Paden Bridges Remain Closed After Four Years

Closures are inconvenient for locals, and chasing down federal requirements is a daily chore for supervisor Jeff Holt.

by Pamela McRae

Despite Supervisor Jeff Holt's efforts, unresponsiveness by the Corps of Engineers and Covid complications have stretched out two bridge replacements in Paden to nearly four years.

The two bridges are on County Road 961, the road from Highway 30 to Crow's Neck on Bay Springs Lake, and Holt has taken the blame from locals for the long delays but assures that he is working on the issue weekly or daily to get the project to the point they can take bids to replace the bridges.

Close to $1 million in funding was approved to replace the bridges, but now with inflation on the costs of labor, supplies, and materials... some state money will have to supplement the federal grants, said Holt.

Holt explained that state inspectors approved the bridges, specifying reduced load limits, but then a subsequent federal review closed bridges all over the country, including these two that were ordered closed in that federal inspection process. One remains open as just a one-lane bridge, since it is the only access for a

Tishomingo Sunflower: Grocery Business is the Family Business

by Eve Dafoe & Pamela McRae

For 44 years, the Hollingsworth family has been an integral part of Tishomingo life, providing the ultimate service of making groceries available to this small town in the center of Tishomingo County. The small grocery store offers full grocery services – but just as important, it's a hub for the community and contributes to local organizations and causes, because they are just an extension of the Sunflower family, explains owner Lance Hollingsworth.

Since before Jerry Hollingsworth and a partner bought the Sunflower in 1978, the grocery business equaled "family business," with everyone in the family playing a part, and that continues to this day as the third generation of the Hollingsworth family now helps their dad run the show.

Tishomingo County is uniquely both traditional and modern as exemplified by the multi-generational Hollingsworth family in the town of Tishomingo. When I first met the family, there were two generations of Hollingsworth working at the local Sunflower Grocery Store. Over the next 15 years, the third generation became employed. Now there is a fourth generation waiting in the wings.

Family History

In the mid-1900s, Chester Hollingsworth was a bricklayer and dairy farmer living in Newton, Mississippi; however, he was directly responsible for starting several generations of Hollingsworth grocers. Of Chester's eight children, two sons, Robert and Jerry, worked in the Newton Sunflower Grocery right out of high school.

Robert Hollingsworth worked at the Newton store until he went into the Mississippi National Guard. It was then that he asked his younger brother, Jerry, to take his place in the store. Jerry worked as cashier, bagger, and stocker until he became store manager at the age of 24. Shortly afterward, R. J. Cochran, the owner of both the Newton and Ackerman Sunflowers, asked Jerry to move to Ackerman as manager of that store.

When Jerry's butcher resigned, Jerry asked his brother Robert (who had left the National Guard) to take over as the Ackerman store's butcher. While he was at the Ackerman Sunflower, Robert's children Susan and Randy worked part-time.

Robert tells the story about Jerry's playing jokes on staff and customers. One day "Bobcat" Walden was in the store visiting with Jerry. Having shaken up his soda bottle, Jerry let it spew all over Bobcat, who in turn paid Jerry back by handing him a very well-used hankie.

Jerry's three children, Lee, Lance, and Lisa were born in Ackerman.

When he was very young, Lee would hang out at his father's store. If he could not be found, he was likely sleeping on one of lower grocery shelves. Once at the Ackerman store, young Lee was in the stock room when he yelled out, "It's snowing, it's snowing!"

Jerry ran to the back of the store to see what was happening, and Lee threw a bag of flour on his father. Needless to say, Lee had to pay the price for his "snow," and it was not paying for the flour!

Tishomingo Store

In 1978, the Sunflower Grocery in Tishomingo came up for sale. Recognizing the opportunity, Jerry and a partner, Robert Chandler, bought the store, and Jerry moved his family to Tishomingo. Jerry's three children, Lee, Lance, and Lisa were still young when they moved, but as they grew up, each of them went to work in their father's store.

