ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY YEARS

THURSDAY, JANUARY 16, 2014 NO. 23

Retired County Educator, Charles Black, Dies at Home

Long time Tishomingo educator and principal Charles Black died at his home Wednesday morning, after an extended illness.

A 1962 graduate of Tishomingo High School, "Coach Black," as he was widely known, attended Mississippi State University and earned his Masters and Specialist degrees in Education. At the request of then-principal R.C. Strickland, he returned home to teach at his alma mater, specifically to help the school successfully integrate in the 1966-67 school year. He taught high school and then junior high science to countless Tishomingo students for 39 years and coached basketball and football teams early in his career. He drove the bus for the Carter's Branch community, and had a special relationship with the people of that area. He was a behind-the-scenes leader and administrator, supporting the work of many of Tishomingo's principals. He was principal of Tishomingo Middle School when he retired a few years ago.

Charles served the county for many years as a member of the Tishomingo County Electric Power Association Board of Directors, including through the 1994 ice storm.

Charles Black

There was seemingly no person or family in Tishomingo with whom Charles Black was not familiar, and he had nearly perfect recall if you asked him about someone.

Charles was born December 14th, 1944, the only son of the late Woodrow and Clara Kennedy Black of Tishomingo.

He is survived by his wife, Marcia McRae Black, and their son, Alan, who was his pride and joy.

Services are tentatively scheduled for Friday at 10 a.m. at Tishomingo Baptist Church. Visitation is tentatively scheduled for Thursday evening, from 6-8 also at the church.

Governor Phil Bryant, center, Rima, and Mississippi Silicon executives shovel some dirt prepared for the "ground-breaking" on Monday for Mississippi Silicon.

Mississippi Silicon Bringing 200 Jobs to Tishomingo County

by Pamela McRae

Monday morning, hundreds gathered for a "groundbreaking ceremony" to welcome Mississippi Silicon as Tishomingo County's newest industry.

The silicon metal production facility is scheduled to locate in the Northeast Mississippi Waterway Industrial Park, which is located in Burnsville, just south of Highway 72 on the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway. When completed, the silicon metal manufacturing plant will provide 200 jobs paying around $50,000 a year, officials have stated.

The "ground-breaking" was held in a building that previously was used by New River Homes, since weather was not conducive to meeting at the actual proposed location of the plant a mile or so away. Governor Phil Bryant, and executives from Mississippi Silicon and its parent company Rima Holdings, USA, were on hand to speak to the gathered crowd.

"I congratulate the team from Mississippi Silicon as they prepare to move forward with the construction of their silicon metal manufacturing plant," said Bryant in his prepared statement. "Upon completion of this facility, Mississippi Silicon will join a long list of companies that demonstrate daily to the country and to the world that Mississippi is an ideal location for advanced manufacturing."

"We are very excited to be in Tishomingo County," said Mississippi Silicon President and CEO David Tuten. "The hospitality we have received so far has been overwhelming, and we are looking forward to building and operating a successful project."

Mississippi Silicon is investing $200 million in the construction of the plant, and Mississippi Development Authority providing assistance through the Mississippi Industry Incentive Financing Fund for construction and workforce training needs, as well as New Market Tax Credits. Tishomingo County and Tennessee Valley Authority provided assistance for the project, as well.

The new facility will produce silicon metal for a broad range of industries in the United States including the aluminum, automotive and chemical industries. The Mississippi Silicon's high-tech facility is expected to be one of the most efficient and cost-competitive silicon metal production facilities in the world. It will be the first silicon plant built in the western hemisphere in forty years, said Ricardo Vicintin, president and CEO of Rima Holdings.

Mississippi Silicon is a strategic partnership between Rima Holdings USA, Inc., and domestic investor group Clean Tech I, LLC. Rima Holdings is owned by Vicintin family, who also own Rima Industrial S/A in Brazil, which currently employs more than four thousand associates in diecasting, magnesium, silicon metal, and ferrolalloys.

John Correnti, of Mississippi Silicon, addresses attendees at the ground-breaking.

Mississippi Silicon a Long Time Coming to Waterway Industrial Park

by Pamela McRae

Executives from Mississippi Silicon had endless praise Monday for the work of local development officials for helping them successfully locate in Tishomingo County.

After many years of developing infrastructure like that at the Waterway Industrial Park, and advertising what Tishomingo County has to offer, the efforts are beginning to see results, and contributing to Mississippi's role in the "fastest-growing economic development" region in the country, from South Carolina to Texas.

