to the consumer.

GARDENS

Do garden chores early in the day. Control weeds and keep the garden watered during dry spells. The garden needs 1 to 2 inches of water per week. Mulches really pay off at this time of year. Apply insecticides and fungicides in late afternoon or early evening. Contact our office (423-3616) if you are having problems with diseases and insects that you can't identify or don't know how to control.

As vegetables mature and are harvested, remove the old plants and rework the rows for additional planting space.

Continue to plant Southern peas and bush lima beans if you need more of these vegetables. Mid to late July is the time to set out tomato, eggplant and pepper plants for fall harvests.

Prevent bird problems on tomatoes by harvesting before the fruit is fully ripe; this also reduces cracking problems. Continue to spray tomatoes for early blight control, and sidedress tomato plants every 4 to 6 weeks.

Remove all oversized, overmature, disease, and insect-ridden vegetables from the garden. Compost non-diseased material.

Harvest frequently to reduce losses to over-maturity. Large squash, cucumbers and okra left on plants reduce future harvests.

Check the "ground spot" (where the melon touches the soil) on watermelons before harvest. The ground spot should be creamy yellow in color, not greenish white. Honeydew melons have a golden-yellow cast when mature. Cantaloupes fall off the vine when ripe. Harvest cantaloupes a little early to reduce cracking of the melon.

August planting includes seeds of broccoli, cauliflower, brussels sprouts, collards, cabbage, Chinese cabbage, bush snap beans, summer squash, cucumbers, spinach, lettuce, rutabaga, mustard and turnips. The Garden Tabloid, MCES Publication 1091, lists recommended planting dates for fall vegetables.

Successful planting for fall requires water for seed germination and seeding survival.

ATTENTION SAILING ENTHUSIASTS! During the month of August, local model ship builder Bill Stahl will have his collection on display at Iuka Public Library. Mr. Stahl has always been interested in boats and has been building models for the past ten years. His replicas range in size from 3 inches to 20 inches. In addition to Mr. Stahl's models, books on sailing and boating will be on display and some will be available for checkout. Be sure and visit the library sometime during the month to see the schooners, clippers, and historical and fishing boats.

Continue to harvest all summer vegetables, & begin to harvest early planted sweet potatoes in late August.

Keep weeds under control, because they rob plants of water and fertilizer, and weeds that make seeds this year will be back to bother you next year.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor,

Recently a group of approximately sixty people from the Sparkman Street Church of Christ came from Hartselle Alabama to visit the Iuka Church of Christ. Most of us arrived mid-afternoon on Sunday before church service that evening. It had been planned earlier to arrive there in time to enjoy the Mineral Springs Park for awhile. The majority of people had stopped at the park previously on a trip to Memphis and were impressed with the park. I would like to compliment the citizens of Iuka on the care that has been taken over the years and especially now in preserving the park.

It is always a pleasure to return home and visit the place that many of us have enjoyed over the years. It is a special pleasure to share it with friends.

Sincerely yours,
Barbara Parsons Bishop

One More Chance For CRP Sign-Up

State Landowners will have still another chance to sign up for the new Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) later this summer, according to State Forester Robert S. "Sid" Moss of the Mississippi Forestry Commission (MFC). There have been two earlier sign up periods for this important opportunity to convert highly erosive cropland trees.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has indicated that it will announce a third CRP sign-up, probably for early August, Moss said.

Freddie Jordan, Forest Resource Management Chief for the Commission, said the MFC will provide the technical assistance to CRP participants who want to plant trees. "Our Agency also has trees landowners can order, including genetically im-

UNA Offers Three Computer Classes

Three computer workshops for the public, designed especially for office personnel and others in business, industry, education and government, have been scheduled through the University of North Alabama's Office of Continuing Education.

Bill Matthews, director of the office of continuing education, said, "Each class combines lecture and discussion with hands-on practice with IBM personal computers and no more than one person per computer".

"How To Use Personal Computers and Their Software" is the introductory course in personal computers for those with little or no experience. This workshop enables the participants to develop skills to use popular hardware and software for word processing and data management and to use financial and other spread-sheets.

The class is taught by Paulette Alexander, UNA assistant professor of computer information systems, and meets on Monday and Wednesday evenings beginning August 4, from 6 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. for three weeks. The $154 fee includes a textbook and two program diskettes with word processing, spreadsheet and data management software that participants may keep.

The "Using dBase III" class begins August 5, and meets Tuesdays and Thursdays for three weeks. This workshop teaches participants how to manage computerized files or data bases using one of the most popular software packages. Data bases are used widely in business, industry and office settings to manipulate information needed for marketing and production as well as to help with payroll, billing and other accounting matters.

The database workshop is conducted by Philip Jones, UNA assistant professor of computer information system, and meets from 6 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. The $148 registration fee includes a textbook and a program diskette.