Chandler had owned and managed the Chandler Grocery in Weir, Mississippi, until it was purchased by Cochran and became a Sunflower. While he was still at the Weir store, Chandler and Robert Hollingsworth attended a convention on the Mississippi gulf coast. They were checking in, and Chandler was asked where he was from. When he told the attendant he was from Weir (pronounced "wear"), she asked "No, where are you from?" That conversation is still a family joke all these years later.

Lee Hollingsworth was ten when the family moved to Tishomingo. He began working in the local Sunflower when he was 14. Lee learned the grocery business by bagging groceries and stocking shelves.

When I moved to Tishomingo and met the Hollingsworths in 2007, Lee was the store's part-time produce manager. In 1988, he had begun working as a second shift park ranger at Tishomingo State Park, allowing him to continue working at Sunflower in the mornings. Lee was a full-time park ranger from 1990 to 2008 when he went to work for the Mississippi Department of Transportation. Beginning in 2015, Lee was able to spend time at the Tishomingo Sunflower helping his father.

When the Hollingsworths moved to Tishomingo, Jerry's second son, Lance, was six. Tishomingo is Lance's earliest memory of home.

At fourteen, like his older brother Lee had done, Lance began working at his father's Sunflower. In addition to bagging groceries, Lance carried the groceries to the customer's vehicles, a tradition that continues to this day. In 1990, Lance became the store's butcher. His uncle Robert had been the family's other butcher, but he always called himself a "meat cutter."

When Jerry's partner, Robert Chandler, passed away in 2015, Lance bought Chandler's share, and he and his father became full partners. Lance continued as Sunflower's butcher until Jerry's death in 2021. At that time he became both owner and manager, and he hired a replacement butcher.

Lisa Morgan, Jerry's youngest child, followed the family tradition and worked part-time as a cashier while still in high school. Although she now lives in Brandon, but her children, Madison and Mason, were also Tishomingo Sunflower employees during the summers they spent with their grandfather Jerry.

One summer when Lisa's children were four and six, they had spent a week in Tishomingo. Lisa was not in the habit of giving sweets to her children. When she came to pick them up, she found them wired. Asking her father if he had been giving them sweets, Jerry replied that he had given them fruit rollups. Lisa said not to feed them candy, and Jerry said, "But fruit rollups are fruit!"

Third Generation

The third generation of Hollingsworths started with Lee's son Chase, who worked full time as a cashier but helped in other areas throughout the store. Chase could often be seen stocking shelves.

When your family owns the store, you do everything that needs doing.

In 2020, Chase and his wife Jackie welcomed Paislee, their daughter and fourth-generation Sunflower Hollingsworth. It is almost certain that Paislee will ultimately take her place in the lineup in one capacity or another. Lance's two children, Rory and Chloe, both worked part-time at Sunflower when they were attending high school. Each has gone on to college but they continue cashiering as their schedules allow.

One thing is clear when you meet the Hollingsworths: you learn to talk to everyone when you are the grocer! Gregarious only mildly describes Lance, who can stock meat, fetch high items and carry on a conversation at the same time. His children have learned the same, with even quiet Rory and Chloe able to comment on groceries and cooking plans with customers like they have done it all their lives.

Big Changes

When Jerry died unexpectedly in 2021, Lance and his wife Tina figured out quickly they had a lot to learn.

"Just weeks before he passed, Jerry was back in the back and told Lance, 'You know, if something happened to you, I'd hardly know what to do back here anymore,' said Lance recently. He said he joked back that he could easily fill Jerry's shoes, since he just sat up there in the office all the time.

"Boy, was I wrong!" said Lance. From deciphering the "all still on paper ledger handwritten bookkeeping system," to finding out what deals were in place with what people, it's been a steep learning curve, he laughs. But Lance has plans to computerize everything, and make improvements to the store, like new register lanes and card payment terminals. All this while handling the daily store and maintenance issues of a 50+-year-old building.

Each subsequent generation of Hollingsworth typifies the modern family having just two or three children. However, the three generations working closely together represents the traditional family. Looking at the values of the entire family dynamic, it becomes obvious that the Hollingsworths have succeeded in merging the best of both.

