Lady Braves sweep Ripley in Division 4A Volleyball action

by Pamela McRae

TC swept division rival Ripley in three straight sets Tuesday night at home, improving their division record to 2-1.

"From the first set, you could see the improvement that this team showed last Thursday against Hickory Flat," said TC sports reporter Caleb Castile.

This was a huge win for them as they go on a road trip for two weeks. They play all four teams in their division (Corinth, New Albany, Ripley, North Pontotoc).

The next home game is September 27, against Corinth.

Fulton St. to Front St. - Downtown Iuka's latest renovations

by Pamela McRae

Two historic downtown Iuka buildings that have been under construction for the past year are ready for business!

Over the past summer, citizens and visitors have marveled at the many construction projects going on downtown, and we anticipate more announcements as projects progress, making our downtown a true destination and treasure.

127 Fulton Street

A contract has been signed for a new restaurant at 127 Fulton Street, according to owner Chris Cornelison. Having completed partial renovation of nearby 123 Fulton for his Solutions Rx business, he said he just couldn't bear to see the former Cafe Memories location remain empty.

"I've loved investing in my hometown, and seeing how everyone seems to have the same enthusiasm - all the downtown renovation - I'm glad to be a part of something bigger," said Cornelison. "Everyone has been so supportive and excited about the restaurant."

Over the past year, he and his team, including Adam White and Liz Cummings have opened up not only the bottom floor, but also the second floor of the building that dates from the late 1800s. They added restrooms upstairs, and created a top-quality professional kitchen.

As for the striking black and white paint on the front of the building, Chris said he wanted something upscale and white, with black trim, like a tuxedo. Liz Cummings determined what details would be accented in black, and with the gas flame lamps out front, the place is just amazing; fitting in with the traditional downtown, but standing out with class.

A group with local connections has signed a contract and Cornelison says they plan to be operational before the holiday season.

NMHS Covid treatment team delivered hope

Patrick tells of one instance when they gave 48 infusions of monoclonal antibodies at NMMC-Iuka in one day.

TUPELO -Throughout the COVID-19 pandemic, the Outpatient Infusion team worked behind the scenes but was key to keeping people out of the hospital and setting them on the road to recovery.

The Outpatient Infusion team was responsible for organizing and administering monoclonal antibody infusions throughout North Mississippi Health Services. The infusion reduces the illness in individuals at high risk for progressing to severe COVID-19 and hospitalization.

"As soon as we learned the monoclonal antibodies would be available for outpatient use, a multidisciplinary group from across the health system began work to provide the drugs to COVID-positive patients who met the criteria," says Patti Hawkins, system director of Ambulatory Pharmacy Services and 340B, which includes Outpatient Infusion. "Coordination and communication were critical. With support from the team, a dedicated infusion center in Tupelo was established within two weeks and ready for operation when the drug

Senior Day Care Club moves to Midway School

After years at the Lodge at Tishomingo State Park, Northeast Mississippi Community Services is pleased to announce the "adult day care" group will be meeting at the historic Midway School on Highway 364.

 NMHS gave its first dose of monoclonal antibodies to treat COVID-19 on Dec. 3, 2020. Since then, almost 10,500 doses have been given at NMHS hospitals in Tupelo, Amory, Eupora, Iuka, Pontotoc and West Point, Mississippi, and Hamilton, Alabama, as well as at the mobile testing site that was established near the Mall at Barnes Crossing in Tupelo.

This team worked long hours, including making and taking phone calls after hours from home. Through it all, they were focused on serving people and minimizing the effects of this deadly virus.

“Our local doctors felt strongly that we should provide this service locally to keep them from having to travel to Tupelo for the infusion,” says Kathy Patrick, chief nursing officer at NMMC-Iuka. “Being able to offer monoclonal antibodies at our local hospital was a big win for our community.”