"Using Supercalc 3," taught by Alexander, meets for four consecutive Saturdays beginning August 9, from 8 a.m. to 12 noon. Participants will learn how this widely used program can help office and production personnel replace the long-used paper and pencil spreadsheets with electronic spreadsheets which allow numbers to be changed and totals recomputed automatically. Spreadsheets are also excellent tools for dealing with "what if" questions. The $143 fee includes a textbook and the program diskette.

For registration information or a brochure on these non-credit workshops, call 766-4100, ext. 289. Pre-registration is required.

Savvy from Susan

Dear Susan,

I am never sure what to tell the makeup consultant when she asks me what type skin I have. How can I tell?

Confused

Dear Confused,

There are 4 possibilities, and you can fit yourself into one of them if you will just take time to observe your skin for a few days.

* Oily

This type is usually cursed with large pores. Even when it is cleansed well in the mornings by noon it will be shiny with oil. Nothing will completely reduce the large pores, but good cleansing morning and night will normalize them and you will be less likely to have blemishes. Look on the bright side; we girls with oily skin will be less likely to see wrinkles as soon.

* Dry

Dry skin will feel as though it is one size too small for your face after it is washed. There will be dry flaky patches, and sometime red spotty areas. Wrinkles come quickly to dry skin, especially around the eyes, and the area from the nose to the corner of the mouth. If this is a description of your skin, then moisturize and protect!!

* Combination

If you have an area across the forehead and the nose (this is called the "T-zone") that is oily, but your cheeks have the characteristics of dry skin, then you probably have combination skin. This is the hardest type to bring into proper balance, but with the many fine products on the market your problem is more easily solved.

* Normal

You are a lucky lady if you fit this description. This type is neither oily or dry. Rarely ever will this gal see a blemish. However normal skin can have clogged pores or dryness because of the imbalance of hormones at given times. Don't neglect it just because it gives you no problems. It will wrinkle sooner than oily skin if it is not properly moisturized daily.

CHILLERS AND THRILLERS PARTY—At the conclusion of the Summer Reading Program at the Iuka Public Library, approximately 50 library staff. A special thanks goes to all the mothers who volunteered their time and energies each week to help the library staff with the reading program. Without this volunteer help it would be impossible to have an effective program.

THIRD CONSERVATION RESERVE PROGRAM SIGNUP BEGINS AUGUST 4th

Starting August 4, Tishomingo County farmers may volunteer highly erodible cropland for entry into the 1987 Conservation Reserve Program. The third sign-up period for the new USDA program will end August 15, according to Howard R. Bridges, chairperson of the Tishomingo Agricultural Stabilization Conservation Service.

The Conservation Reserve Program encourages farmers to stop growing crops on highly erodible cropland and plant it to grass or trees through 10 year contracts with USDA.

"Farmers will have an opportunity during this next sign-up period to bid on a program contract for the 1987 crop year," Bridges said. Successful bidders will be allowed to harvest their 1986 crop before the contract becomes effective. If necessary, he said, land designated may not be grazed after October 1, 1986.

For retiring highly erodible cropland from production, farmers will receive conservation payments of up to 50 percent of the eligible cost of establishing trees or grass on the acres placed in the program. They also will receive rental payments of up to $50,000 per year, based on the bid per acre times the number of acres under the contract. He said rental payments will be made in cash or commodity certificates annually, as soon as possible after October 1, 1987, to producers with approved contracts. Cost-sharing payments will be made as soon as possible after participants report the approved conservation practice is completed.

About 3,000 acres of Tishomingo County cropland are classified as highly erodible and eligible for the Conservation Reserve Program. So far, 400 acres have been accepted in the program, according to Bridges. During the first two sign-up periods farmers total of 76 acres from 3 ms. Bids accepted averaged $33.96 per farm and total about $2,547.03.

The ASCS official said farmers may be more interested in the Conservation Reserve Program now that they know about the buster and conservation compliance rules of the Security Act. Those who meet the rules may not be eligible for certain program benefits.

Nothing is impossible to a willing heart.

POLICE CHIEF Floyd Whitaker makes an assessment of controlled substances confiscated in recent raids.

Chief Releases Report On Local Home Raids

In two separate raids conducted by the Iuka Police Department on Friday, July 18, approximately $250.00 worth of marijuana and an undetermined dollar value of a homemade alcoholic beverage was confiscated from two local residents.

Janie Brown, mid 30's, Pike Street, Iuka, was arrested Friday following a raid at her home. According to Police Chief Floyd Whitaker, the department had kept the house under surveillance for some time due to reports of "heavy traffic" in the area.

Found during the raid were 30 marijuana cigarettes and a bag containing a small amount of marijuana. The street value was estimated at $250.00, Chief Whitaker said.

Ms. Brown was charged with distribution of a controlled substance. A guilty plea was entered in city court Monday and she was fined $250.00. Officers assisting in the search and arrest were: Ricky Cornelison, Robert Till, and Wheeler Carson.