This bridge was reduced to one lane, allowing local access to a single homeowner.

single homeowner.

"Since it's federal money, the process is long and thorough," explained Holt. "Even though the funding was awarded before the pandemic, Covid just further slowed the process in so many agencies and offices."

Funding to replace the bridges will be federal and some state money, so there are numerous hurdles to cross including completing environmental and cultural surveys to ensure no rare species are threatened, or Native American sites are affected, and those have all been done. All the local neighboring landowners have signed easements to allow for the work to begin.

The lone holdup is a construction easement from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, and Holt has had no success in getting a response from the Corps. He has even reached out to Congressman Trent Kelly's office to no avail, yet.

"I just want people to know I am working on the issue every day, every week," Holt said.

Everyone meet Miss CoCo Chanel Bray. This beautiful girl is this week's Pet of the Week. CoCo is the first fur child of Bradley and Kristin Bray. Coco was rescued as a kitten and is believed to be 3 years old. Her short coat is a beautiful ebony black. CoCo Chanel enjoys long naps during the day & acting like the Tasmanian Devil at night. CoCo is a bundle of pure joy to the Bray family and they wouldn't trade her for the entire world.

Most cats like CoCo love to play at night. In fact, cats are crepuscular meaning active at dawn and dusk, which is when their natural prey like rodents are active. Cats are not really nocturnal which is a common misperception. So their internal rhythm just tells them that it is time to get active and start hunting. Keeping your little hunter healthy is very important. Annual exams and vaccinations will help ensure that your kitty is in the best of health. If your pet needs a veterinarian call Dr. Jim Perkins, he knows how much your pet means to you.

The View from Metairie

As a fourth-generation funeral director, it should come as no surprise to anyone that I have spent quite a bit of my life in cemeteries. I've worked in them, played in them, and found refuge in them. Even to this day when I find myself needing to reflect deeper on a subject, or maybe just kill 15 minutes for the pizza I've ordered to cook, I'll find myself back there, slowly moving down the narrow paths of asphalt that wind through the fields of monuments and memories. Some of the monuments are modern, made of exotic stones of black, pink, and mahogany, and they have been erected to honor the lives of those who lived in more modern times. They are beautiful, artistic, and highly personalized. Other monuments, in the older parts of most cemeteries, are large, ornate, granite monoliths that are designed to be permanent memorials to people who lived many generations ago. For just a few minutes, as I wind through the past and read the names and dates and try to imagine who these people were, and what their life must have been like, I'm suddenly liberated from the stresses of the day. Momentarily, everything is quieter, clearer, less cluttered. I'm able to know what to do next. I either find peace of mind or a piece of pizza at the end, which I consider a win/win situation.

I've heard things...
Bo Murphy

Given my interest in old cemeteries, and my wife's interest in author Anne Rice, it seemed only natural that we should visit the old Metairie Cemetery where the Rice family mausoleum is located. We were already in New Orleans attending a previously discussed funeral directors convention, and with our newly-collected pens, pads, highlighters, and brochures we will never read, set off to find the resting place of the recently-entombed Queen of the Vampires. I can't begin to describe the beauty and timeless nature of a place like Metairie Cemetery. Upon entry, it is very obvious that you are in a sacred space. Time stands still, everything feels quiet, almost like the air itself is showing reverence to the lives honored on that hallowed ground. You can feel the generations becoming one, as if you were all there together. Many say that in a place like Metairie Cemetery, you are.

It is of interest to note that the only people buried in the ground in Metairie Cemetery are in the Jewish section, keeping with cultural traditions. Much of New Orleans is below sea level, so things buried in the ground there don't tend to stay that way. This has resulted in the adoption of entombment in above-ground crypts and mausoleums, which, in a place like Metairie, are unbelievably impressive works of art. The dedication to honoring the lives of their ancestors is apparent when looking at the monuments erected. It was their goal to make sure that those who went before them were still a part of their day-to-day lives. They had no interest in denying any part of the living or dying process, including efforts to keep the spirit of their loved one alive through memorialization and celebration.