The sites took a team approach—if one facility couldn’t accommodate a patient, they would ask other facilities if they could. “We were being bombarded with referrals, not just locally, but from everywhere,” Patrick says. “Every time we got a phone call or fax, I’d say ‘yes, go ahead and schedule them here.’ I could not stand to turn anyone away knowing we could give them something that could possibly save their life.”

Patrick tells about one instance when they gave 48 infusions of monoclonal antibodies at NMMC-Iuka in one day. “Every person in the hospital was involved to keep it moving,” she says. “Every treatment room was full, and while we would take a patient back to their car, Housekeeping was preparing the room for the next patient. Pharmacy and Admissions staff were amazing—the ER doctor even came around and helped us wheel patients back to their cars. I still get teary-eyed even thinking about it. This was the most incredible thing I have seen, and we did not turn away anyone that day!”

Where pets are family, too!

Our Pet of the Week this week is Luke Ogletree. His human mom is Christiana Ogletree. Luke was rescued when he was 4 years old and now he is 12 years old. Luke & his mom have grown up together over the last several years and are very close. Unfortunately with age Luke is now 90% blind in both eyes. He doesn’t let that stop him from living his absolute best life. He loves his baby brother dogs Diesel and Memphis. He enjoys following them around on daily adventures. One of his mom’s favorite things about him is the heart shaped spot on top of his head. It seems to be a sign of how loving he is. Luke spends his days laying under his shade tree and taking as many naps as he can. He gives his mom all of his love and is very happy.

If you have an older pet like Luke just remember they need extra special care in their geriatric years. Dr. Jim Perkins is available to examine them and make sure they are healthy and happy. Give your fur baby the best and call for an appointment today.

Farming in later years one of the sweetest memories

In the late 1900s, after I had retired from more than 40 years in the classroom, there seemed to be a few things that kindled some nostalgia for my early years as a farmer's daughter. After a few retirement years, Chester's health improved and we, just the two of us, got farming in our blood and we decided to make a go of it, much to the dismay of our family. "You don't need to do that!"

Sweet Memories

Ruth Dawson

"You aren't able!" or "You're too old!" We listened to no advice, and did as we had planned. I'd help Chester get up on the tractor, and we'd head for the Cypress Pond.

We owned a planter and corn picking machine, a wagon, and had a couple tractors lying around idle. We had anything we needed and we decided to put them to work. It was really fun!

We'd get up and head to the Cypress Pond, about 5 or 6 miles from our house. It was a large pond, with about 300 acres of farm land running parallel with the Alabama line with Bear Creek between the two.

We'd stop at the Country Store and plan our snacks and dinner and head east. We were confident that we could still work part of the farm and the rest lay fallow. We two were the only ones for really miles around. And there were many obstacles that we didn't anticipate. Beavers were doing a lot of damage to the bottom fields. They were building dams up and down the feeder ditches.

A big dam was built just a few feet from where it emptied into the canal. We had to cross the ditch and the water was backed up. We were in the 1986 Chevy pickup truck, but every morning, the dam had to be torn out and we would wait for the water to go down so we could cross. Chester would drive up to the ditch, and I would get out with boots on and tear away the new dam. When the water was low enough, we drove across for a full day of farming. The clever beavers would build it back every night. They probably took a nap while we were working!

By then, Chester was already disabled; he had diabetes and other problems and used a walking stick.

Did you know beavers build their homes with upstairs rooms, so they can retreat to the upper levels when the water rises? I didn't learn that at Cypress Pond, but teaching 7th and 8th grade science.

We'd park under the big trees in the center of the farm. Oil had to be checked and the plows greased. Chester would direct me and I'd do the getting-ready. Then I'd give him a big push to get into the seat, and here we'd go. He broke up the land with a gang plow, and I'd level it out and get it ready for planting with a disc. I filled the hoppers and off he would go with the planter.

I would sit on the tailgate of the pickup and crochet. If the tractor stopped, I'd get into the pickup and find out what the problem was. After addressing the problem, I'd head back to the shade and my crocheting.

I crocheted a full tablecloth that spring!