In a separate incident, Charles Budgie Lambert, mid 40's, Pickwick Circle Apartments, was arrested and charged with possession of a homemade alcoholic beverage.

Acting on a tip from a reliable source, officers Ricky Cornelison, Robert Till, Wheeler Carson and Chief Whitaker conducted a search of the Lambert premises and found a five gallon plastic jug containing home brew, a homemade alcoholic beverage.

Lambert entered a guilty plea and was fined $200.00.

NEMJC To Offer Air Force ROTC

Northeast Junior College and the United States Air Force have joined forces to offer the only junior college Air Force ROTC program in the state, college officials announced today. The junior college officers' training program is slated to begin in August.

"We are delighted to be involved in a program of this nature," President Harold T. White said. "We understand that the Air Force is interested in recruiting a select group of highly qualified men and women from the junior college ranks and we feel confident that our students possess the qualities they are seeking."

Identical to the officer training programs the Air Force conducts on major university campuses, the Northeast ROTC program will enable students to explore the program for a full two years before making any sort of postgraduate commitment. Northeast will assume the role of a branch campus for the already successful program which is presently being conducted at The University of Mississippi.

"We expect a very close relationship to develop among the students in both programs," White said. "At least two visits per semester are planned to the sister campus."

Northeast will have one ROTC instructor who will be assisted by junior and senior cadets from Ole Miss.

In addition to their regular classes, students who choose to enroll in the training program will take eight semester hours of ROTC classes over a four semester period. Content includes a history of the air force, a study of today's air force and leadership classes. Participants will wear the air force's own "dress blues" on class days and will be invited to attend the annual "Dining In" awards night and formal banquet.

A junior ROTC field day and barbeque is also being planned as well as airforce flights each semester and a tour of an air force base. Students enrolled this fall will travel to Cape Canaveral.

For additional information, contact J. Connie Drown, director of Guidance and Counseling on the Northeast campus by calling 728-7751, ext. 235.

Rescue Squad Meets

The recently organized Tishomingo County Rescue Squad met Monday, July 28, at the Iuka City Hall with twenty or more citizens attending. Officers were elected and are as follows: President, Joe Parker; Vice President, Howard Berryman; and Secretary-Treasurer, James Hill.

Efforts to retrieve any equipment that may have been salvaged from a previous rescue organization in Tishomingo County and the need of a building to store equipment was discussed.

The organization desperately needs manpower. An all out campaign is in progress to recruit volunteers. Anyone wishing to join but cannot attend the meeting, can contact any of the following numbers, 423-6834; 423-3144; or 423-5509. The next meeting will be Monday, August 4, at 7:00 p.m. at the Iuka City Hall. More plans will be made to get volunteers and plans for a CPR class will be made. The organization hopes to offer more classes in search and rescue as equipment and manpower permits.

All interested persons are urged to attend or call one of the telephone numbers listed.

Ask Ochsner

Q. I suffer from heartburn infrequently but when I do it's very uncomfortable. Is there something I can do to avoid getting heartburn altogether?

A. It's estimated that about one third of the country's population experience the symptom of heartburn—an uncomfortable burning or pressure which is usually located just below the breast bone. Most people with heartburn recognize it as a meal-related problem and treat themselves with antacids, says Dr. James Smith, a gastroenterologist at Ochsner Clinic, New Orleans.

The most common offending substances are citrus juice, greasy and fatty foods, especially fried foods and alcoholic beverages. Dr. Smith says it's important to be thoroughly checked by a physician if

BIRTH ANNOUNCEMENT..... Thomas and Becky Woodis of Cherokee, Alabama are proud to announce the birth of their daughter, Jessica Michelle, born on July 7th at 9:36 a.m. at Helen Keller Hospital. She weighed 7lbs. 9ozs. and was 20 3/4" long. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Brown and Mrs. Roe Woodis Garber, and the late Stanley Woodis, all of Cherokee. Great-grandparents are Mrs. Belle Logan and the late Pat Logan, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Woodis and the late Mr. and Mrs. James Roy Blackburn, all of Cherokee. Mrs. Rebecca Brown and the late Johnnie Brown of Russellville, Alabama.

there is some confusion as to what is causing the sensation. If the heartburn symptoms persist in waking from sleep, producing difficulty in swallowing or show signs of bleeding, then a doctor should be consulted immediately.

The basic problem which produces heartburn is the fact that the normal natural barrier that keeps the stomach contents from coming into the esophagus is a sphincter muscle. This muscle acts like a valve. When heartburn occurs, it is because the valve is not functioning properly and isn't strong enough to do the job of closing. Heartburn is usually chronic and the person who experiences it often will have to change his lifestyle in order to get relief, Dr. Smith says. There are a number of guidelines he suggests following in dealing with this sometimes chronic condition:

- * Refrain from smoking, or at least cut down if you can't stop altogether.
- * Use moderation when it comes to consuming coffee, alcohol, chocolates or fatty foods and of course, avoid any foods that you know will cause heartburn.
- * Eat smaller, more frequent meals during the day and avoid eating within four hours of bedtime.
- * Take your medication according to the doctor's instructions.
- * Let out your belt a notch or two and wear looser, more comfortable clothing.
- * Lose weight if the doctor recommends it.
- * Sleep with the head of your bed raised about six or eight inches if the doctor thinks this will help.