Fast-forward to a modern cemetery in just about any town in America, and you will find something missing. Sure, there are monuments, crypts, beautiful scenery, and peaceful landscapes. The quiet reverence of a visit will still do you good, but something is not the same.

Old Metairie Cemetery, New Orleans.

What you will find missing are people, not only people visiting the monuments to lives lived, but people in general. The values of our modern society have changed. What this means ultimately is that these places will not be the same in the future. With an ongoing trend towards avoiding all things that are unpleasant, the cemeteries will become a relic of the past. As fewer and fewer people make use of cemeteries and generations go by, there will be no one left to care for them. All the cremated remains will be cast to the wind or sea, or inurned on a shelf, and there will be no mark left on the Earth that millions of lives were ever lived.

As we shift into a new era based more on the wants of the individual than what's best for the whole, let's not forget who we really are. We are people who spend the dash between those dates on a monument loving, laughing, crying, growing, and dying together, people who deserve to be remembered and celebrated for longer than a one-day newspaper obituary. If current trends continue, all that will be left of lives lived in the future will be the dash, with no date, name, or even a trace that a life was lived to be found anywhere on the Earth. It is through thinking only of ourselves and not finding value in each other that we truly die.

Our family serving your family, across the generations.

At Cutshall Funeral Home, we understand that our most valuable assets are the people who have dedicated their careers to serving our community as part of our family. It is the dedicated and compassionate work of these professionals that makes us what we are, and we would like to take a moment to share with you a little more about these unsung hometown heroes.

Becky Johnson

It is a special person who dedicates their lives to helping others through their most difficult times. Not everyone can sit with those who are broken and hold their hand as they put the pieces back together. With true empathy and an uplifting smile, Becky Johnson is a vital part of our efforts to hold up those in need when everything else seems to be falling apart. When Becky came to be part of our team, we knew we had the right person. We are so glad that she has chosen to partner with us in serving this community.

Becky Johnson is 48 years young. She has lived in Tishomingo County most of her life, and has been married to her best friend, Johnny Johnson, for 31 years. Together they have three children and five grandchildren. She attends church at The Bridge at Burnsville and is a volunteer with the jail ministry and Celebrate Recovery at The Bridge. Her hobbies revolve around her family and working with The Bridge House Ministry. Becky enjoys helping people in our community who desire to create positive changes within themselves, their lives, and their family. She enjoys working visitations because she states that she has lost both parents and her only sibling, and it is a privilege for her to be there for others and to share her compassion with them. We consider it a privilege to have Becky on our team and know she will be great asset to the entire community for decades to come.

Iuka High School Students Help at Courthouse

by Charlotte McVay

In the late 1980's Iuka High School government students in the class of Mrs. Shelia Thorne took an active part in helping Mack Wadkins, Executive Director of the Tishomingo County Development Foundation renovate the old county courthouse where the director's office was located.

"Mack held a degree in education and he had a heart for our students and our school system," said Mrs. Thorne. "He worked diligently for the improvement of the Tishomingo County School District and the Iuka School District while he served in the House of Representatives in Jackson."

While helping to renovate the old Tishomingo County Courthouse, he gave Mrs. Thorne's students the opportunity to help reorganize the many court cases. They visited the Courthouse and sorted the cases, alphabetized them, and filed them in newly refurbished furniture pieces. Those students still tell their memories of what a fun project. Shelia said she would call on Representative Wadkins to visit her students each year during the Legislative session and give them the latest information on legislation, legislative issues, elections, and other state-wide issues. He would bring copies of the bills that were being considered on the floor of the house, and elicit their opinions on those bills. He also stated and explained his position on the issues. It helped the students to see government in action as well as have a voice in that action!!

When asked for a comment about Representative Wadkins, she added on a personal note: "He also had a heart for the people! He always grew a large garden and regularly carried fresh vegetables to her parents' home and left them on the door step, not even waiting for a thank you!"