What a beautiful life we were having. Seeing progress made and just being together after all the past working years and raising a family. God had so blessed us and we were thankful.

Plagiarism: the Insincerest Form of Flattery

Ladies and gentlemen, I am a newspaper columnist, Southern politician and a lawyer which means there are few people in the world better at running their mouth. I have found my talent, like Brett Farve's text messages, can occasionally get me into trouble.

Town Cryings

Nate Clark

I was speaking with my dear mother last week when the conversation turned, as it does as often as I can twist it, to me.

I asked, "Dear Mother, what did you think of my column this week?"

"Oh, it was fine," she replied. Not fishing for simple light flattery, I began reeling my hook in.

"Did you like me using the turnip greens story?"

"Oh, yes, now that was good."

Okay, this was getting better, "Y'all passed along some great stories out at Pleasant Hill."

I expected her to respond with something about how much I added to the story/I'm the voice of a new Southern generation/time to crown me the modern-day Lewis Grizzard, etc.

That is not what I got. "Oh, that wasn't one of our stories," she said, "that was an old Jerry Clower joke."

She obviously didn't register the horror on my face.

"I did think it was your best column," Mom added, hammering home that my writing is at its best when I'm just transcribing other people's material.

Apparently, there was a cat story from my mom's childhood, but as is often the case, this true story was way weirder and dirtier than any fiction. Please bear in mind I am typing this story 11 hours AFTER my deadline, with no time to call and check with my mother if this story was actually told at family reunions or was on an episode of Hee Haw or something.

Once upon a time in beautiful, crime-free Iuka there was an old man. This man was a fixture in town. Most folks living could not remember a time when he was not seen around town in his fedora hat like men of his generation wore. Until one day - no old man. Days, weeks, a month went past and no one saw him. Just as people really began getting concerned the gentleman might have gotten caught in some old lady's house in a A Rose for Emily type situation, he reappeared. Gaunt and pale, he approached the other old men on the whittling bench.

"Lord, where have you been?" they said.

"Just about dead. Some days, death would have been a relief," he replied.

The men asked, "What happened?"

The old man mustered his strength, "Every morning I got dressed, put on my hat, walked outside my door and ... threw up. Every morning for a month I did the same things I've done for 70 years then I'd puke my guts out not 10 feet out my front door."

I was speaking with my dear mother last week when the conversation turned, as it does as often as I can twist it, to me.

I asked, "Dear Mother, what did you think of my column this week?"

The men were concerned, "What did the doctor say?"

The man shook his head, "I was too sick to get past my front yard. Finally, after 30 days, I puked again and just decided I was going to die that day. I walked back in the house, dropped my hat on the table like always and laid down on the couch instead of going to my bedroom like I'd been doing. Figured I'd make it easier on Cutshalls. And that's when I saw my wife's cat she got about a month ago walk up to my hat, climb over it, and proceed to go number two all in it!"

The gathered old men roared, "You'd been wearing cat mess for a month? I'd have shot that cat!"

The old man snorted, "I shot every cat on Pleasant Hill Road."

The moral of the story here folks: be careful what knowledge you seek. You might not like the answers you get.

Film explains well possible ends of early American explorer

by Kirby McRae

I've always been interested in the ultimate frontier story of Lewis and Clark, the leaders of the expedition U.S. President Thomas Jefferson sent to explore the new country of America. One of my favorite reads is their story, "Undaunted Courage, The Pioneering First Mission to Explore America's Wild Frontier," by Stephen E. Ambrose. I would rate it as one of the best historical novels I have read, enjoyed so much so that I read it twice!

Since reading the novel my lovely bride and I have often stopped by Grinder's Stand on the Natchez Trace to visit Meriwether Lewis' grave. We don't think about it here in 2022, but the Lewis and Clark expedition to the Pacific in 1804-06 was just as dangerous and unknown as the first manned mission to the Moon, maybe even more so. Meriwether Lewis returned to a grateful nation as a hero, much like Neil Armstrong did as he returned from the moon 163 years later, but he soon was reportedly suffering from depression, anxiety, and alcoholism. Some scholars have noted that he returned from the monumental trip unable to adjust to sedentary life.