If none of these suggestions produce relief and the symptoms become more severe, see your physician.

Timberline

By Brendix Glasgow, County Forester

Maybe some of you haven't heard about it, but the market for Southern Pine timber has suffered a lot lately due to heavy increases in imported Canadian lumber as well as Southern Pine Beetle salvage sales and general slump in the housing industry.

A while back, when Southern lumber mills were first beginning to cry out loud about the poor market situation, Canadian lumber interests and their Government were denying that they were subsidizing timber sales up there. Now it looks like they're going to have to back off a bit on that stance.

We read where the International Trade Commission (ITC) has ruled by a vote of 5-0 that Canada is injuring the U.S. forest product industry. That's a first step in the right direction.

Now if we can make it abundantly clear to the ITC that Canadian Government subsidizing of log prices has caused 650 U.S. sawmills to shut down since 1977, whereas Canada has added 80 mills and captured over a third of America's lumber market maybe we'll get some remedial action out of the ITC. Canada is a good neighbor, but they're a fierce competitor with us in terms of the softwood timber market.

A ruling by the ITC on whether the Canadian government is indeed the culprit via its subsidizing practices may be forthcoming in October. We should get a favorable ruling and the market outlook could begin to look much brighter by the end of calendar year 1986.

Nice thing about growing timber is that in times like these you can just keep it in the "bank" (on the stump) and wait for things to get better!

I understand that over 70,000 acres were scheduled for pine tree planting in our State during the first two Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) sign ups this year. That's great, but something even greater is that they are talking about another sign-up opportunity in a few more weeks. Have you checked with the ASCS office about "renting" some of your land that may qualify for tree planting under CRP? You should.

Closing Reminder: If you'll need trees for planting later this coming winter under CRP or any other reforestation program you'd best get an order filled in and submitted. The supply is dwindling every day. You'd better hurry. It's first-come-first served and the seedling supply situation could get very tight as winter planting season approaches.

Tenn-Tom Today

By: L. Christian Mosebach Park Ranger - Bay Springs

The staff of the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway would like to share with you the following FUN FACTS about the Tenn-Tom and the natural world that surrounds us.

When the American astronauts were in space, they were only able to identify two (2) manmade structures on earth. One was the Great Wall of China, and you guessed it—the other was the Tenn-Tom Waterway. Just think of it. The Waterway is not only known world-wide, but now we know that it is visible to other worlds.

In order for a bullfrog to swallow, it must blink its eyes. The eyes are shaped like ice cream cones viewed from the side, lying down. The tips of these eye cones push food down the frog's throat when the eyelids are blinked.

Please don't use a black cherry twig for a hot dog stick. The tree contains the poison cyanide.

Interested in having a 10% drop in your boat insurance rates? Tenn-Tom Rangers are certified Mississippi Boating Safety instructors, and they do conduct free classes that will qualify you for premium reductions. If you are interested in one of these classes, contact your local Tenn-Tom Resource Office.

Acorn bread was a staple in the diets of many North American Indians.

Blonds are more prone to mosquito bites than brunets or redheads. The reason is blonds tend to favor blue clothing and this is the most attractive color to insects. Think about it! Aren't bug zappers blue while anti-bug lights are yellow? Only the female mosquito bites. The blood she collects is needed for her eggs to mature.

The Corps of Engineers in cooperation with the Mississippi Department of Wildlife Conservation have transplanted twenty-six (26) Canada geese to Bay Springs Lake.

Canada geese mate for life. Bay Springs Lake does have the habitat to support a resident population of geese, but the geese will not thrive unless the public helps to make these new immigrants welcome by not molesting or shooting at them or the nesting structures they use.

Over 25,000,000 man hours of labor went into the construction of the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway. A special thanks is given to all of you that worked on the Waterway. History was made upon completion of your work by making the Tenn-Tom the largest civil works project ever undertaken by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

For hundreds of years the inner bark of slippery elm has been a successful sore throat medicine.

In 1985 3.6 million people visited the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway.

The most valuable resource on the Tenn-Tom is the people who fish, swim, boat, ski, camp and just plain enjoy this public land and water. We ask you to try and help us protect our most valuable resource by "playing it safe in the water" this summer.

Narcotics News

Q. What is "black tar"? Have any arrests been made involving this drug in Mississippi?

(L.A. Flora, MS)

A. "Black tar" is a crudely processed heroin and commonly referred to as "tootie roll", "gumball", or "goma". It resembles roofing tar with its appearance being a dark brown to black sticky or hard substance. "Black tar" originated in Mexico with average purity levels of 60% to 70% and some have been recorded as high as 93%. The cost ranges from $100 to $1000 per gram depending upon its purity and the area in which it is sold. So far no arrest have been made by our agency involving this type of heroin. At this time "black tar" seems to be more of a problem in the West, however, the presence of this drug has been confirmed in twenty-three states.