My Memories: Mack Loyd Wadkins

by Charlotte McVay

Over the past two years many of Iuka's and Tishomingo County's most beloved and elderly people die during the Covid pandemic.

Most have died, not of the virus, but of what I used to call "old age."

I don't call it "old age" anymore as I am entering that golden age myself, and in my mind I think I am still 20, unfortunately my body knows I am not 20. The passing of these friends and the people who have played such an unforgettable part in my life have made me regret so many things. I wish I had asked more questions, shared more quality time with them, and told them I loved them more often.

Last week I heard that Mack Loyd Wadkins had passed away. He did not die of "old age" he was just 84, a young vital man who suffered a stroke several years ago. My first reaction was that I was mad at myself for not going to visit him, something I had been planning for some time. I made up excuses, as we all do, but then I thought after hearing of his death, Mack would want me to just smile and remember the gentle man who touched so many over the years with his quick humor and love for people.

He was a good man and a good friend to my family, so much so, that he spoke at my mother's funeral. His talk was so special and personal, bringing smiles to all attending. Nothing thrilled Mack Loyd more than pulling a prank on my mother, Daisy - he loved her and she loved him.

As an active member of the community during the economic explosion of the 1980's, Mack's picture showed up many times in The Vidette. I find them often in the old files; he and my dad (Iuka's Mayor John Biggs) seemed to be everywhere promoting our town and county. I personally think they did a great job representing our small part of this big world. If you met them, you found out real fast they were good ole country boys spreading the good hospitality of Mississippi. There was no pretention to them, lots of genuine love for their fellow men and a touch of humor just to liven up the situation. They didn't meet a stranger and they never forgot where they came from! But as all politicians find out, there comes a time to go home, the people say its time for a change, so these good ole boys go home and live long lives full of great memories and devoted friends and family.

I first got to know Mack as part of H & W Supermarket in Iuka. His father, Mr. Willard Wadkins, and brother-in-law Edgar Hannon operated the store.

H&W was the first Iuka grocery store to advertise in the newly started "Tishomingo County News". We never forgot

The Days After Pearl Harbor Remembered

Yes, I remember December 8, 1941. The student body and faculty of the Tishomingo High School were ordered by principal W.R. Nettles to go to the auditorium. It was an unusually quiet group of students. Those who didn't have radios at home were still unaware of the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Each group sat with their teachers. A radio was brought in and put on the table that was on the stage. Usually Mr. Nettles or Mr. Edwards prayed before our meeting, but today no time was lost. He said, "Our president of the United States has something to share with the citizens of America," and with that he turned the radio up. We listened. He told us "Yesterday for over an hour Japan bombed Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, and brought devastation to our fleet of ships."

Sweet Memories
Ruth Dawson

It hit the island at 7:55 a.m. Sunday morning on December 7, 1941, and the loss of lives was 2,343 sailors, army, and marines; and 1,272 wounded with 960 missing. All the buildup Japan was doing was not a secret anymore. The President told us that Congress had voted to give him power to declare war on Japan. (The vote of Congress was 100% minus one - She also voted against entering World War I).

As F.D. Roosevelt spoke to us it went to the entire world. This became a World War with all the major countries of the world involved. Really it had been going on a couple of years overseas.

After his speech we were dismissed to go back to class. I don't really remember any teaching and learning going on, on that Monday.

It wasn't too long before we had several families move to Oak Ridge, Tennessee to work in a defense plant. Our fleet had been bombed and many ships were beyond repair. Eight battle ships lay anchors and five were sunken in Pearl Harbor, three were finally refloated, and two still lie at the bottom of the ocean with the crew buried there. I remember hearing people tell of the knocking sound but nothing could be done. That has always been a nightmare for the American people but at the time we had nothing that could rescue the ships for the crew.

Over country came together and worked while praying for victory. It was a surprise attack. Our reporters and newsmen gave reports of several failures of our own leaders to take warning of what they knew Japan was doing. Mistakes were made in Washington as well as those in command where our fleet lay anchors.