In 1809 Lewis' reportedly committed suicide at Grinders Stand while returning to Washington to attempt to resolve unpaid drafts, which if left unpaid would potentially result in ruinous debt. Time has revealed his death may not have been by suicide, but could have been other more sinister causes.

Enter Clark Richey, the writer and director of the just released film "Mysterious Circumstance - the Death of Meriwether Lewis." I had the pleasure of seeing the film at the Corinth Coliseum last Saturday night and enjoyed it immensely. Filmed on location at the Butler Cabin near Bay Springs Dam and at Tishomingo State Park, the movie presents four different endings to the life of Meriwether Lewis, each of which is a believable representation of what may have actually happened. Richey's film is excellently presented, easily moving from one potential cause of death to another until at the end you realize it is really a mysterious circumstance. All of the actors were excellent, especially Tishomingo County's own Rider Mayo and Keandre Wicks. The pace of the movie is certainly a bit slow in today's world, but at the same time, does in a way move you back to a slower place in time. On a side note, watching a movie about the death of Meriwether Lewis in a coliseum constructed in 1924 and surrounded by the history of Corinth really sort of moves you back in time.

The film has won awards at the Gasparilla International Film Festival, Los Angeles Film Awards, Montreal Independent Film Festival, Oniros Film Awards, and other organizations.

The film has been extended to one more showing at the Corinth Coliseum on Thursday, September 15 at 7 p.m.. I highly recommend you go see this movie!

Online reports indicate the movie will be coming to video on demand and digital platforms on October 28th.

Looking for a Few Good Men

The Helpful Samaritan Food Pantry is looking for a few good men. In fact, four, but we will be happy to take more.

The Helpful Samaritan Food Pantry has been a staple in Tishomingo County for over 25 years. Each Monday (11:00 – 12:30) and Thursday (4:00 – 5:30) volunteers help those who need food. In the month of August HSFP provided 2673 meals.

We could not do this mission of need without the support we receive from the community of Tishomingo County.

Each week volunteers receive deliveries, fill boxes, check in clients, and carry the boxes to the vehicles. We also have fun, laugh, and enjoy being helpful.

As the old saying goes, it is better to give than to receive.

We are now on a campaign to recruit more volunteers. We ask our volunteers to work one day a month. Currently, we need help to carry out food boxes to the clients. So, guys, this is a time for you to shine. The boxes weigh about thirty pounds. This would be a great outlet for students who need some volunteer hours, retirees who have a little extra time on their hands, and those who are looking for an opportunity to help our community.

Please send an email to: hsfoodpantrya00158@gmail.com or you may leave a message on the pantry Facebook page.

We will be able to answer any questions you may have.

Our family serving your family, across the generations.

Choosing a funeral home is something many of us avoid until the need arises because it touches on a subject with which we're not entirely comfortable. Becoming better informed now will make decision-making easier when the time comes.

Is the funeral home you are considering fully licensed for both at-need arrangements and also pre-arrangements?

Does it have a good long-term standing in the community?

Does the funeral home you are considering have a firm sense of traditional values as well as extensive knowledge of modern and future trends?

And most of all, does the funeral home you are considering have the people, facilities, and training to serve your needs at a cost that is at or below their competitors?

We invite you to stop by Cutshall Funeral Home and ask us these questions. There is a reason why 87 years later it is still...

Downtown Music Festival postponed until Spring

The Downtown Music Festival Event that was cancelled in anticipation of inclement weather the night of Heritage Day has been postponed until spring, organizers have announced.

Initially postponed until September 17th, organizers have moved it to spring to avoid conflicts, and to give committee members a break.

Those who purchased the $35 tickets in advance can get a refund by contacting the Iuka Heritage Committee member who sold them before October 1st. Any monies not refunded will go toward paying the expenses of the 2022 festival, or be saved to fund future events.