For the first time last year, the gross domestic product (GDP) of Mississippi was more than $100 billion, which makes it easy for companies like Mississippi Silicon to see that Mississippi is on the move, stated Governor Phil Bryant in his remarks at Monday's ground-breaking ceremony.

In remarks Monday, John Correnti, of Rima Holdings, said that when Lowndes County lost patience two years ago and made unrealistic demands of the company, they "picked up their bat and ball and looked elsewhere."

Correnti said they looked in Quebec, but Mississippi officials continued to woo them to a site in-state, and eventually to Tishomingo County, a place with which they are well familiar, thanks to endless marketing materials sent weekly to them by Gary Matthews, executive director of Tishomingo County Development Authority.

"I dream of Tishomingo County in my sleep," joked Correnti, of all the Tishomingo County information the intrepid Matthews provides. "He's your best asset for industrial growth in this county."

Correnti said to be prepared, because when Rima officials go home to Brazil, and other Brazilian associates come to the county, they will be relying on our hospitality, and talking about their experiences in Tishomingo County back home.

Apparently, Mr. Vicintin has been enjoying some good ole' Southern hospitality that had him wondering aloud to the crowd, "Why Mississippi Mud pie is not your national pie?"

Correnti also praised the late congressman Jamie Whitten, and late Senator John Stennis for "that big ditch out there" - referring to the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway, which has opened up north Mississippi for the influx of development it has seen in the last 15 years, including a steel manufacturing cluster at Yellow Creek Inland Port that employs more than 400 people at half a dozen steel processing facilities. Structures and products like those built at the Port are dependent on dependable, efficient ways of transporting items to the client, and water transportation allows for that.

Correnti said that if the Tenn-Tom was in Europe, it would be lined along all of its banks from Tennessee to Mobile, Alabama.

The Port continues to develop the Northeast Missisissippi Waterway Industrial Park, which it has invested more than $10 million in infrastructure improvements in recent years, to make it marketable to companies like Mississippi Silicon. The Yellow Creek State Inland Port Authority engineered and built a $2.6 million barge notch (place to dock large barges) to do exactly what Mississippi Silicon is needing it to do, explained Eugene Bishop, executive director at the Port.

To recruit a prospect like Mississippi Silicon is a long process that has been in work for many years, says Bishop. For the actual 100-acre property for Mississippi Silicon, the Port sold the land to Tishomingo County, to allow for grants and funding for which the Port, as a state-owned entity, was not eligible.

"The steel industry at the Port was a long time coming, but then we got an anchor tenant, and it has exploded from there," said Bishop of the Port's phenomenal growth in the past decade. "Mississippi Silicon opens up a whole new horizon for this industrial park and the county, as related industries come on board."

In related news, the Tishomingo County Board of Supervisors voted 4-1, immediately after the ground-breaking, for Cook-Coggins Engineering, of Tupelo, to do engineering work for the $3.5 million in infrastructure the county is doing to support the location of Mississippi Silicon in Burnsville.

Home Destroyed by Fire

An early morning fire Wednesday destroyed the home of Bart Embry on County Road 231 (Harmony Road) near Iuka. Authorities said they received the 911 call at 7:49 and found the home completely engulfed in flames when they arrived. The home is the old Balloon Gallery that was located in Iuka and moved to the site on 231 to convert the structure into a home. Mr. Embry was at home at the time of the fire and ran to his parents home nearby to call for help. Authorities also said it appeared the fire might have started in the kitchen area which was heavily damaged.

Old Courthouse Redesigns, Offers New Exhibits, Gift Items

The Old Tishomingo County Courthouse in Iuka is welcoming the new year with new and improved designs. The Woodall Mountain Market Gift Shop has received a new face lift. Specializing in home-crafted specialties, the shop now carries linens, small pieces of fabrics, selected glassware, local t-shirts, Civil War memorabilia, and other local souvenirs, as well as gifts for the home or a favorite friend. Due to two huge donations of research books, booklets, and files, the John Marshall Stone Research Library has added three new bookcases and is also expanding its work area. In addition, five additional filing cabinets are on our wish list and we are looking for sponsors to help with these purchases.

Original courthouse furniture can now be viewed more prominently in the courthouse foyer and staff members are situated at each end of the first floor. The second floor courtroom and exhibit area will be closed during the month of January as heating/air units are accessed and two rooms receive repairs to

Jackson Nurse Runs to Save Lives

Angela Hammack runs with ghosts

By Billy Watkins
Courtesy of the Clarion Ledger

"I know that might sound far out to some people," said Hammack, 46, a nurse for the past nine years at Jackson Oncology Associates, "but a lot of my patients that I've grown to know and love who eventually died from cancer ... it's like they're right alongside me every step I take."