Our churches were packed with “God fearing Christians.” They realized that our freedom was at stake and it literally was.

Small country churches had men standing outside listening through the open windows because there was a lack of seating inside.

We have been in other wars and as a Nation, seems to me the average citizen seems unconcerned today. I hope it doesn't take a surprise attack on America to wake us up. God has so blessed America and in my opinion, too many evils abound: Bible reading taken out of school and public meetings, The Ten Commandments removed from schools and public buildings because we don't want to offend anyone.

Let me share an experience I had when I taught at Graceland, Tennessee, Elvis Presley's stomping ground.

I got a letter mailed to the school, very formal, from Dr. Gainor who was president of a huge business in Memphis. I had one of his children in my fifth-grade classroom. The principal and her secretary brought the letter to me. I took it, standing outside my room and read it. The letter was complimenting my teaching Robert, but “I don't want him subjected to the Bible reading every morning.”

Miss Dean said “What are we going to do?”

We just looked at each other. I put my thinking cap on and remembered that I sent the attendance card to the office each morning. “I guess I can send Robert.” Relief abounded even though I know Robert was smart enough to know something wasn't right.

It wasn't a week until he came to my desk and said, “Mrs. Dawson, I need to talk to you.”

He said, “You got a letter from my dad, didn't you?” I felt so sorry for him, but I replied with “Yes Robert I did, but let's keep that a secret between us. I'd rather your classmates not know about.” I was afraid they would be unkind to Robert over a matter he had no control over.

I never had the first student ask me why I was giving this privilege to Robert every day. Robert hurried back and listened as Bible reading was done each morning. I did what Dr. Gainor wanted. All I could do was pray for this young man.

I experienced another incident with Robert. The Gideons came every year and gave the little blue New Testaments to all fifth graders. Mrs. Dorothy Dean, the principal, scared of a lawsuit, came into the classroom and I can quote what she said fifty-seven years ago.

“Listen up! The Gideons are here to give Bibles to those who want one, but if you don't want one... don't you take a Bible!” and out the door she went. Guess who got the first Bible? Robert.

the people who helped us make our newspaper a success and the Wadkins family was there from the beginning. They continued to advertise faithfully with us throughout the years. Mack Loyd and his brother Edgar Earl became owners of H & W, which later became Sunflower. Mack was also owner of Luka's first self service gas station. Mack's Self Service Station and Ran-Ron Car Wash, which was located just past the grocery store on old Highway 25 north in Iuka.

An ad which ran in 1968 in the TCN listed regular gas as 93 cents a gallon and premium $1 a gallon. The same paper gave prices at H&W as mayonnaise for 39 cents and coffee 49 cents a pound. Lots of changes in 54 years!

While looking through our first editions of The News in 1968, I ran across a photo on the front page of young Mack Loyd in a dunking booth, even before he got in politics!! He and his wife, Jeanette must have been early members of the Jaycee's in Iuka. What a fun couple they were!

Mack loved to write poetry, a talent he got from his mother, and he even made the paper when he and Mike Curtis wrote and produced “Choices” for country music star, George Jones. Now that was BIG news! Mack even wrote two children's books and that was BIG news for the hometown paper too!

We could go on and on about what Mack accomplished, but that is in the obituary. I just wanted to honor him as a good man, who always brought a smile to my face and laughter to my heart. Thanks for all the memories Mack!

Bassmaster Clean-Up Challenge Volunteers Haul in Nearly 4,500 Pounds of Trash at Pickwick Lake

COUNCE, Tenn. — Before the Semifinal Saturday at the Whataburger Bassmaster Elite at Pickwick Lake, 66 volunteers spread out along the shores and ramps near Pickwick Landing State Park to collect trash as part of the Lake Clean-Up Challenge sponsored by AFTCO and Yamaha Rightwaters™.