Heritage Day takes tens of thousands of dollars to produce, and committee members work hard on fundraisers through the year, but were counting on the music event to bring in a similar amount as the Food Truck Festival in June. That brought in nearly $8,000 for Boys and Girls Club of Iuka, and was a very enjoyable evening of good food, great music and fellowship in Jaybird Park.

Volunteers are welcome to help plan and operate next year's Heritage Day.

They are hoping for an even bigger and better event than the outstanding 2022 event.

Above, the Food Truck Festival downtown in June attracted lots of local folks willing to donate to the Iuka Boys and Girls Club in a first-of-its-kind fundraiser event. For their donation of $50, they got food samples from local food trucks, three drinks of their choice, great music and fellowship. Many more people wanted a ticket to the limited attendance event.

Family seeks information about the ladies that took a stand against TVA

by Pamela McRae

Back in 1974 TVA wanted to build a nuclear plant on the Tennessee River. The government bought up much of the adjoining land to establish a "buffer zone," as a safety measure. Many old homes were purchased, and families moved elsewhere, but a few ladies at Hubbard Salem Church, near the TVA site, objected to the church and cemetery being sold. They fought the government, and they eventually won - Hubbard Salem Church sits on County Road 989 just as it has for generations. According to the Tishomingo County cemetery book, some graves are from the 1800s.

Now, descendants of a Hubbard Salem church member are trying to learn more about these ladies willing to act on their convictions. Green Finley Hubbard donated land for the church and his descendants, Glenda, Wheeler and Steve Hubbard are asking if anyone has information about this incident. They would like to memorialize the event at the church, and have an exhibit at the Old Courthouse Museum.

They know the ladies have all passed, and they include Bernice Grissom, Betty Ruth Hardwick, Willow Bugg and Lois Bugg. They are seeking information, and maybe some photos of the ladies, and it would be amazing to hear from family members who may know about this.

Call the paper at 662-423-2211, or email us at contact@tishco.news, or contact the family directly: 619-420-5612 or email: visionsoffrance@cox.net.

We look forward to learning more about this event.

company renovating two hotels in Iuka. Roof damage from the 2021 tornado was the final stroke for the circa 1880s building that had long been in need of repair, so the building was completely gutted, a new roof replaced five layers of old roofing, and the front got a new layer of classic red brick. Along the side and back, new windows allow light into office space for 6-8 people. A new sign is scheduled for delivery at the end of the month, and a mural is being designed for the side of the building.

The renovations, completed with

In addition to all the construction of the Front Street office, the Vidette has been building their website and changing their business model.

TC XC not letting mud slow them down

Fall sports are still going strong on the campus of Tishomingo County High. Football, Volleyball, and Cross Country all saw action this week. Let's take a look at how they performed.

Cross country Braves fight through the mud

On Saturday, September 10, the XC Braves had a meet on the Hickory Flat Cross Country Course. Rain all weekend caused the trail to be muddy, and it was a hindrance to all who participated. The Braves showed toughness, though, as they competed to the best of their abilities against the best that North Mississippi has to offer. Congrats to Tyson Anglin on another top 20 finish. Also, congrats to Haley Richardson-Nebo and Destini Simmons on a Top 25 finish. The Braves' next meet will be this Saturday, September 17, hosted by Saltillo High School.

Volleyball gets some momentum for division play

The Lady Braves Volleyball Team had two games this week, both at home. On Tuesday, September 6, they faced division opponent New Albany. This was a tough outing for them, as they lost the game 3-0. This dropped them to 1-1 in division play. However, on Thursday the Lady Braves hosted a very good Hickory Flat team. One of the better teams in the state, the Rebels brought a very good fight to TC. But, through all the struggles and hardships that the game threw at them, the Lady Braves managed to get a much needed 3-2 win. Then on Saturday September 10, they took part in the Belmont Tournament. They went 2-2 on the day and got some good reps in against tough opponents. The Lady Braves will take on two division opponents this week, on Tuesday against Ripley at home and on Thursday at Corinth. If you would like to watch the home games from the comfort of your home or wherever you are, make sure to go to <https://tchs.tcsd.live/> to tune in to the action sponsored by Sparks CPA Firm.