If it's convenience and nutrition that consumers want—and that's what the research says—then they ought to learn more about processed meats.

The Meat Board's processed meats program is making it easy for them to get the necessary information. Its communications effort is targeting four distinct audiences with publicity that tells the processed meats story in the most appropriate way.

Dietitians play a critical role in helping people plan their diets. Their opinions count with consumers.

The processed meats program is getting through to this important thought-leader audience. Professional health care journals read by dietitians—Journal of the American Dietetic Association, Food Management and Restaurants and Institutions—are carrying two processed meats ads, and dietitians are responding.

The "Super Bowl" and "Health Club" ads each feature two processed meat products in a meal that meets guidelines for fat, sodium and cholesterol while providing at least a third of the daily requirements for several important vitamins and minerals. High recall is a good measure of an ad's effectiveness, and these ads are doing well. But an even better measure is the number of dietitians who are sending ad coupons to the Meat Board for more information.

So far, more than 1,500 dietitians have requested the processed meats nutrition and recipe brochure, as well as posters and handout materials, offered with the ad.

Armed with the latest data on how much processed meat is actually consumed by Americans, the Meat Board's Dr. Janet Williams recently visited the editors of America's leading popular magazines.

Williams, who is associate director of nutrition, explained to them how anyone following normal dietary guidelines can easily fit processed meats into the diet.

Her media tour included visits with Redbook, American Health, Weight Watchers Magazine, Seventeen, New Body Magazine, House Beautiful, Ladies Home Journal, Woman's Day, Health Magazine, Family Circle and Working Woman.

"Most of the editors I visited are really open to the information we have," Williams said. "By establishing regular contact with them we do more than just report numbers. We also become more credible in their eyes as a source of nutrition information about meat."

A 30-second public service announcement showing processed meats and stressing the importance of eating a variety of foods has had 1,221 telecasts on 43 stations since summer, creating a total of 46,600,000 viewer impressions. An impression occurs each time one viewer sees the announcement. The number of impressions reflects the number of viewers as well as the amount of repetition, both of which are key elements of an effective publicity campaign.

The PSA was developed from a one-minute video news release, produced a year ago by the Meat Board, on the consumption of processed meat products and what that consumption contributes to the diet.

Last fall's "Coming to America" poster, which chronicles the use of processed foods by the Pilgrims who crossed the Atlantic on the Mayflower, has met with tremendous enthusiasm from teachers. The poster was produced by the Meat Board and distributed with the October issue of Instructor magazine, which has a circulation of 280,000 elementary grade teachers.

More than 6,000 teachers have requested additional copies of the poster. Further distribution plans are just getting under way and many of the teachers responses are being compiled by the Meat Board.

The Processed Meat program at the Meat Board emphasizes the nutritional benefits of processed meats as well as their convenience and versatility. Processed meats are one of the things going for convenience and institutional use.

Pregnancy Test Kits

"The rabbit died" was once a phrase synonymous with "she is pregnant." This terminology originated with the use of live rabbits (as well as mice, rats, and frogs) in laboratories to determine human pregnancy.

Today things are much simpler — so simple that women can determine whether or not they are pregnant with convenient, easy-to-use home pregnancy test kits. The first home pregnancy test kit was introduced only a few years ago and was modeled after tests that had been used for years in physicians' offices and laboratories.

All currently available home test kits detect the presence of the hormone human chorionic gonadotropin (HCG) which appears in the blood and urine of pregnant women as early as seven days after conception. Urine is mixed with reagents and the presence or absence of a reaction observed.

Pregnancy tests are accurate if used according to directions. False negative results can occur, however, if the test is performed too soon after conception or if reagents are not precisely followed. Ask your pharmacist for additional information and about test kit selection.

More Questions About AIDS

Despite all the public attention given to AIDS, readers still have many questions about the disease and their own risk of contracting it. This month, Peter Wolfe, D., an internationally known AIDS researcher at UCLA, answers some of the questions UCLA Health Insights readers have asked.

I go to a gym where many of the clientele are gay. Is the AIDS virus in sweat? Am I exposing myself to AIDS?

There is no reason to stop going to the gym because there are gay men there.

AIDS is an infectious disease caused by a recently discovered virus called HTLV-III (human T-cell lymphotropic virus) or LAV (lymphadenopathy-associated virus). This virus attacks and destroys a type of white blood cell called the helper T lymphocyte. It is transmitted via sexual contact, via blood or blood product exposure, and across the placenta. The virus has been found to be present in semen, blood, tears and several other body fluids. As the virus is harbored in lymphocytes, any body fluid that contains lymphocytes will contain the HTLV-III virus. The amount of virus in blood and semen far exceeds the amount present in other body fluids, and there is no evidence that tears, sweat, etc. represent a risk to others.