The volunteers, who represented organizations from across West Tennessee and North Alabama, gathered 4,476 pounds of garbage, including tires, scrap lumber and even a navigational buoy. Keep the Tennessee River Beautiful along with Aspell Recovery of Hardin County, Belgreen Bass Club, Mount Pleasant Junior Bass Club, the Pickwick ParrotHeads and the Savannah Moose Lodge worked alongside Bassmaster Elite Series pro Chad Pipkens during the Lake Clean-Up Challenge at Pickwick Lake.

Legendary angler and Tennessee native Bill Dance joined the group as they weighed in their haul of debris, pleading with every angler and boater to carry a trash bag with them on outings and pick up whatever trash they find, "Leaving it cleaner than you found it."

According to statistics from Keep the Tennessee River Beautiful, 80% of trash pulled from waterways originated on land, making clean-up efforts at ramps and parks adjacent to waterways even more critical for the long-term health of American fisheries.

"Our mission is to rally communities to keep the river beautiful for generations to come, and the most important part of the goal are the words 'future generations,'" said Kathleen Gibi, executive director of Keep the Tennessee River Beautiful, who was also part of a previous Lake Clean-up Challenge on Chickamauga Lake. "This is a physical example of what can happen when we come together, and we're grateful to AFTCO, Yamaha Rightwaters, B.A.S.S. and all of these people from the community for coming together to clean up the Tennessee River."

Participants received a gift package from AFTCO and Yamaha Rightwaters. Plus, registered volunteer organizations are eligible for conservation grants from AFTCO and Yamaha Rightwaters. The brands will select the conservation grants — totaling over $25,000 across the 2022 challenges — based on their participation in the Lake Clean-Up Challenges and the group's overall conservation or public service mission.

As the groups brought in trash, their haul was weighed on an industrial scale donated by the Tennessee Wildlife Resources Agency Fisheries Division.

The next Lake Clean-Up Challenge will be held July 9 in New York as part of the St. Croix Bassmaster Northern Open at Oneida Lake presented by Mossy Oak Fishing. The final event will be August 27 at the Guaranteed Rate Bassmaster Elite at Mississippi River in La Crosse, Wis.

In order to participate, volunteers and groups must preregister by contacting Gene Gilliland, B.A.S.S. Conservation Director, at ggilliland@bassmaster.com.

"Whether they're part of a junior

Bassmaster club, fishing team, church group, Scout troop or a group of civic-minded friends, anyone who wants our waters to be clean and free of trash is welcome to join us lakeside for these events," said Gilliland.

Great Way to Deal with Tons of Zucchini from your Garden

by Pamela McRae

This is one of our family's favorite recipes and its a welcome change from zucchini bread, fried zucchini, baked zucchini,...all the stuff you make with them during these few weeks each year.

Remember to be sure and let the shredded zucchini dry out a little and even squeeze it with the paper towel. Too much moisture is the enemy with cooking these.

We like these with some ranch dressing to dip them in, and we have also had them with some homemade aoli (mayonnaise) that was great, but I have never found the recipe again since I made it years ago.

Zucchini Cakes

- 1 whole large zucchini
  - 1 Tbs. minced garlic
  - 1/2 cup (to 3/4 cup) breadcrumbs
  - 1/2 cup 4-cheese Italian blend (or Parmesan or Romano)
  - 2 whole eggs
  - Kosher salt to taste
  - Freshly ground black pepper, to taste
  - Olive oil
- Wash and cut the end off of one large zucchini. Shred it using the large holes of a cheese grater. Squeeze the shredded zucchini inside of a clean towel until you've removed as much liquid as possible.

Place shredded zucchini into a medium sized bowl. Add minced garlic, breadcrumbs, cheese (shredded), eggs, kosher salt and pepper to taste. Stir with a fork until well mixed.

Heat olive oil (about 1/4 inch deep in bottom of skillet) to a medium heat. When the oil is hot enough drop a glob of zucchini batter into the skillet and flatten it a bit. After about two minutes, turn the cakes over (they should be nice golden-brown) and cook on the other side until done (about 2-3 minutes).

Our Staff will provide Personal Care for you and Your loved ones during your time of need.