Hammack felt them carrying her Sunday as she completed the inaugural Dokey Challenge at Walt Disney World in Orlando — a four-day event that included a 5K run (3.1 miles) Thursday, a 10K (6.2) Friday, a half marathon (13.1) Saturday and a full marathon (26.2) as a grand finale. That's 48.6 miles total, or roughly from Jackson to Forest. Approximately 7,000 people participated.

She ran to raise money for the Mississippi/Louisiana Chapter of the Leukemia & Lymphoma Society. Prior to the Orlando challenge, Hammack had raised more than $22,000 for the organization dedicated to funding blood cancer research, education and patient services.

And as she crossed the finish line of her 11th marathon, Hammack said, "I got really emotional. That's the first time I've ever just fell apart after a run. I started crying, just thinking of why I did this, what all I did to get here, those I did it for. ... I'm drained physically and emotionally. But it's worth every bit of it."

"I gain so much determination from seeing patients come into the clinic, continuing to fight when there seems to be little hope left. I push myself to try and help make a difference so maybe others won't have to go through that."

She covered the distance Sunday in 5 hours, 23 minutes, slightly longer than average for a female runner.

"But I did a lot of 'dokeying' around," joked Hammack, who ran her best time — 4 hours, 44 minutes — in October at the Marine Corps Marathon in Washington. "My times aren't important. I don't compete against other people. I just want to finish."

Hammack, who is the daughter of Sandra and Milton Guice of Iuka, has been running for local cancer charities since 2007. She focuses much of her fundraising on blood cancers. "And the reason is, they don't pick a certain age, race or gender. Blood cancers affect people across the board," she said.

Those who know Hammack said the 48.6 miles at Disney were in the bag once she decided to enter.

"Angela is one of the most unique people you'll ever meet," said Susan James, nurse manager at Jackson Oncology. "She does things at one speed — 100 miles per hour. I have no idea where she gets her energy. She talks faster than I can listen."

"But the thing is, that people sometimes take for granted is, she really has a good heart. I don't know of anyone who has more drive and ambition. She's served as president of the Oncology Nurses Society. She became certified to teach other nurses how to give chemotherapy. There is a lot more to her than just the marathons."

Said Teresa Davis, clinical trials coordinator at Jackson Oncology: "Angela not only raises money and awareness about cancer, but she helps improve patients' perspective about cancer and the research that's being done. She likes to talk, likes to teach and likes to educate. That's what you look for in an oncology nurse."

Hammack admits to marching — swiftly — to a different beat than most.

She runs marathons, yet suffers from asthma.

Her iPod includes Christian, classical, grunge, Broadway, heavy metal and hip-hop.

She often trains at 4 a.m. but declares, "I'm not a morning person."

She is here, then there, her 5-foot, 118-pound body darting like a bee with a buzz.

"But let me get home, and it's a different story," she said. "We live on 53 acres in Terry, and it is so peaceful and quiet. I will sit there and not do a blooming thing. My husband, Jimmy, has horses, and I enjoy watching them. It's a place where I can relax and slow everything down a bit."

She laughed. "One Saturday not long ago, I was helping put up a fence — driving posts and everything — on our property. I was wearing an old ripped sweatshirt, jeans, boots, and a ball cap. That night, I was dressed to the nines and attending a Christmas party. I was thinking, 'If these people could've seen me just a few hours ago, they wouldn't believe I was the same person.'"

Hammack, who was born in Starkville, graduated from Iuka High School in 1985 and Mississippi State University in 1989 with a degree in communications. Bored with desk jobs, she attended paramedic school at the University of Mississippi Medical Center in Jackson and graduated in 1995.

"The day I graduated, I found out I'd been accepted into nursing school at Mississippi College (in Clinton)," she said.

She earned her nursing degree in 1997 and began working at the Elvis Presley Memorial Trauma Center in Memphis.

"When I started dating Jimmy, I would come down for visits but felt like I needed to be doing something all the time," she said. "A friend said they might hire me part time at Jackson Oncology. I talked to them, and they did. It was a different experience than what I had been used to in trauma. This was a lot of nurturing and talking with patients. ... I really enjoyed that."

Hammack joined Jackson Oncology full time in 2004, but the trauma bug didn't leave. So a couple of weekends a month, she travels by train to Memphis and back and pulls two shifts at her old job.

"The adrenaline of seeing somebody dying, but then watching them come back to life through the Lord's will and with a little bit of your help is an amazing thing," she says.

Running to fight cancer gives her a different type rush. "I saw a sticker Thursday that fits me," she said. "It read 'endorphin junkie.' And I can totally relate to that. Doing something like this for such a worthy cause is an all-natural high. I know some people might think it's crazy, but that's what keeps life fun and interesting."