Q. How does anyone know that AIDS will not get to be a huge epidemic in the heterosexual community at large?

A. No one has a crystal ball. Predicting the future is a hazardous enterprise at best (remember swine flu?). AIDS does have the potential for infecting the heterosexual community to a greater extent than it has at present. However, it is important to realize that each of us has the ability to control whether or not we get exposed to the HTLV-III virus by modifying our own sexual behavior.

Q. How are estimates of AIDS cases made?

A. All AIDS cases are reported to the Centers for Disease Control, an agency of health and Human Services. It is possible to use complex mathematical models to predict AIDS case numbers, but these models are in general reliable for short-term projections (months) and not long-term projections (years).

Q. How big a problem does AIDS cause to the prison population? When prisoners rejoin the population at large, will they spread the virus?

A. Prisoners frequently indulge in behavior known to spread HTLV-III virus infection: homosexual sex and intravenous drug use. The number of seropositive prisoners (i.e., prisoners with HTLV-III infection) has been estimated to be from 5% to 25% of the prison population in certain jails in the urban northeast. If a prisoner acquires HTLV-III virus infection while in jail, he potentially could transmit the virus to others via sex or the use of shared needles.

Q. How did AIDS get into the heterosexual population in Haiti? If there, why not here?

A. No one knows for sure from where AIDS came. Most investigators agree that the first human cases appeared in Africa in the mid- to late 1970's. It is known that Haiti sent civil servants to Zaire after the latter country obtained its independence from Belgium. It is possible they brought the infection back with them. On the other hand, the virus might have been brought to Haiti by vacationing Americans who were already infected. There have been a few cases reported in this country of AIDS being contracted by heterosexual exposure. There is probably no difference between AIDS in Africa, Haiti or in the United States.

Q. I am a nursery school teacher with an AIDS antibody-positive child in my class. What should I do if he gets cut or has a nosebleed? A. The first thing that should be done is to take care of the child's cut or nosebleed. After doing this, environmental surfaces stained with blood should be washed with dilute sodium hypochlorite solution (Clorox diluted with water 1:10). Clothes soiled with blood should be washed with detergent in hot water. Care should be taken to avoid contact of the child's blood with your skin if you have an open cut or sore on your hands; thorough hand washing is important. Guidelines for handling blood spills are available from the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, Georgia.

Q. The estimates on how many exposed (antibody-positive) people will get AIDS keep going up. Isn't it possible that all antibody-positive people will wind up with AIDS?

A. No one knows how many people infected with HTLV-III virus are ultimately going to develop AIDS. Estimates from 5% to 40% have been made on the basis of limited follow-up of relatively small numbers of patients. Because AIDS has only been around for a few years, it is impossible to know in 1986 what the real number will eventually be. However, at present there is no evidence that suggests all HTLV-III antibody-positive people will get AIDS.

The best way to reduce your risk of getting AIDS is to conduct your sexual life with discretion, whether you are straight or gay. The more partners you have, the more chance you have of exposing yourself to someone who has already been infected with the virus. Know your sexual partner and his or her state of health. Our knowledge of AIDS now enables us to make rational recommendations about minimizing the chance of transmitting the disease. People who are not in risk groups for AIDS should not have sex with people who are. Risk group members should modify their sexual practices to avoid exchanging of body fluids during sex. (Condom use is not encouraged, because condoms may break.) Suggestions for "safe" sex and further information about AIDS can be obtained from your local AIDS hotline, or from the CDC AIDS hotline, 1-800-447-2437.

Much has yet to be done about AIDS. There is a pressing need to find ways of restoring immune function in patients with damaged immune systems. A vaccine to protect the uninfected would be highly desirable. The public at large should not feel powerless before this disease; by understanding what AIDS is and how it is spread, everyone can take steps to minimize their chances of getting it.

Zinc Aids Metabolism

Body enzymes rely heavily on the mineral zinc as a necessary nutrient. As a part of the structure of many of the body's enzyme systems, zinc has many important functions.

For example, zinc is involved in protein metabolism and assists wound healing and maintenance of healthy skin. In the pancreas, zinc combines with insulin to aid in storage of this important hormone. And, zinc performs a number of functions in connection with the body's infection-fighting white blood cells. Interestingly, individuals with leukemia (white cell disorder) often have lower than normal blood levels of zinc.

The recommended daily allowance for zinc in healthy adults and adolescents is only 15 milligrams (somewhat higher during pregnancy). In North America most individuals obtain about 10 to 15 milligrams of zinc; therefore, only marginal zinc deficiencies are observed.

Major deficiencies are noticed, however, in some middle-eastern countries. During the 1960's, diets high in phytate or fiber were associated with zinc deficiencies resulting in growth problems among young males in these countries.