Football looks ahead

Last Friday the Braves football team was unable to capitalize on the momentum built up by the Belmont game when they traveled to take on the Baldwyn Bearcats. Baldwyn is a very good team, and they played very well against TC. The final score was 54-12, in favor of the Bearcats. Despite some struggles, the Braves seemed to find a couple of things that worked for them during the game. Highlight performance of the week had to go to Landon Hemphill. He made 2 TD grabs, one was a very impressive catch over a defender in the endzone. The other was a long pitch and catch as time expired in the game. The Braves look forward to next week where they will take on the Kossuth Aggies on the road. Kossuth and TC are very familiar with each other, and it would mean a lot to this team and this school if the Braves could go into Kossuth and come out with a win.

Tyson Anglin

TCHS Sports Caleb Castile

Senior Spotlight: Tag Hart

This week senior Tag Hart said the team and the cross country community are what keep him going.

"When I am running, the competition between us on the team helps to push me to be a better runner. The community itself provides a large portion of my motivation." The community is a great reason to keep motivated! I know from personal experience that you always perform better when you have people supporting you all the way to the end! I then asked him how he keeps a positive and healthy mindset when running! It is very

Tishomingo Cotton Gin, c. early 1900s

Thanks to Ms. Anne Taylor of Tishomingo for this historic image of the cotton gin in downtown Tishomingo in the early 1900s.

This is the gin that stood where the Tishomingo community center is now. Cotton and lumber were major industries at the time, and you can see one of the big lumber mills in the background on the left of the picture.

Clearly a good mule was a key asset, as well as a good cotton wagon!

A salute to first responders

Dear Editor,

On some anniversaries we celebrate. On others, we reflect.

The 21st anniversary of the attack on America and New York's World Trade Center is one of the times for reflection. There is truly nothing to celebrate in the extraordinary tragedy of 9/11.

As much as I would like to forget some of them, the images from that day will never be out of my mind, nor will the victims and their families.

But there is one memory I want to hold on to, one that I want to cherish as the deepest and most lasting of September 11, 2001. It is the memory of the heroism and selflessness demonstrated by law enforcement officers, firefighters, and emergency medical technicians who went about their business that day without concern for their own safety and without consideration for the magnitude of what they were confronting.

I suppose the term 'first responders' was around before 9/11 but I can't remember ever hearing or using it before then. It caught on with me because it succinctly and accurately captures not only what these public servants do, but it says something about who they are.

They are people willing to respond without question or hesitation when our community needs them. Men and women are willing to make someone else's emergency or crisis their own and to put their lives on the line doing it.

If that doesn't deserve our respect, nothing does.

Most of us have always had an appreciation for first responders whether we called them that or not. At one time or another, what little boy or little girl didn't want to grow up to be a police officer or a firefighter? As time passes and most of us go on to do other things with our lives, we tend not only to outgrow our hero worship but also to start taking things for granted. Then some tragedy happens and our attention is drawn to them again.

I'm not sure where the tradition of delivering a dessert to first responders on the anniversary of 9/11 started in our company, but I'm glad it did. It started out of someone's caring and appreciative heart aid spread from employee to employee and location to location until stores all over Kentucky and Tennessee were involved.

No one ever imagined that taking a meal to first responders as a way of showing our appreciation would turn out to mean so much to the people in our company. As more and more people and locations became involved, a simple gesture became an annual Salute to First Responders.

The way we show our appreciation differs from community to community and location to location, but everyone involved knows they have the support and encouragement of our company.

We value the opportunity to show their appreciation to First Responders. One of our goals is to encourage others in the community to be involved as well.

Using the 9/11 anniversary as an opportunity to refresh and rekindle our feelings for first responders is a good thing. It's a simple but meaningful way to say, "Thank you First Responders. We salute you."