The money portion of her mission begins with a formula calculated by the Leukemia & Lymphoma Society. Travel expenses to an event are figured, then tripled. That's how much Hammack must raise. Seventy-five percent of the money — most of which is donated by corporate sponsors — goes to the charity.

Hammack has run

Angela Hammack at Disney World with personal "race coordinator and supporter" and friend, Payton Berklite of Belmont. Angela and Payton were room mates at Mississippi State and remained best friends since that time. Payton is originally from Greenwood, moved to Tishomingo County 2 years ago and was hired in August as new Emergency Management Coordinator.

marathons and half marathons all over the continental U.S. and also in places such as Hawaii and Dublin, Ireland.

"The main thing is the money stays in our state. Some of it goes to research, which has already come up with drugs such as Gleevec, which reverses some forms of leukemia," Hammack says. "It makes all this mean so much more when you can actually see the positive effects of the money raised."

Said Mary Moffett, director of patient access, education and advocacy with the Mississippi/Louisiana Chapter of the Leukemia & Lymphoma Society: "Nothing is more inspiring to me personally than to see someone make a difference in the lives of others. Every dollar that volunteers Angela Hammack raise cure blood cancer is a changed forever. Because of dedicated individuals who step up to make a mission happen, we truly see the end of cancer from here."

Hammack fought tears when considering day that cancer — a disease that kills nearly 8 million people worldwide each year — no longer exists.

"I'm just one person doing very small things," Hammack said. "But to make some kind of difference is deep, deep side me. I'll keep on until I can't do it anymore."

Ninety Years Young!

Friday, January 17th, 90 years young. He has lived in the Rutledge community farming land all but two years of his life. Those years were spent on foreign service in his country. In 1945 he came home from working to find a letter from Uncle Sam. He had been drafted as a young man of that age. Upon completing training at Camp Shelby, he returned home to say hello to family and friends. With a silver dollar in his pocket given to him by Mr. Claude Curtis, he traveled by train to Macon, GA. From there he boarded a ship for foreign soil. Along with his fellow soldiers, who were in sea sick as well as seasick, he traveled by ship for 22 long days. He arrived with the 168 Infantry Company A 34th Division, which fought in Italy and Naples, Italy. Dad never talked much about his time in the military. He said the grass and all shrub provided little protection from enemy jets. That the weather was cold and snowy, with snow on mountain tops all the time. One time he told of being a sore throat and being to get off the front of the ship, he went to the infirmary. Doctors removed his tonsils, let him spend the night and sent him back to the frontline. He said the only good thing that came out of it was that he got an egg for breakfast. The first he had seen in a long time. He said it hurt to eat it but it was so good.

He said the soldiers had to constantly dig foxholes for protection. He said they would just get one dug and be told to move out. He said it was dig in, move out, dig in, move out all the time.

While serving his country he saw a lot of death and often thought he would be the next one. However, God had plans for the young farm boy from Iuka, Mississippi and kept him safe. He returned home, married Lucille Edmondson and had two daughters. Once again he was farming the land he so dearly loved.

Happy Birthday, Daddy

We love you,
Drusilla and family

NEMCC
To Offer
Welding Classes

Northeast Mississippi Community College Division of Workforce Training and Economic Development will offer customized welding training at the mobile welding lab in Iuka on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 4 until 8:30 p.m. beginning Tuesday, January 14.

Enrollment is open as space is available and training can be customized for individual need. Class duration may be short as one class or long as needed.

Processes that scheduled to be covered are Shielded Metal Arc Welding (Stick Welding) and Flux Cored Arc Welding.

Shielded Metal Arc Welding (Stick Welding) is often used in the construction trades, but is also useful around the home farm due to the relatively simple equipment and versatility. The process also offers a great deal of versatility due to the ability to rapidly change types of metal that can be welded without complicated equipment changes. This process also requires a greater amount of skill than many of the other commonly used welding processes. To learn about different electrodes have been sitting around the barn or shop or learn how to put a 6 foot root pass in a 6G pipe enroll in this class.

Flux Cored Arc Welding is often used in steel fabrication industries for components requiring a high quality weld deposit, which is also highly productive. Training in other processes such as GTAW and GMAW are also available and there are additional training sessions available during day.

For information about the application process please contact Nadia Cole at Northeast at 662-7372 or by email nlcole@nemcc.edu.

For questions related to the welding training available in the evening contact Gerald Austin, Instructor by phone at 662-660-0162 or email at Gerald@weldingdate.com.