$ and Sense

By: Ann O. Rushing.
Bananas are one of our most popular fruits. They're easy on the budget and available in markets year round. Nature has portion-controlled them in individual servings complete with biodegradable packaging!

Bananas are perfect for patio parties, barbecues, card-playing casuals, easy-going meals, baseball and football stadium snacks, fondue fun, biking, hiking, picnicking and many other activities.

Bananas are quite nutritious. Among other attributes they're an excellent source of potassium.

Because of their mild flavor, easy chewing and digestibility, bananas are particularly useful in the diets of infants and other people who may have dentures or delicate digestion. Because of their smooth non-irritating texture, bananas are one of the few fruits that can be eaten raw by ulcer patients.

Bananas must be picked when green. If allowed to ripen on the plant they split open and are tasteless. Therefore, they are cut while still green, shipped under carefully controlled temperatures to keep them green, then ripened in specially designed ripening rooms in the United States. Both the temperature and the humidity of the ripening room are carefully controlled.

Many fruits are best eaten soon after purchase but bananas can have a more leisurely ripening process at home. Smaller families often find it very convenient to buy green bananas and let them ripen gradually.

Select bananas that are plump, unblemished and bright in appearance. (A dull-looking banana often will not ripen properly). Let the state of ripeness dictate the use of the banana. For many cooking purposes it is best to have the banana firm to the touch, golden but still tinged with green.

When the banana becomes fully ripe it is flecked with brown and is sweet and mellow. This is the stage many people prefer for eating raw. Over-ripe bananas, often at reduced prices, are great for banana bread or cake. Make some and freeze for later use.

At home keep bananas at room temperature until they reach the desired stage of ripeness. If you aren't ready to use the ripe bananas it is alright to put them in the refrigerator, in a plastic bag. The cold will slow down the ripening process for several days. The banana peeling will darken but the fruit inside remains good.

You may freeze real ripe bananas for use in baking. Simply mash the banana, add one tablespoon lemon juice per cup of mashed banana, seal in freezer box, label and freeze.

Serve bananas any way that suits your fancy. Invite a banana to breakfast. Bananas are instant-quick. Peel and eat. They slice without mess or fuss. Children like banana's mild flavor. Adults appreciate their "stay with you" feeling of satisfaction.

Use bananas as a topping with syrup for French toast or pancakes. Make banana eggnog in the blender with eggs, milk, a ripe banana and a dash of sugar and vanilla.

Banana cinnamon toast is a "quicky" with particular appeal for children. Cover a piece of buttered toast with sliced banana; sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar and place under a preheated broiler for two minutes.

Bananas are great in fruit salads, but have you thought of adding them to green salads or seafood salads? Bananas are good broiled, glazed or sauteed. They can be added to main dishes. There are many banana desserts from classic cream pie or a banana cake to bananas flambe'.

Little Snapper Child Contest

A S.N.A.P. representative will be in Tishomingo county on August 5, 1986 to take pictures of children for the Little Snapper Child Photo Contest. Photos will be taken in Iuka from 10 a.m. until 12 noon at the Piggly Wiggly store. Then, photos will be taken in Belmont from 1:00 p.m. until 3:00 p.m. at Belmont's Piggly Wiggly store. All parents are invited and encouraged to bring their pre-schoolers by to fill out an entry form and receive their prizes.

"This contest is designed to increase public and individual awareness of the need for child safety seats and seat belt usage for children. The contest also gives S.N.A.P. officials an opportunity to visit with folks about some of the services they offer, such as the Child Safety Seat Loaner Program. Too many of our people in Northeast Mississippi do not realize that automobile accidents are the leading cause of accidental death to children, that as many as 850 little ones are killed every year, while over 40,000 children are severely injured. And these are only the preschool children. The experts tell us that child fatalities can be reduced over 90%, if only parents will use approved child safety seats and/or seat belts. We, at S.N.A.P., are here to help parents protect their children," explained Mrs. Barbara Bennett, director of the area S.N.A.P. program.

Rainbow 4-H Report

BY: DONNA CARPENTER

On July 24th at 3:00 p.m. the Rainbow 4-H Club met at their headquarters. The new president, Sonja Magill called the meeting to order. The pledge to the U.S. Flag was led by Donna Carpenter and the 4-H Flag by Cindy Timbes. Prayer was led by Tammy Bray. The minutes were read and approved.

Members for the 1986-87 committees were chosen.

Mrs. Richardson and some members have been approached and asked about building the health walk in Rainbow Park. It is very much needed. The Rainbows have been working on fund raising projects to get the money to buy the materials. It is taking too long so they have decided to let businesses, individuals, churches or whoever would like to donate money to do so.

Your name will be on a plaque posted around the 1 mile trail as a thank you note. You may contribute by giving to Mr. and Mrs. Richardson, Front and Second Street in Burnsville, The First American Bank to the 4-H account in Burnsville, or to any Rainbow Club member. Just be sure to leave your name. They would like to finish the walk as soon as possible so that people can enjoy a fall walk safely.

Lori Johnson is in Washington D.C. this week. Rainbow I and Rainbow II enjoyed the swimming party and hamburgers at Coleman Park. They wish to say thanks to Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Dill, also thanks to Mrs. Donnel Timbes for driving the van. Mr. and Mrs. Richardson went too.

Refreshments were served at the meeting. The next meeting will be August 7, 1986.

Segars Clinic Report

Have you ever made that statement? You are not alone. Many people in this region of the country have the same problem, ACUTE SINUSITIS.

You may have thought you had a cold that just would not go away. After more than a week of sniffing and sneezing, your runny nose and only gotten worse, and you were waking up with a headache every morning. You may have decided this was more than the common cold.

Sinusitis are air pockets in the bones of the skull and face, which connect with the side of the nose through little openings. There are three pairs of these that sit behind the eyes, cheekbones and nose.

When you have a cold, the cold virus slows the flow of mucus down the nasal passage. At the same time, the mucous membranes are producing more and more mucus that builds up in the nose and sinuses. This creates an ideal breeding ground for bacteria. When the sinus becomes infected, the mucous membrane swells and blocks the passage from the sinus to the nose. Then the pressure builds. Where you hurt depends on which sinus is affected.

A cold however is not always to blame for this problem. People who have allergies may develop sinusitis when pollen, dust and other allergens enter and irritate the mucous membranes. The body reacts by producing histamine which causes nasal congestion and excess mucus. Chlorine in swimming pools can also irritate the mucous membranes.

Seeing a doctor for acute sinus problems is important since sinus problems can become chronic if left untreated. When the sinuses stay stuffed up for long periods, small growths called polyps may develop on the membranes inside the nose.

Now that you know what you've got and why, what do you do about it? There are any number of over the counter drugs that may relieve the problem, such as aspirin, Tylenol, decongestants, etc. There are also some excellent prescription drugs your doctor may prescribe. You may try hot tea, soup, steam humidifier or raising the head of your bed to promote draining.

Acute sinusitis is a very real, annoying problem that's not easily relieved. What works well for one person, may not work at all for the next.

1410 WEST QUITMAN
IUKA, MISSISSIPPI 38852

The Mississippi Commission on Hospital Care has established the sum of $25,073.00 as the level of Uncompensated Services to be made available by the Tishomingo County Hospital in Iuka, Mississippi, in the period beginning October 1, 1986 and ending September 30, 1987. This determination has been made pursuant to the requirements of the regulations of the Public Health Service, U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, (42 CFR Section 53.111) and the applicable provisions of the Mississippi Medical Facilities Construction Plan.

"Uncompensated Services" means services available in the facility which are made available to persons unable to pay therefor without charge. Pine Beetle Population Explosion

Mississippi forestry officials have issued a full blown alert to timberland owners in at least 49 counties found to have elevated Southern Pine Beetle activity.

Eleven of those counties already have epidemic levels of this tiny, but highly destructive insect enemy of Southern Pine. They are: Union, Choctaw, Leake, Madison, Rankin, Pike, Carroll, Grenada, Montgomery and Webster.

Southern Pine Beetles, about the size of a grain of rice, bore into the inner bark area of pines and lay their eggs. While in the larval (worm) stage they chew S-shaped tunnels, killing the tree's cambium (growth cell layer) resulting in the rapid mortality of the tree. In all, nearly 2,400 spots of activity have been pin-pointed.

The Mississippi Forestry Commission has flown periodic aerial detection flights all through the year to locate the beetle spots. After ground-level verification landowners are advised of the infestation as soon as possible.

"Trouble is," says Bill Lambert, Commission Entomologist, "we are finding so many spots in some areas we aren't able to get all ground checking done as quickly as needed."

"It's very important that spots of beetle activity be caught early and as small as possible and for salvage operations to begin immediately thereafter," he noted.

"Leaving these beetles to multiply and spread can lead to greatly increased losses in rapid fashion. The spots should be tended to, just as we would want to suppress a roaring wildfire while it is small," Lambert said.

The picture in the months ahead is not looking good at all, according to Entomologist Lambert. The beetle population explosion has put reduced Commission manpower resources seriously behind schedule in getting around to check all reported spots of beetle activity. He said landowner cooperation is imperative in dealing effectively with current beetle threat.

State Forester Robert S. "Sid" Moss recently instructed county foresters to make maps and beetle spot location information available in their offices for use by landowners who are concerned about whether the beetles are on their property. Assistance in getting salvage operations started will also be available through local county forester's offices.

Estimated losses from the beetles could easily top a million dollars this year in Mississippi at the current rate of beetle destruction, but foresters are hopeful that quick salvage, felling of trees in buffer zones to isolate and slow the beetles' spread, and natural forces will somehow end this insect threat to the State's valuable pine forests.

In 1895 there were two cars registered in the state of Ohio. They collided.
